MORE QUAKES DUE; DEATH TOLL IS 130

RELIEF EFFORTS ARE MOBILIZED; LOSS $35,000,000

Rescue Crews Continue Bodies' Hunt; 31st Shock Is Felt at 10.18 P. M.; Gov. Rolph Arrives on Scene.

Cots and Blankets Ordered Sent to Long Beach From Los Angeles and Milk Is Donated; R. F. C. Funds May Be Turned Over.

Los Angeles, March 11 A.P.).—As earthquakes continued with diminishing intensity today, southern California plunged into relief work amid the ruins left by yesterday's devastating upheaval that took about 130 lives, injured close to 5,000 persons and did property damage estimated unofficially at upward of $35,000,000.

Cracked and broken walls teetered anew as rescue parties searched the debris for additional bodies. The thirty-first big shock of the series, a severe north and south movement, struck Los Angeles at 10.18 o'clock tonight.

Scientists who have made a study of earthquakes said the tremors might continue for days and undoubtedly would fade gradually. As in most quakes it was the terrific initial shock at 5:55 p. m. yesterday that tumbled buildings and caused the heavy loss of life and injuries.

Relief Efforts Are Consolidated.

Relief efforts were being consolidated by city, State, Red Cross and Army and Navy officials, and steps were being taken toward clearing away the ruins preparatory to laying plans for rebuilding.

Frequent changes in reports from the stricken communities, revealing duplications in reports of deaths by nearby towns, lowered the total from 140 to 127, while further changes were expected. There was no means by which the actual number of reported dead could be ascertained for the area, except by the growing partial list of identified dead. The task of caring for the injured and those needing relief, found the work of maintaining an official list of dead shoved to one side in most of the communities.

At Long Beach, which bore the brunt of the violence, 70 were listed as dead and the search for bodies was proceeding. The property damage in Long Beach was estimated at $15,000,000 by D. W. Pontius, a member of Gov. Rolhp's emergency relief committee.

Compton reported 17 dead, 20 injured and damage estimated by police and fire authorities at $12,000,000 to $15,000,000. Officers said 10 per cent of the population of 12,800 was under the care of the Red Cross and 99 per cent of the town's business property was in ruins.

Many Abandon Homes.

The preservation of order took on a military tint as marines and American Legionnaires joined forces with police. Many persons abandoned their homes.

Huntington Park reported 16 dead. The other casualties were scattered among a half dozen or more Los Angeles suburbs.

Three fairly distinct quakes were felt around noon today, bringing the

LONG BEACH CAMPS AS SHOCKS PERSIST

More Than 20 Temblors Felt Yesterday; Relief Dictator Named.

Long Beach, Calif., March 11 (A.P.). A terrorized populace camped in the city's open spaces as countless earthquakes continued with sufficient violence to shake down debris from partially destroyed buildings tonight.

Another sharp temblor was felt here at 9:50 tonight after several hours of quietude.

More than a score of earth shocks were recorded during the afternoon and evening and there were no signs of an immediate let-up.

Streets were virtually deserted in the downtown area shortly after 6 p. m. Only a speeding police car, ambulance or fire truck with sirens shrieking gave sign of life.

Residents, who have already counted a death toll of 70 and an injured list of 2,500, some of whom are perhaps in serious condition, camped in vacant lots. Only a few of the more bold ventured into their homes.

The city was dotted with big bonfires around which the grief-stricken and awed populace gathered. Cots were put up on lawns in many cases.

Senate Russian Probe Urged in King Proposal

(Associated Press.)

A resolution authorizing an investigation by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of conditions relating to the recognition of Russia was introduced yesterday by Senator King (Democrat), Utah.

King proposed that the committee should investigate political, economic and other conditions in Russia and "the position of the Soviet government with respect to recognition by the United States." He contended a complete inquiry should be made before this country changes its policy toward the Soviet regime.

Geneva, March 11 (A.P.).—A dark picture of the disarmament situation was painted for Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain today by the chiefs of the principal delegations and by officials of the arms conference.

With Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, Mr. MacDonald received in turn Arthur Henderson, of Great Britain, president of the conference; Edouard Benes, of Czechoslovakia; Hugh Gibson, of the United States; Baron Pompeo Aloisi, of Italy, and Count Rudolf Nadolny, of Germany.

The conversations will continue next week in the hope of finding a solution for the deadlock in which the conference finds itself. It was to break this deadlock that Mr. MacDonald and his foreign secretary came to Geneva after they had been informed by the British representatives here that the parley was entering upon a crucial period, which would determine whether any concrete arms reduction could be effected.

Youth Saves Many In Quake and Dies

Hero Throws His Switch at First Shock and Is Crushed to Death.

Los Angeles, March 11 (A.P.).—When death and disaster struck Southern California many were given a chance to be heroes.

The story of Forrest Brinkerhoff, young switchboard operator at the Dominguez substation of the Pacific Electric Railway, is just one of many.

When the first shock came, he stood at his post to throw the switch that would save the lives of many at the cost of his own life. Searchers early today found his body in the ruins of the building, crushed by huge pieces of masonry.

Larsen, Explorer, Saved Off Antarctic Ice Floe

Oslo, Norway, March 11 (A.P.).—Capt. Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen, who started an expedition to the Antarctic in January, was rescued from the ice by a Norwegian whaler after losing all the expedition's equipment and 80 sledge dogs in a violent storm, a telegram received by his relatives here disclosed today.

The party was exploring in the vicinity of Princess Ragnhild Land, which Larsen discovered in 1930, but the storm drove them from the shore and the explorers were drifting to sea on an ice floe when the whaler saved them.

HOWELL SUCCUMBS TO HEART SEIZURE

Nebraskan Was Serving His Second Term in Senate; Was Republican.

Senator Robert B. Howell, Nebraska Republican, died yesterday afternoon at Walter Reed Hospital, where he had been ill for several weeks. Heart attack was the immediate cause of the death of the Nebraska senator, who was 69 years old.

Entering the hospital with a cold and general weakness derived from heavy work in connection with the Broussard-Overton senatorial contest in Louisiana, Senator Howell developed pneumonia. Despite complications, it was at first thought he would recover, but several days ago his condition took a turn for the worse.

Senator Howell was serving his second term in the Senate, having been reelected in 1928. He came to the Senate in 1922 after defeating Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Democrat.

Born in Adrian, Mich., January 21, 1864, Senator Howell was the son of Andrew Howell, jurist-author. He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1885 and served as a lieutenant in the Spanish-American War.

Glass-Long Row Flares Up; Physical Encounter Avoided

(United Press.)

Bitter feeling between Senator Carter Glass and Senator Huey P. Long blazed openly yesterday and all but led to physical encounter on the Senate floor.

The peppery, 74-year-old Virginian bitterly protested the manner in which Long has been discussing the banking crisis.

Senate Majority Leader Robinson ended the exchange before it got beyond the stage of waggling fingers and scathing language. The "Kingfish" was in the midst of his reply to Glass when Robinson persuaded the Virginian to leave the Senate floor.

The incident occurred a few moments after adjournment of a session in which Long repeatedly assailed Glass as one of those directly responsible for the banking crisis. Long insisted that State banks be given Federal Reserve protection along with banks which are members of the system. Glass objected.

A few minutes after the encounter Glass still was angry and darted into the Senate chamber again.

"Right or wrong, Huey has a pretty popular proposition on the State bank matter," someone remarked to Glass.

"Oh, popular! popular!" he exploded. "What do you want to do—run the banks by mass meeting?

"Suppose they don't have the money to put up for the capital stock which members must buy?" he was asked.

"Well, what do you want the President to do, put it up for them?" he demanded, and hurried away.

HOUSE PASSES ECONOMY BILL BY 266 TO 138

Act Gives to President Power to Cut Veteran Benefits and Pay.

HARD SENATE FIGHT FACED BY MEASURE

Harrison Will Strive to Get Early Consideration of Drastic Legislation.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

The House yesterday voted, 266 to 138, to give President Roosevelt all of the power he wants to cut veterans' benefits and adjust Federal salaries on a living cost basis.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where Finance Chairman Pat Harrison will offer a motion to call it up the first thing tomorrow. It faces a bitter floor battle.

The Senate Finance Committee ordered a report on the measure early yesterday, following brief hearings at which representatives of veterans and labor organizations appeared against the authorization.

The favorable House vote came after two hours of limited debate, with Republican and Democratic leaders uniting in support of the drastic grant of power.

Passes in Original Form.

Passage of the measure was in the face of flat refusal of Democrats to bind themselves at a caucus preceding yesterday's House session. The caucus declined to pledge its support of the measure by a vote of 174 to 108.

The small party revolt that developed early in the Democratic caucus was transferred to the floor of the House, where 92 Democrats voted with 41 Republicans and 5 Farmer-Laborites against the authorization. Seventy Republicans voted with 196 Democrats for it.

As approved, the economy bill is in its original form. An amendment, limiting cuts in veterans' benefits to 25 per cent was supported 158 to 112 in the caucus, then squeezed out by a parliamentary maneuver on the floor.

On motion of House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns, a two-hour limit was placed on House debate. The Byrns resolution was adopted by viva-voce vote. It automatically excluded all amendments.

Browning Would Limit Cuts.

Representative Gordon Browning (Democrat), Tennessee, however, ob-

J. J. Davis Rallies From Appendicitis

Condition of Senator, Who Also Has Diabetes, Is Satisfactory.

Pittsburgh, March 11 (A.P.).—The condition of United States Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, who underwent an operation for appendicitis, was described as "satisfactory" tonight by his physician, Dr. J. W. Shirer. Dr. Shirer said Davis also is suffering from diabetes.

"If we can control the diabetes everything will be all right," Dr. Shirer declared. Davis was stricken in an airplane yesterday as he sped from Washington to Pittsburgh on business. Dr. Shirer performed the operation early today.

Davis was to have gone on trial in New York Monday on Federal lottery charges. Louis Mead Treadwell, Assistant United States attorney, said in New York the Government will insist that the trial proceed as soon as Davis recovers. Charles J. Margiotti, Davis' counsel, stated the defense also is anxious to get the trial over.

THOSE IN RESERVE CITIES TO RESUME TASKS TOMORROW

Institutions in Clearing House Centers, Including Washington, to Take Up Activities Tuesday.

PRESIDENT ON RADIO TONIGHT TO EXPLAIN HOLIDAY RESULTS

Treasury Announces March 15 Financing of $800,000,000 at Record Rate of Interest in Peace Time.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

President Roosevelt announced last night that State and national banks would be authorized to resume operations progressively beginning tomorrow morning.

A formal White House announcement covering all institutions subject to the President's emergency control, said that banks in the twelve Federal Reserve cities would be licensed to reopen tomorrow.

Banks in the 250 cities having clearing house associations will be permitted to resume Tuesday morning. Washington is in this group.

"Country Banks" Last to Reopen.

Banks located elsewhere, or that group generally classified as the "country banks," will resume Wednesday morning.

Almost simultaneously with the White House announcement, the Treasury made public the terms of its March 15 financing, which is to care for $695,000,000 in short term maturities. To handle these maturities and provide additional funds for the daily Treasury deficit for another month, the Government is offering $800,000,000 in short-term certificates.

Highest Peace-Time Interest Fixed.

The new issues will go at 4 and 4½ per cent interest, the highest peace-time rate on record for United States Government obligations maturing in less than one year.

The new certificates are payable in gold, as regards both principal and interest.

The last offering of Treasury certificates, in December, 1932, moved at three-quarters of 1 per cent interest.

The President's personal announcement of the resumption program shed no light on whether all banks in the three location categories would be authorized to resume, or only such selected banks as might be declared sound by the Treasury. If a selective process of openings has been decided upon, no hint was given as to the formula to be used in the selection.

Neither did the statement say whether the openings beginning tomorrow would be on an unrestricted basis as regards deposits and withdrawals, or limited to the terms of the eighteen Treasury regulations promulgated last week under the emergency proclamations of March 6 and March 9.

Roosevelt on Air Tonight.

To clear up some of these confusions, President Roosevelt announced he would address the country directly at 10 o'clock tonight over Nation-wide radio chains, "to explain clearly and in simple language" what has been accomplished during the holiday.

The statement also repeated the President's warning of Friday night, that no one is justified in misgivings concerning banks which do not open Monday.

ROOSEVELT TACTICS ASSAILED BY RITCHIE

Says Federal Currency Will Benefit National Banks to Exclusion of State.

Baltimore, March 11 (A.P.).—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland tonight attacked President Roosevelt's method of meeting the bank crisis, asserting that "there is neither the right nor the necessity to sacrifice or put in jeopardy" the nonreserve State banks.

He said he felt it his duty to call attention to the effect which the law enacted Thursday (the emergency bank bill) as interpreted officially is almost certain to have upon the State banks."

"The new Federal currency provided by the Federal law is solely for the benefit of the national banks and the Federal Reserve member banks," the Maryland Governor said. "The State banks are even excluded from applying to the Federal Reserve Banks direct for the use of new currency, except for 90-day loans on Government bonds, which privilege applies to all corporations and individuals.

"How is it going to be possible under these circumstances for the State banks to survive this handicap and this discrimination? * * * It will be difficult for them to survive the great Federal aid allotted among their competitors."

He said he is not opposing this aid to the national and reserve member banks, but that is just as essential for the State banks to obtain the same aid.

"I can not believe," the governor said, "that an administration whose brains and heart have conceived this relief for the depositors in our national and reserve member banks will not extend it to the depositors of the State banks, too. * * * There is neither the right nor the necessity to sacrifice or put in jeopardy these established depositories of the people's money. There is neither the right nor the necessity to imperil the savings and the resources of these millions of depositors."

Escaped Lunatic Leaps Upon Lebrun's Car Step

Lyons, France, March 11 (U.P.).—A man broke through police lines today and leaped upon the running board of President Albert Lebrun's automobile. Former Premier Edouard Herriot also was in the car.

Police overpowered the man, who said he was Irenee Boulesteix, escaped from the Charenton Lunatic Asylum last December. He said he wanted "two words" with the president. He was not armed.

SOUND D. C. BANKS TO REOPEN TUESDAY

Clamp Stays on Withdrawal of Gold and Moneys to Be Hoarded.

The banks of Washington which are basically sound will be open on Tuesday to perform all usual banking functions, under the terms of the Executive order issued last night at the White House, designed to accomplish the progressive reopening of the Nation's financial institutions.

Bankers understand that only such banks will be licensed to open as are reported by the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond to Comptroller of Currency F. G. Awalt to be in sound condition. Upon such recommendation the Secretary of the Treasury will determine what banking institutions shall resume operation.

Even those banks which are found to be 100 per cent sound must observe the following restrictions: (1.) That no depositors shall be allowed to withdraw gold coins or gold certificates in any manner or for any purpose whatsoever; (2.) that no depositors shall be allowed to withdraw any kind of currency when it is apparent that such withdrawals are for the purpose of hoarding or not for ordinary business transactions.

Just when the list of banks which shall be licensed to resume business will be made public is unknown. The terms of the executive order would make it appear that this list will be ready some time tomorrow; but local financial leaders were hoping that the names would be made known today.

The effect of the new order is that it lifts the drastic banking holiday proclaimed a week ago by President Roosevelt. Nevertheless, a complete embargo is maintained on gold transactions. The purpose of the executive order is to restore to the United States Treasury the maximum of gold coin and bullion so as to maintain the soundness of the reserve supporting this country's money.

The secondary design of the administration is to prevent hoarding of any kind of currency. Such practice takes from the channels of commerce the money which should be allowed freely to circulate. Storing away of large sums of currency from the ordinary streams of commerce tends to throttle business and to prevent restoration of economic normalcy.

In the executive order issued by President Roosevelt Friday after Congress had placed in his hands unprecedented power over the banks, the Chief Executive stated that not only would the gold embargo be continued but also no banks would have authority to allow withdrawals by depositors who manifestly desired the funds for hoarding purposes.

SENATOR HOWELL DIES IN HOSPITAL; WAS 69

Howell studied law at the Detroit School of Law. Then he went into real estate business in Oklahoma and later served as State engineer of Nebraska, State senator and water commissioner of Omaha.

From 1912 to 1920 Senator Howell was Republican national committeeman from Nebraska and a member of the executive committee from 1916 to 1924. Just prior to entering the Senate he was chairman of the National Radio Service Commission of the Postoffice and Agriculture Departments.

The dead Nebraska senator had an exceedingly appropriate ancestral background for a career in the national politics of the United States. On his mother's side he was related to Henry Ward Beecher, famous divine, and Harriet Beecher Stowe, writer. His middle name was Beecher. On the paternal side Senator Howell was connected with Admiral Howell and Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution.

A stanch advocate of prohibition, Senator Howell once urged President Hoover to take stern measures to dry up the District. At that time he declared that the Chief Executive could call the Commissioners on the carpet and threaten to dismiss them if they failed to see the law was enforced.

The Senate yesterday adjourned shortly after hearing of the death of Senator Howell. Many expressions of sorrow were heard throughout the Capitol at his passing.

On the floor of the Senate, Senator Norris, senior Republican senator from Nebraska, said, "that in many respects he stood as high as any member of the Senate."

"He was conscientious," said Senator Norris, "and had the courage of his convictions, and was one of the most useful men in the Senate."

Surviving Senator Howell are his widow, the former Mrs. Alice Chase Cullingham, of Omaha, and a stepson, J. S. Cullingham.

Mr. Cullingham took charge of funeral arrangements. Plans were made to have the body entrained for Omaha some time this morning. Tentatively it was indicated that funeral arrangements will be held at the late senator's Omaha home in that city on Tuesday, with burial there.

A committee of 15 senators was appointed by Vice President Garner to attend the Howell funeral. It is composed of Senators Norris (Republican), Nebraska; Dickinson (Republican), Iowa; Nye (Republican), North Dakota; Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan; Robinson (Republican), Indiana; Johnson (Republican), California; Murphy (Democrat), Iowa; King (Democrat), Utah; Bulow (Democrat), South Dakota; Pittman (Democrat), Nevada; Trammell (Democrat), Florida; Kean (Republican), New Jersey; Carey (Republican), Wyoming; La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, and Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota.

Bratton Due to Succeed Howell in Funds Post

(Associated Press.)

Senator Sam G. Bratton (Democrat), New Mexico, probably will succeed the late Senator Howell, (Republican), Nebraska, as chairman of the Senate's Special Campaign Funds Committee, which expects to continue its work.

Bratton is the ranking Democrat on the committee, which will be headed by a Democrat now that this party has taken over control of the Government. Another Democrat probably will be appointed to fill the vacancy, while Senators Carey (Republican), Wyoming, and Townsend (Republican), Delaware, will remain as the two minority members.

No action is expected for some days, however, nor will the committee attempt to function soon.

New Secretary of Senate Started as Obliging Page

Col. Halsey Wins Esteem Through Unfailing Friendliness.

By BERNARD McDONNELL.

A lovable little kid, who came to Washington years ago to be a quick, energetic Senate page, today sits in his private offices in the Capitol and has an official automobile and chauffeur at his command and the privilege of writing his name in the upper right-hand corner of an envelope and having that signature accepted as enough to send a letter wherever he directs it.

The lovable little kid was Eddie Halsey, who came to the Capital in 1897 under the protecting wing of his uncle, Senator John W. Daniel, of Virginia.

Today he is Col. Edwin A. Halsey, popular and respected secretary of the United States Senate. He was chosen secretary by the Senate as the nominee of the Democrats without opposition in the party caucus and without opposition in the Senate.

Popular because of his unfailing courtesy and respected because of his wide knowledge of Senate and national history, Mr. Halsey is one of the most unassuming men in public life in Washington.

Lynchburg can claim the honor of being the place where the new secretary of the Senate was born. From the time he came to the Capitol as a page Mr. Halsey began forging ahead. He is one of several who have made the Capitol a career. His name seldom has been mentioned, compared with the wide publicity of members of the House and Senate, but for several years he has been recognized as one of the mainstays of the Senate machinery.

His title of colonel is derived from Virginia. Two governors have named the handsome, dark-haired gentleman from Virginia as a member of their staffs and it is significant that although he has not sought recognition of the title it has stuck to him and senators have insisted on using his title.

In the course of his years of service he has been assistant superintendent of the Senate press gallery, where he made enduring friendships through his unfailing helpfulness to scores of newspaper reporters who weren't certain about the mechanics of the Senate and the short cuts they could make in their daily work. Then he was named assistant sergeant-at-arms, and, when the Democrats took control of the Senate, he was gratefully named secretary of the United States Senate, succeeding Edwin P. Thayer, who had held the post during the period of Republican power.

ROOSEVELT RUSHES PUBLIC WORKS BILL

Jobless Relief Program to Provide Employment for 500,000 Idle.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt yesterday rushed ahead with the third measure of his emergency program—a $500,000,000 bond issue for widespread unemployment relief.

The bill to make jobs by reforestation and other inland improvement projects for an estimated 500,000 workers neared completion at a White House meeting in which Senators Wagner, of New York, and Costigan, of Colorado, Democrats, and La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, participated.

The message calling upon Congress for this legislation on an urgent basis will go forward early this week, but probably not until the legislators have disposed of the pending economy bill.

Differ on Details.

The senators at the White House yesterday are all leaders in the unemployment problem, but represent conflicting schools of thought. La Follette and Costigan have fostered the unsuccessful attempts for direct Government aid. Senator Wagner has fathered the public works program now in effect. Progress was reported by the group as it left the President after a discussion lasting almost an hour.

"We had a very satisfactory discussion of the question involved in unemployment relief," Senator La Follette told newspapermen. "No definite conclusions were reached and further conferences will be held."

"But there is every indication," interposed Senator Wagner, "of satisfactory conclusions. The prospect for agreement is very encouraging."

Jobs Instead of Doles.

The broad scale Roosevelt plan, which contemplates jobs and not "doles," carries provision for a vast recruiting of the idle in the unemployed camps by the Army, with provisions for keeping the men now roaming the streets available for work as it develops.

The reforestation scheme would be put into effect probably in every section of the country. Immediate development of the idle war time Muscle Shoals, Ala., power and nitrate plant, with construction of the proposed reservoir dam at Cove Creek in the Clinch River in Tennessee, will be a part of the program.

Liberal R. F. C. Action.

Liberalization of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act, to permit extension of funds for distress and for self-liquidating projects also is contemplated.

The President has gone over the plan thoroughly with the Government officers involved in administering it. He is ready to put it immediately into action once Congress gives him authority. A separate setup for the administration of it may be arranged by a regrouping of involved agencies, now in the Departments of War, Labor, Agriculture and Interior.

Walker to Answer Action for Divorce

Miami, Fla., March 11 (A.P.).—Appearance papers for James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, in the divorce action brought by his wife, Janet Allen Walker, were filed in Circuit Court here today. Attached to the papers was a copy of a cablegram from Walker in Cannes, France, to Benjamin Cohen, local attorney, which read:

"You are authorized to make immediate appearance, file answer and represent me at hearing generally in case brought by my wife."

Cohen could not be reached immediately for a statement as to whether the wording of the cablegram meant that Walker intended to contest the divorce action. Mrs. Walker, a winter resident of Miami Beach, filed the divorce suit earlier this week, charging desertion.

STAMPS TO HONOR 1933 WORLD'S FAIR

Models Are Being Prepared; Cermak Memorial Issue Is Suggested.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing is at work on models of a 1 and 3 cent stamp which are to be issued to commemorate the Century of Progress Exposition to be held at Chicago, Ill., beginning June 1.

A number of designs have been submitted to the bureau depicting buildings at the exposition, but most of these are not suitable for stamp purposes because of the great amount of detail to be covered.

It is expected, however, that a replica of Fort Dearborn, with the old stockade, will be pictured on the 1-cent stamp.

For the 3-cent stamp it is understood that a replica of the administration building of the exposition grounds will be used.

But before any final decision is reached on either the 1 or 3 cent stamp, the models now being prepared will be submitted to the Postmaster General to determine whether they will be suitable for reproduction purposes.

It has also been suggested that the Postoffice Department issue a memorial 5-cent stamp in honor of the late Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago, killed by an assassin's bullet, intended for President Roosevelt, and definite announcement regarding this stamp will be made within the next few days.

Stamp collectors throughout the country have been requested not to send in requests for the proposed commemorative stamps until after it has been decided on the postoffices where they may first be obtained as well as the date when their sale will begin.

Michigan Will Act On Repeal in April

Governor Signs Measure Calling for Ballot by Convention.

Lansing, Mich., March 11 (A.P.).—Gov. Comstock tonight signed the Hiedkamp bill which calls for a convention April 10 to act upon national prohibition repeal for Michigan.

The House today suspended rules and passed the bill, 72 to 8.

One delegate will be elected from each representative district to the State convention under the bill, and counties having more than one member in the House of Representatives will be entitled to an equal number of delegates. Candidates for the convention will be nominated in each county entitled to delegates by a committee composed of the county clerk, prosecutor and probate judge.

RULES ON HOARDING ARE DUE THIS WEEK

Gold Coins and Certificates Apparently Only Money Not to Be Held.

(Associated Press.)

Gold coin and gold certificates, or "yellow-backs," apparently are the only money which must not be held by individuals, banks, or corporations under the antihoarding regulations to be issued by the Treasury early this week.

The gold certificates differ from the new currency about to be distributed and from all other paper money now in circulation in this way:

Each certificate is backed by a 100 per cent deposit of gold coin or bullion in the Treasury vaults. It is therefore considered identical with gold coin.

Reports on Hoarders.

Circulation of these certificates already is prohibited. That is taken to mean that they must not be used for paying bills or otherwise. The forthcoming regulations are expected to require that all be immediately turned in to banks and sent back to the Treasury. However, the exact rules have not been disclosed. These will tell banks and citizens just what they must do with gold or gold certificates in their possession.

The names of all parties known to have big sums in gold or gold certificates will be reported to the Treasury by the Federal Reserve banks beginning tomorrow. Presumably action will be taken against them unless their hoards are soon returned and exchanged for new currency.

All other types of paper money in circulation may be held or spent, as the forthcoming regulations are now understood, without being considered hoarding, and prohibited.

Circulation Totals.

Most of these are backed by partial gold deposits.

There are only $300,550,000 worth now in circulation.

Federal Reserve notes out amount to $4,550,000,000.

They have been hitherto redeemable in gold.

National bank notes, backed by Government bonds, amount to $800,000,000, and are redeemable in "lawful money of the United States."

Many $1 silver certificates, redeemable only in silver, are outstanding, and a few Treasury notes of 1890, which have been redeemable either in gold or silver.

New York Money Center Welcomes Treasury Issue

New York, March 11 (A.P.).—The terms of the $800,000,000 of new Treasury financing set for next Wednesday were well received in important banking quarters tonight, where preparations were being made for restoring normal banking activity Monday.

It was explained that the terms left little doubt that the banks would be anxious to take up the issue. At 4 and 4¼ per cent, the banks could buy them and profitably offer them as collateral for advances from the Federal Reserve, at its rediscount rate of 3½ per cent.

Money rates have tightened abruptly in recent weeks, as currency in circulation shot up more than $1,500,000,000 in a fortnight, and gold poured out of the Reserve Banks, until the flow was checked a week ago. With gold swiftly returning to the banks, however, and any additional currency needs provided for by the emergency bank act, bankers expected that the money market would quickly stabilize.

Louderback Will Halt Work Until After Trial

San Francisco, March 11 (A.P.).—Federal Judge Harold Louderback, against whom impeachment charges have been brought by the National House of Representatives, announced today he would not hear any more cases pending his trial by the Senate.

"My present information is that there is a reasonable probability that the proceedings pending against me in Washington will be tried and disposed of within the near future," the jurist said.

Eddie Savoy, 77, Felicitated By Roosevelt as He Retires

(Associated Press.)

Eddie Savoy, veteran Negro doorkeeper at the office of the Secretary of State, retired yesterday from the Government he has served since 1869, with honors heaped upon him and a parting handshake from President Roosevelt.

Savoy, 77 years old, entered the State Department early in the administration of President Grant as a page boy to Secretary Fish, but never in all his years was he honored as much as yesterday. Far past the retirement age, he has been excepted from the mandatory retirement rule for years.

At noon a White House automobile, waiting at the diplomatic entrance of the State Department, brought Savoy the few hundred feet to the White House in answer to the President's summons. Earlier, State Department employes had chipped in to give him a $50 purse and the department messengers had presented him with a big, soft easy chair.

As he stepped into the White House offices Savoy was shy and reticent.

"I don't know why I'm here. I'm just obeying orders," he said.

Then in he went to where the President awaited him.

He emerged beaming.

Newsmen crowded around to ask what Mr. Roosevelt had said.

"It was so nice I don't think I ought to repeat it," he mused. But then excitement broke down reserve and Savoy told how he and the President had compared notes on the days when Mr. Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy and had his office just down the hall from where Savoy has kept his long vigil.

Statement of Roosevelt Upon Reopening of Banks

I am glad to be able to announce that technical difficulties which operated to delay the opening of banks, both State and national, have finally substantially been overcome by tireless work on the part of the officials of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve system, and that a definite program has been arranged, consisting of successive steps by which banks throughout the country will be opened progressively on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings.

The Secretary of the Treasury will issue licenses to banks which are members of the Federal Reserve system, whether national bank or State, located in each of the twelve Federal Reserve Bank cities, to open Monday morning.

So also the State authorities having supervision over State banks which are not members of the Federal Reserve system will be asked to permit any such State institutions located in any one of the twelve Federal Reserve Bank cities to open for business on Monday morning, if in their judgment they deem it wise to do so.

Under this progressive plan, banks located in any city having an active, recognized clearing house association, of which there are 250 cities, will receive licenses for reopening on Tuesday morning, and banks located elsewhere will receive their licenses permitting reopening for Wednesday.

Time is thus afforded for the necessary shipments of currency provided under the emergency bank act from Reserve bank centers to clearing house cities and banks in the smaller communities.

There were enormous technical problems to be solved before these mechanics could be worked out and before the actual currency could be in the bank when the doors opened.

The Constitution has laid upon me the duty of conveying the condition of the country to the Congress assembled at Washington. I believe I have a like duty to convey to the people themselves a clear picture of the situation at Washington itself whenever there is danger of any confusion as to what the Government is undertaking.

That there may be a clear understanding as to just what has taken place during the last two days since the passage of this act it is my intention, over the national radio networks, at 10 o'clock Sunday evening, to explain clearly and in simple language to all of you just what has been achieved and the sound reasons which underlie this declaration to you.

The fact that banks will be opened under this plan does not mean that anyone should draw the inference that the banks opening Monday are in any different condition as to soundness from the banks licensed to open on Tuesday or Wednesday or any subsequent day.

banks which are not in the Federal Reserve System, is a difficult one, and the White House statement did not indicate clearly whether it had been worked out in detail.

As regards State banks in the twelve Reserve cities, the President explained, the State authorities may permit them to open tomorrow with the national banks in those cities, "if in their judgment they deem it wise to do so."

What plan is to be worked out as regards nonmember State banks in other cities, and the nonmember country banks, was not indicated.

Under Friday night's arrangements, these banks were to be opened by Treasury licenses, which were to issue on the approval of the State banking authorities.

At midnight the Treasury made public a copy of a telegram sent to all State banking superintendents. It requested the State authorities to permit the resumption of nonmember State banks in the twelve Reserve cities tomorrow, provided they are sound and ready to resume on the basis of unrestricted operations. This provision applies uniformly to State and national banks in all three location groups.

This telegram also made it clear that the Treasury will not permit any member bank to open tomorrow save "for normal business on an unrestricted basis with respect to withdrawals or notice of withdrawals."

The same policy as regards nonmember State banks was enunciated in a message to the State superintendents on last Friday.

Regulations Still Stand.

Last night's telegram further emphasized that unqualified restrictions as to gold payments, hoarding regulations and foreign exchange transactions still must be observed by all banks, State and Nation, member and nonmember, "until further notice."

Treasury order, No. 18, yesterday removed all restrictions on bank purchases of new Government obligations. The text of this order reads:

> All banking institutions are hereby authorized to subscribe and pay for any United States Government obligations which may be offered for subscription and sale by the Secretary of the Treasury. Federal Reserve Banks may carry on such functions as may be necessary to facilitate such transactions as are authorized by this regulation.
> All Federal Reserve Banks are authorized to redeem matured obligations of the United States and to cash matured coupons, provided no gold, or gold certificates shall be paid out.

Tydings at White House.

The President's statement that the difficulties of resumption had "substantially been overcome" left the implication that some details remained to be worked out as regards certain classes of banks. There was no authoritative amplification on this point, however.

On behalf of State banks which are not members of the Federal Reserve System, Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, yesterday called on President Roosevelt to ask what the Federal Government will do to aid these State institutions.

After talking to the President, Senator Tydings said that everything would be done to allow State banks to take advantage of the new law. He intimated that regulations would be issued to aid the State institutions and to overcome the difficulties they face.

Under Thursday's law and the current regulations, only members of the Federal Reserve System may borrow the new currency on commercial paper, Senator Tydings explained. This means that banks outside the Reserve System must borrow from member banks instead of from the regional Federal Reserve Banks, the security being in turn put up by the member bank with the Reserve Bank.

Friday members of the Maryland State Senate discussed asking President Roosevelt to take some steps to allow banks outside the system to share in the distribution of the new currency. A number of State senators are understood to have sent telegrams to the President asking this action.

New Treasury Issue.

The new Treasury certificates will be issued in maturities of five months at 4 per cent interest and nine months at 4¼ per cent. The division between the two maturities will be in proportion to the respective subscriptions. All issues will be dated March 15, 1933.

"The principal and interest of the certificates will be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of value," the official Treasury announcement said.

Applications for the securities will be received by the Federal Reserve banks in the regular way.

Banking circles said last night the reception of the offering will depend to a large extent on the prospects for immediate action in the Senate on President Roosevelt's budget-balancing program.

Formal announcement that the Government certificates would be payable in gold five months hence, raised the question whether this arrangement would prevail in the event the President's emergency powers still preclude gold payments at that time. There was no official comment on the point.

Neither was there any clarification yesterday concerning measures of emergency relief to taxpayers whose income returns are due Wednesday. Although many requests for emergency arrangements in behalf of those pressed for cash by the banking holiday have been received at the Bureau of Internal Revenue, it was stated there yesterday no special arrangements were in prospect. Under the law, the 1932 returns are due March 15, and each return, corporate and individual, must be accompanied by a remittance covering one-fourth of the year's tax.

The new certificate issues will increase the government's short-term debt to $6,484,000,000 and the total National debt to $21,044,000,000.

No official estimate is yet available as to the tax income anticipated March 15. Last year the March 15 payments were less than $200,000,000. This year, the rates are higher under the 1932 tax bill, but the taxable incomes are expected to be generally lower. Unofficially, Treasury officers have said they do not anticipate as much as $100,000,000 on Wednesday's payments.

$5,000,000 Deficit Daily.

In recent months the Treasury deficit has been increasing at the rate of approximately $5,000,000 a day.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning the Treasury announced it soon would release a series of statements clarifying the situation as regards bank resumption. Up to 10 o'clock last night, however, no official information had been made available.

Considerable confusion prevails throughout the country as to just what the Treasury policy is, and how it is to be worked out in regard to individual banks.

Four hours after the President's statement was issued at the White House, the Treasury released a second statement embodying Mr. Roosevelt's text, but without amplification or comment. At 11 p. m. it still was undetermined whether the long-expected Treasury announcement would be made for this morning's papers.

Vigorous efforts still were being made on Capitol Hill yesterday to broaden State banks within its easy-money the scope of Thursday's emergency banking legislation to include all provisions. At present, only State banks affiliated with the Federal Reserve system are eligible for the emergency benefits. Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana, is leading the demand for revision of the emergency law in this respect, along the lines he urged in debate Thursday.

After a call at the White House yesterday Senator Long said with his amendments the emergency law "can be a salvation, but otherwise it can be a wreckage."

Deposit Guarantee Opposed.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who long has advocated a unified banking system but questions whether State banks can be forced into the national system, also conferred with the President for several hours last evening. He would not discuss his mission.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, also introduced an amendment to the emergency law along the lines proposed by Senator Long.

Senator Fletcher, of Florida, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, introduced a bill to create a Government fund of $300,000,000 to guarantee bank deposits. The Treasury would provide the first $100,000,000 and the balance would be collected through a tax of 20 cents a year on each $100 of deposits.

Former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, who has been in conference with Secretary Woodin and the Federal Reserve Board since last Saturday, was reported en route to New York late last night. It was expected he would return to Washington tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile, efforts to clarify the Treasury situation as regards the yardstick for solvency in bank resumption were unavailing. A list of some 20 press questions submitted to Secretary Woodin on this and other points Friday remained unanswered, as did some 30 additional questions submitted Saturday.

Telegrams imploring information on this point have flooded into the Treasury in ever-increasing volume during the last 48 hours. The Treasury telephone switchboard has been clogged for hours on a stretch with long-distance calls seeking a clear definition of policy.

Prof. A. A. Berle, of Columbia University, who entered the Treasury conferences with Prof. Raymond I. Moley last Sunday, left the Federal Reserve Board rooms about midweek and since has been reported back in his normal academic routine on Morningside Heights, New York.

Early in the week Prof. Moley was transferred to official duties in the State Department. He conferred with President Roosevelt yesterday shortly after Senator Long had called.

Other White House callers yesterday were Senators Costigan, Wagner and La Follette.

FARM CHIEFS URGE POWER TO WALLACE

Tell President of Program to Control Output and Increase Prices.

(Associated Press.)

Farm organization leaders yesterday asked President Roosevelt and Congress to give Secretary Wallace emergency powers to reduce production and boost prices of farm products.

The leaders recommended that the Secretary be given authority to select a relief plan, using in whole or in part many proposals made in years past, or, if he desires, to work out an entirely new approach to a solution of the farm economic problem.

In a conference with President Roosevelt the leaders suggested that authority to lease lands, to acquire title to commodities, to regulate marketing and other extraordinary powers be delegated to the Secretary.

Mr. Wallace was present at the time and his associates indicated that he was willing to accept the responsibility. The President is expected to express approval or disapproval of the proposal early next week, with most of the leaders remaining on hand for his reply.

Application of the powers would include the production and marketing of nine principal commodities—wheat, cotton, corn, hogs, cattle, sheep, rice, tobacco, milk and its products.

W. R. Ronald, Mitchell, S. Dak., newspaper publisher, chairman of the committee which called at the White House, said the proposed grant of power would not be "dictatorial;" that leaders regarded it as impossible to recommend a specific plan of relief due to unsettled business and financial conditions.

The leaders were reported to have adopted the program unanimously. Members of the committee who signed its report besides Ronald, included Charles Ewing, Decatur, Ill., representing the National Live Stock Marketing Association; U. B. Blaylock, president, American Cotton Cooperative Association; C. V. Gregory, Chicago farm editor; C. W. Holman, Washington, the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation; L. J. Taber, master, the National Grange; C. E. Huff, president, Farmers National Grain Corporation; Edward A. O'Neal, president, American Farm Bureau Federation; Ralph Snyder, Manhattan, Kans., chairman, committee of national farm organizations; Representative Lambertson (Republican), Kansas, representing the Farmers Union, and M. S. Winder, secretary, American Farm Bureau.

Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican National Committee, last night announced the appointment of John Callan O'Laughlin, publisher of the Army and Navy Journal, as assistant chairman of the committee.

In his announcement, Mr. Sanders stated that Mr. O'Laughlin would assist him in the administrative affairs and help in the organization work.

West Point Dinner Will Be Foregone

The West Point dinner, an annual event wherever there are graduates of the Military Academy, both in and out of the Army, will not be held in Washington this year, according to an announcement yesterday by Maj. Gen. R. E. Callan, president of the local branch of the alumni committee.

"In view of economic conditions this year, and in view of the obligations and opportunities of many of the personnel to assist in alleviating distress, the Washington alumni committee, reflecting the views of the body of graduates and former cadets in the vicinity of Washington, feels it appropriate to suspend the dinner and celebration," the announcement reads.

The dinner has been held annually since 1902. Last year 750 attended here. In addition to Gen. Callan, other officers of the alumni committee here are Lieut. Col. John B. Richardson, secretary, and Maj. William A. Beach, treasurer.

Heavy Postal Savings Bring Soldier Guards

Detroit, March 11 (A.P.).—A vast increase in business done by the Postal Savings Bank, necessitating the carrying of unusually large amounts of money, gave Detroit something new to talk about this week—soldiers guarding the postoffice.

Under an arrangement described by Acting Postmaster Peter Wiggle as "voluntary," 24 soldiers from Fort Wayne, the Detroit Army post, were detailed to duty at the main postoffice and various branches as an extra precaution to safeguard currency carried during the banking holiday.

COX IS SUGGESTED AS GERMAN ENVOY

Bingham, Curley and Bowers Mentioned for London, Rome and Madrid.

(Associated Press.)

James M. Cox, Ohio publisher and Democratic candidate for President in 1920, is reported in responsible circles to be under serious consideration for the post of Ambassador to Germany.

President Roosevelt was the Vice Presidential candidate on the ticket with Cox 13 years ago and they are warm personal friends.

Frederic M. Sackett, of Louisville, Ky., the present Ambassador at Berlin, submitted his resignation on March 4. It has not been accepted as yet, although Sackett indicated to the State Department that he would like to leave Berlin about March 20.

Davis to Carry On.

James M. Curley, of Boston, Mass., is also reported to be under consideration for an ambassadorial post, presumably that at Rome.

Norman H. Davis has been discussed in connection with several embassies in Europe, but the impression now in informed circles is that his continuation as American delegate to the disarmament conference, which is threatened with failure because of the unsettled conditions throughout Europe, makes it unlikely he will be named an ambassador in the near future.

Davis also is a member of the organization committee for the world monetary and economic conference, and will probably leave very shortly for Europe to carry on important work on both disarmament and economic problems.

Two Other Journalists.

Although Judge Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville, Ky., has not been formally appointed Ambassador to London, his selection is generally believed to be assured. It now also seems likely that Jesse Isidor Straus, of New York, will receive the appointment to Paris and that Claude Bowers will replace Irwin Laughlin as Ambassador at Madrid.

It is generally believed in official circles that Hugh Gibson will be retained as Ambassador at Brussels. He is a foreign service officer, whose long experience in dealing with disarmament problems is believed to make him particularly valuable at this time. Gibson is now at Geneva, where Premier MacDonald of Great Britain and Sir John Simon, the British foreign secretary, are endeavoring to avert the crisis in the disarmament conference.

Two other ambassadorial posts in Europe, Warsaw and Istanbul, are filled by political appointees who will probably be replaced in the near future. F. Lamont Belin is Ambassador at Warsaw and Charles H. Sherrill at Istanbul.

SPARE 'LITTLE MAN' IS PAY-SLASH PLEA

Scale Starting at 1 Per Cent Is Urged on Roosevelt by Mrs. Worrell.

Consideration for the "little fellow," the low-salaried Federal employe whose pay has remained in status quo for years, yesterday was asked of President Roosevelt by Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, president of the League of the American Civil Service.

In a letter to the President, she suggested that the following sliding scale of wage reductions be adopted by Mr. Roosevelt under his proposed new powers.

One per cent, from $1,200 up to $1,500; 2 per cent, from $1,500 up to $2,000; 3 per cent, from $2,000 up to $2,500; 4 per cent, from $2,500 up to $3,000; 5 per cent, from $3,000 up to $3,500; 10 per cent, from $3,500 up to $4,000, and 15 per cent or 25 per cent for all above $4,000.

Assuring the President of the league's cooperation, she said:

"We believe that you will deal fairly and with justice to all and that you are in complete sympathy with those in need, therefore, we propose to stand by you 100 per cent."

HOUSE PASSES SLASH BILL

tained a ruling from the chair that a motion to send the bill back to committee would be in order on conclusion of debate. It was Browning who sponsored the amendment limiting veterans' cuts.

But before Browning could get in his motion to recommit the bill with instructions to attach his amendment, Speaker Rainey recognized Representative William P. Connery, jr. (Democrat), Massachusetts. Mr. Connery made a simple motion to commit the bill, blocking Browning's move. The Connery motion was defeated, 272 to 90, on a division count.

In vain the Tennessee representative asked the Speaker if the Democratic caucus right did not give him prior right to make the motion.

"The House has no knowledge of what happened in the caucus," was Speaker Rainey's reply.

Minor Amendments.

It was estimated that the Browning amendment, had it been adopted, would have cut savings under proposed slashes in veterans' compensation, from $400,000,000 to $200,000,000.

Several minor amendments were attached to the bill favorably reported yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee. One would require that the data on comparative living costs now and in the basic 1928 period, to be taken as a standard for reducing Federal salaries within a 15 per cent limit, be supplied entirely by Federal agencies.

Following the favorable committee action, Senator Harrison asked unanimous consent to file its report after the Senate adjourned and to make the bill the first order of business tomorrow. Senator Patrick McCarren (Democrat), Nevada, objected.

Senator Harrison said last night he intends to move early tomorrow for consideration of the bill, and expects his motion to prevail.

Woodrum's Words Stir.

At the conclusion of yesterday's House debate, a record vote was demanded by House Economy Chairman John McDuffie. Although there were shouts of "No," the ayes and noes were ordered.

Earlier the House was plunged in disorder for several minutes when Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, advised Democrats to be careful in voting, as the President would "look over the roll call."

Cries of, "He's speaking for the President," and "We know that," went up from the Democratic side.

Woodrum said he had been misunderstood and denied that he spoke for any one but himself. He said he meant merely that the Democrats should support the President in the country's present crisis.

Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell was greeted with cheers when he threw his support behind the measure. He told the House he spoke neither as a Republican or a Democrat, but as a "loyal American."

"I am not going to throw a monkey wrench into the program they say is necessary to put the country on its feet," he said.

"We must set the example here. It is up to you members to do your duty and your clear duty is to give the President the authority he asks."

Later, Democratic Leader Byrns, who is known to have broad veterans' sympathies, took the floor in support of the measure.

"I have complete confidence in the absolute fairness of the President," was the theme he struck.

McDuffie Leads Fight.

Representative McDuffie, whose name the bill bears, joined in the vigorous leadership battle to save the bill, while Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, and Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, led the insurgent fight against it.

"You can't tell me that those who were willing to lay down their lives for this flag are not now willing to make some sacrifice," he said. "The American people are with the President and expect you to uphold his hand."

The Senate Finance Committee vote was not unanimous. Senators Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, and Bennett Clark (Democrat), Missouri, voted against it.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, urged the committee to eliminate the salary cut authorization, declaring it would be followed by further wage cuts in industry, and provoke unrest generally.

"I am certain it will serve to retard economic recovery throughout a curtailment of buying power far in excess of the actual amount saved."

"The Federal Government can not carry on its rightful obligations to the disabled veterans and reduce their benefits by $400,000,000," he said.

Among the other witnesses who appeared briefly before the committee were E. J. Gainor, president of the National Letter Carriers Association, who declared the course proposed by the President would never restore prosperity. There was a short tilt between Gainor and Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, who took issue with him.

Farm Leaders Back Roosevelt.

Omaha, Nebr., March 11 (A.P.).—Leaders of the National Farm Union, meeting in executive session here today, adopted a resolution commending President Franklin D. Roosevelt for "his courageous stand in this national crisis" and placed themselves on record as "most heartily agreeing with the position he has taken."

Pay Slash Will Depend On Living Cost Decline

The percentage by which Federal salaries would be cut under the authorization approved yesterday by the House would work out as follows:

The President would investigate facts relating to the cost of living in the United States during the six-month period ended June 30, 1928, and determine an index figure to be used as a basis.

He would make a further investigation of living costs in the six-month period ended last December 31, and for every six months thereafter, and fix index figures for these periods.

The percentage by which the index figure of the last six-month period is lower than the figure for the 1928 basic figure, would be the amount of the pay cut, if it is not greater than 15 per cent.

GIRL SCOUTS LISTEN TO MRS. ROOSEVELT

First Lady Is Inducted Into Honorary Presidency of National Order.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

In a brief address, Mrs. Roosevelt admonished the Scouts to be helpful in the present crisis and to accept with cheerfulness the things that are done for the greatest good for the greatest number. She pointed out the value of going without things philosophically. She expressed an understanding that youth found it hard to understand restrictions, but assured the Girl Scouts it was better to be cheerful about it and to seize the opportunity to make things easier for their elders and to give service.

"Training in unselfishness which naturally results in better citizenship and will ultimately result in better government is one great contribution made by the Girl Scouts to the Nation." Mrs. Roosevelt said in accepting the post of honorary president.

"A girl who is taught to give unselfish service to her neighbor and her community is being trained unconsciously to be a good citizen. What she does as a girl in her group she will do as a grown-up in her country."

Variety of Amusements.

She pointed out that parents and teachers nowadays have little time or opportunity to help a girl use her leisure rightly. "The hurry of today and the variety of amusements," the First Lady stated, "made it imperative for a girl to have guidance. She can not without experience decide what is best for herself. The Girl Scout program gives her the assistance she needs in selection."

Mrs. Roosevelt was met at the south entrance of Memorial Continental Hall and escorted to the platform by Mrs. Benjamin Cheatham, commissioner of the District of Columbia; Mrs. Monte Appel, deputy commissioner; Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke and Henry H. Flather, members of the Girl Scout board. Miss Francois May, daughter of the Belgian Ambassador and Mme. May, who is a Girl Scout captain, led the guard of honor of Girl Scouts. Mrs. Roosevelt seemed much pleased with the song of greeting "Glad to See You, Mrs. Roosevelt, Glad to See You."

After she had lighted the candles on the cake and made her address she had to leave to receive the ladies of the Diplomatic Corps at the White House. She promised to visit the Girl Scout camp, Camp May Flather, in Virginia this summer.

Mrs. Wilson First in Office.

Mrs. Roosevelt is the fifth First Lady of the Land to become honorary president of the Girl Scouts. The first was the second Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover were honorary commissioners of the District of Columbia as well.

The cake lighted by Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday was made by the girls of Troop No. 42 of which Miss Burnett Baer is captain. This troop also presented the playlet which ended in Mrs. Roosevelt lighting the cake and the decision to send the cake to St. John's Orphanage as there was not enough to give each Girl Scout present a slice.

Among the guests of honor were: Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau; Mrs. Frederic A. Delano, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Richard Wainwright, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Ernest Lee Jahncke, Mrs. Luther Reichelderfer, wife of the President of the Board of Commissioners; Mrs. Dwight Clark, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Capt. and Mrs. Chester Wells, president of the Boy Scout Council in the District, and their house guest, Miss Leigh Dixson, of Australia; Mrs. Myron Whitney, Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, Mrs. Isaac Gans and Mrs. Stanley Reed.

Roosevelt To Help Mark 25th Year Of Press Club

Celebration Will Be Held on March 29; Many Notables to Attend.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt will join with world-famed newspapermen and other figures of national importance in celebrating the twenty-fifth birthday of the National Press Club, one of the most famous clubs in the world.

The celebration will be held in the club, on the top floor of the National Press Building, at Fourteenth and F streets northwest, one of the largest and most modern buildings in the city, on Wednesday night, March 29.

The President has surrounded his promise to join in the newspapermen's celebration with the usual proviso that he would if the exigencies of the public business permitted. He was a guest of the White House correspondents at their annual banquet last night in the course of which he heard skits and saw a moving picture which made play on one or two of his favorite expressions. Often, discussing this or that public question, the President will give his formal answers to questions and then will ask if he can speak "between us girls" and "off the record." Of course the newspaper reporters permit him to speak "off the record" and none quote him.

Years ago, when he was an Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Roosevelt was a frequenter of the old Press Club. Since becoming President he has made application for membership—and his membership card will be presented to him at the Birth Night party, by Raymond P. Brandt, president of the club. The party will be staged in the club auditorium and will be for members only.

Mr. Roosevelt's application for membership will be considered in the regular way by the board of governors. When on March 29 he is made a full-fledged member, he joins the ranks of his predecessors. All the Presidents of the United States, since the Press Club was born, have been members of the newspapermen's club. Mr. Roosevelt will be the sixth President to hold a card.

Soon after the organization of the club, in 1908, President Taft—"who used to be a newspaperman himself"—joined the club as a nonactive member.

President Wilson, who had been a writer, as well as a college president, also became a member of the club on the nonactive list.

President Harding, as the publisher of a newspaper, was a member of the National Press Club long before he went to the White House.

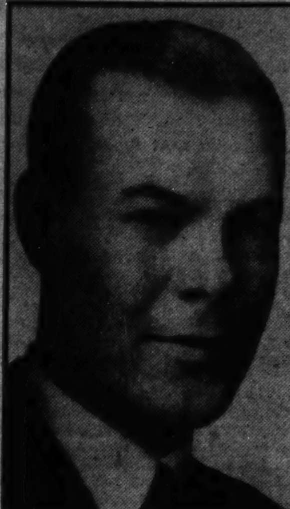
President Coolidge was an associate member. After he left the White House and moved to Northampton he was transferred to the nonresident list. Only a few days before his death he sent in his check for the 1933 dues.

President Hoover was an associate member of the club.

Postmaster General Farley followed the footsteps of his chief and immediately made application for associate membership. It is expected that other members of the Cabinet also will ask for membership, since the associate membership includes those whose daily work bring them in close contact with the press.

Membership cards will be presented to all of Mr. Roosevelt's official family, who have their applications in on time, and to Col. Louis Howe, head of the White House secretariat, who also has applied for membership. A veteran newspaperman, Mr. Howe will come in under the nonactive rites.

"Steve" Early and Marvin McIntyre, the two other White House secretaries, have been members of the Press Club for the last 20 years.



RAYMOND P. BRANDT.

ROOSEVELT'S WEEK IS RECORD-BREAKER

Drama and Amusing Events Chase One Another Through Days.

(United Press.)

President Roosevelt's first week in the White House broke records for emergencies met and precedents shattered.

The momentous week after March 4, proceeded with breathless speed. Drama and amusing events were enacted almost every hour, day and night.

Through it all—banking crisis, embargo on gold, special session of Congress, innumerable conferences and all-important decisions—the President moved rapidly, decisively and cheerfully. Last night he was a witty guest of honor at the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents Association.

The following chronology describes the kaleidoscopic week:

March 4, Saturday—Mr. Roosevelt is inaugurated. He tells the Nation that its unreasoning fear is the fundamental cause of the bank crisis. He watches the inaugural parade. He serves tea to his friends. There is such a crush that sandwiches are trampled on the marble floors of the White House.

First Cabinet Meeting.

March 5, Sunday—He attends St. Thomas' Episcopal Church. He holds his first Cabinet meeting. He calls a special session of Congress. He declares a gold embargo and a national banking holiday.

March 6, Monday—He learns of Mayor Cermak's death from bullet an assassin intended for him. He attends state funeral services for the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, whom he had appointed Attorney General. He holds conferences with banking, congressional and Cabinet leaders.

March 7, Tuesday—The conferences continue. Secretary of the Treasury Woodin pops in and out of the White House, smiling. The first regular Cabinet meeting is held. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace gets lost in the executive offices. Postmaster General Farley tells the newsmen to call him "Jim."

March 8, Wednesday—The President begins work on his special message to Congress, asking emergency powers to control banking. He holds his first press conference, answers all questions and lets photographers climb on his mahogany chairs to take his picture.

Banks Open, Slightly.

March 9, Thursday—Congress convenes, hears the President's message and passes the emergency banking bill. Restrictions on the closed banks are lifted slightly. The President signs the banking bill after Mrs. Roosevelt says: "Franklin, fix your hair." He holds a night conference with congressmen and issues another proclamation extending the banking holiday.

March 10, Friday—He sends a second message to Congress, asking for power to cut Federal salaries and lower veterans' benefits. He warns Congress that the Government is heading toward bankruptcy. He says he is feeling fine, but that he needs sleep. Plans are revealed to open sound banks Monday.

March 11, Saturday—He announces that the Government is doing everything possible to relieve distress in the Southern California earthquake area. He confers with agriculture leaders. He congratulates a Negro messenger in the State Department for 50 years of service. He cleans up details of the bank reopening. He attends the correspondent's dinner.

Child Falls Dead From Quake Scare

Twentieth Shock Proves Fatal to Girl, 11, After Night of Terror.

Los Angeles, March 11 (A.P.).—After spending a night in terror, 11-year-old Irene Hendrickson got out of her bed this morning just as the twentieth earthquake shock was recorded in Los Angeles, and fell dead from fright.

"What is that, mother, another earthquake?" the girl asked, then fell to the floor.

Physicians said death was due to the severe tax fright had placed upon her heart.

Pius Sends Condolences To Earthquake Victims

Vatican City, March 11 (A.P.).—Pope Pius XI sent his condolences to the apostolic delegation at Washington today, requesting that they be forwarded to the California dioceses stricken by the earthquake.

The Pope conferred tonight with Mgr. Ottaviani, Vatican undersecretary of state, in reference to the disaster. The monsignor related to him unofficial accounts of the quake and said official reports were expected during the night.

Man Begs for Hours To Save Wife in Debris

Compton, Calif., March 11 (U.P.).—An ashen-faced young man stood for hours during the night in front of the Stockwell Building and begged to be allowed to help remove the debris.

"Don't worry, we'll get it done quickly, thanks," a worker said kindly, noting the distraught face. Then the man said: "But I must do something. My wife is under that pile of bricks."

13 Huge Dams Survive Temblors Undamaged

Los Angeles, March 11 (U.P.).—None of the 13 giant dams in Los Angeles County which hold back millions of tons of water were damaged by the quakes, E. C. Eaton, flood control engineer, reported today after an examination of the structures.

Einstein Claims Quake Escaped His Attention

Pasadena, Calif., March 11 (U.P.).—Relativity presumably is a good antidote for earthquakes. Dr. Albert Einstein was so absorbed in thought he didn't notice the earthquake.

"What earthquake?" he asked innocently when questioned. Then laughing, he added that it was apparently just another thing "that had escaped" his attention.

The Federal Diary

Keep your face toward the Sun and the Shadows will fall behind

By GEORGE D. RILEY

ENTRY BLANKS for the Federal Diary jigsaw puzzle tournament the evening of March 30, the first such contest ever staged, should be sent in early in order to assure yourself a place at the long tables.

It is planned to mark off each place, so that contestants will have ample room to work.

It appears that the jigsaw puzzle fad is taking a new hold. Windows attract crowds watching young women trying to fit the oddly shaped cutouts into place. One is almost tempted to try to reach in and point out this or that section to help the demonstrators along.

The University Distributing Co., manufacturers of the jig-of-the-week, has notified the Federal Diary Department that the 500 sets of puzzles are on the way, to be here in ample time. There'll be plenty of puzzles and plenty of room for all Government employes who enter.

Send along the little entry blank included in this column and prepare for an evening of fun and profit.

Take a Chance.

COUNT me in on that "Take a Chance" jigsaw puzzle tournament. Let's all put things together instead of letting them go to pieces. Be there 300, 350 or 400 pieces in the set, I'll stay and see it through. Of course, if there are any prizes, I'll still take a chance. In short, please enter my name as contestant, for the evening of March 30.

SWAMI FEDD snapped out of his lethargy early last evening (the old night owl), put on his house slippers, lighted the old pipe, drew the drape from before the crystal ball, and here are some of the persons he saw:

Thomas J. Kastenak, Postoffice, and Mrs. Thomas J. Kastenak, Customs Bureau, guests at dinner, with Miss Frances Skelly, Prohibition. . . . Bureau of Engraving and Printing at work on models of one and three-cent stamps to commemorate the Chicago Progress Exposition, starting June 1. . . . That beautiful red velvet pillow cover Miss Edna M. Phelps, Agriculture, has just made. . . . Walter Shomo, a leading G. P. O. bowler, calling a meeting to order to prepare for the summer campaign of the Departmental Baseball League. . . . Mrs. Alma H. Vallin, rubber division, Commerce, winner of an electric bridge table (not the kind Jane and Ace exhibited at their apartment, over the radio) to take women out of bridge. . . . And won't that kind of table enable the ladies to do more talking while the cards are being shuffled? . . . Irma Kuhnert, Commerce, writing about "Fashions in Furs." . . . H. A. Nelson, chief of operations, Agriculture, telling bureaus and offices about the "Open Chest" for receipt of packages for the unfortunates. . . . Arrival of Edward A. THE latest issue of A. F. G. E. Progress contains this editorial, entitled, "Defeat That Cut:"

Developments of paramount importance to all Government workers are the order of the day in Congress. Consideration of additional legislation which has for its purpose the further reduction of salaries and deeper slashing of departmental appropriations more than ever before has made it imperative that Federal employes utilize every lawful means at their command to oppose any move that will seriously threaten the standard of living for them and all other wage earners.

Imposition of additional furloughs or a straight salary cut is invidious to all Government employes, but the proposal to reduce all departmental appropriations by 5 per cent is particularly objectionable. As members of the American Federation of Government Employes, we must be interested in the defeat of this Bratton amendment because of its injury to the Federal service and the possibility that the discharge of thousands of our fellow workers whose work is necessary to efficient operation of the Government will follow as a natural consequence.

Our opposition is predicated upon motives of patriotism. We must strive to maintain confidence in our Government at a time when it needs it most, and just as surely as the Bratton amendment or any similar legislation is adopted, just so surely will that confidence be undermined and the morale of Federal workers shattered. Every member of the American Federation of Government Employes must be prepared to do his share in the task before us—to make Congress and the people understand that further cutting of the Federal budget will not represent a real saving but will on the contrary do irreparable harm to our national institutions.

DID YOU KNOW—

Four of the Government departments are older than the Government under the Constitution? These are Departments of Foreign Affairs, Treasury, War and Postoffice. They were reestablished by the first Congress under the Constitution, changing the Department of Foreign Affairs to Department of State. The office of Attorney General was also established in 1789, and in 1870 the name was changed to Department of Justice. The Department of the Navy was established in 1789; Department of the Interior, 1849; Department of Agriculture, 1889; Department of Commerce (and Labor), 1903; Department of Labor, 1913.

"Agriculture is getting the most space in your column. Why shouldn't we? You should know all the smart people in this department. They are even interested in the other departments of the Government. And isn't that the real purpose of this column—to get the departments acquainted with each other? Be interested in your Government and the good work that is being done there."

Fashions in Furs

By IRMA KUHNERT.

I really think
An Eastern Mink
Coat would be
Becoming to me.

For I'm sick of seal
That isn't real
And a rabbit skin
Jacket called lapin.

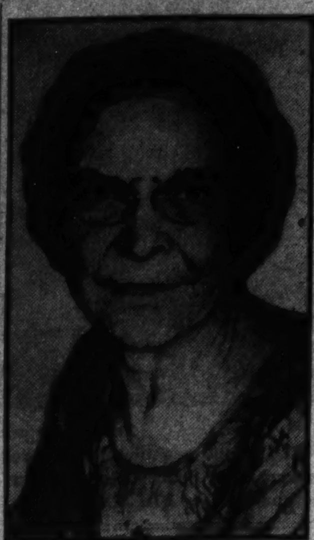
But next year
I'll again appear
In furs not real
Called lapin and seal.

WITH all their designing and planning, architects failed to include a place in the new Postoffice Department Building for the State standards and huge national banner hanging in the present Postoffice structure.

Miss Alice Sanger, flag custodian, sighed as she surveyed her precious banners from the fifth-floor rail, overlooking the vast court. Those flags have come from the 48 States and all Territories and possessions of our Nation that have flags. The Postoffice court is the meeting place of honor for those standards.

And a worthy custodian of those emblems has been Miss Sanger. Started in 1908 by the department, the flag collection grew one by one under Miss Sanger's loving care and watchful eye. It was June 14, the birth anniversary of "Old Glory," when the first flag was hung with fitting ceremony, a musical ceremony and inspiring speeches. "Flag Day" has been the only day in the year when the mammoth Stars and Stripes were furled. Now the huge woolen flag is too fragile even to be handled or cleaned. It must stay there until the request of some museum for its safekeeping is heeded, perhaps.

Miss Sanger tried for many years to keep her proud standards in neat order. They were fresh. They reflected those periods of prosperity we like to think of. They looked the part of prosperity.



MISS ALICE SANGER.

Drooping now, seeped with soot, those flags might well be furled, while we recall the lines from the Confederate poet laureate, Father Abram J. Ryan: "Furl that banner, furl it sadly." • • •

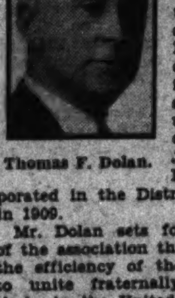
Progress made by the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks of the United States has been due largely to the efforts of Thomas F. Dolan, president, who maintains headquarters in the Colorado Building, Washington.



Thomas F. Dolan.

The organization is not affiliated with the A. F. of L. It was organized in 1899 in New York City and incorporated under the laws of Maryland January 25, 1900. It was reincorporated in the District of Columbia in 1909.

Mr. Dolan sets forth the objects of the association thus: "To improve the efficiency of the postal service, to unite fraternally all postoffice clerks in the United States who are eligible to membership for the protection of themselves and their dependents in the event of death or disability; to secure through cooperation with the Postoffice Department the classification of postoffice clerks, with a view to securing more equitable salary rates, regulation of hours of labor, the upholding at all times of branch association and a mutual benefit auxiliary, and such other objects as may from time to time arise."

Territorial jurisdiction—United States and possessions.

Trade jurisdiction—The classified clerical service of the United States Postoffice (exclusive of the executive departmental office).

Government—1. Executive committee, composed of president, first vice president, secretary, treasurer and the chairman of the advisory board and the finance committee (elected) "shall have complete control of the affairs of the national association not otherwise provided for."

Advisory board (elected) is policy-forming body.

Civil service committee, composed of president, secretary and chairman of the advisory board, acts on "all matters pertaining" to civil service.

2. State branches: Composed of five or more locals in any State, and chartered by the national association. "State branches shall be governed by such rules and regulations as they may prescribe," provided they do not conflict with National Constitution and by-laws.

3. Local branches: Autonomy not defined in Constitution.

4. Convention: Held biannually; enacts legislation and elects general officers. Laws enacted by convention may be submitted to referendum. Constitution amendments by convention, or by convention and referendum.

Qualification for membership—Any employe in the classified civil service who is designated by the Postoffice Department as a postoffice clerk is eligible to membership. Male and female membership.

Agreements—None; working conditions and salary determined by legislation.

Benefits—Insurance (contributory mutual benefit associated within union).

ORGANIZATION.—State branches: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin.

This and other questions on an industry fast projecting itself in importance are easily answered when we read:

"At the headquarters of the Division of Bee Culture, (Bureau Entomology), Somerset, Md., James I. Hambleton, senior apiculturist, in charge, is housed the beekeeping library and bibliography of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The library consists of approximately 2,000 volumes, in addition to many pamphlets, devoted exclusively to the various phases of apiculture. Some of the books were published 300 years ago, as for instance "The Ordering of Bees" (1634) by John Levett.

"At present approximately 175 journals devoted exclusively to the honeybee are published throughout the world, some 80 of which from 22 foreign countries are received regularly by the library."

THEN there was the young woman in a certain department who had left for home and upon arriving recalled she had forgotten to bring along two pounds of butter lying on her desk. Weather was cool and the idea occurred that she might call a watchman or guard and ask him to set the butter on the window sill for the night.

"Who is that?" she asked by phone.

"This is Peters?"

"Peters, I wish you would look on my desk and put the butter I left there in the window, so it will keep. Do you understand, Peters, the butter on my desk? On the window sill?"

"Yes, miss, I'll attend to it."

Was her face a bit red when she found Peters was one of the big guns of the department who was staying late and whose phone she rang?

RESIGNATION PLAN APPROVED IN TOKYO

Cabinet Acts and Emperor Studies Decision to Leave League.

Tokyo, March 11 (U.P.).—Japan's decision to resign from the League of Nations because of its condemnation of her Manchurian campaign was approved today by the cabinet.

Viscount Saito, prime minister, submitted the documents in the case to the emperor, who will refer them to the privy council before his approval is given.

In addition to the two years' notice of resignation, the documents include notification of Japan's intention of retaining the former German islands in the Pacific, which she holds under league mandate. The islands are of vital strategic and communications value and their possible fortification would be of concern to the United States.

There is also a memorandum concerning Japan's participation in the World Labor Bureau at Geneva and in the World Court.

It was announced that the campaign in Jehol continued unabated. The eighth Japanese division occupied Kupeikou, the pass in the Great Wall which is the key to the important city of Peiping in north China. Chinese defenders of the city resisted desperately and many casualties were reported on both sides.

The threat of a Japanese invasion of China proper, with occupation of Peiping and Tientsin, still existed. Foreign Minister Yasuya Uchida said further Chinese raids or threats in Jehol province would make China responsible for whatever military action Japan might be forced to take.

Fighting at other areas along the Great Wall was also reported. Japanese planes bombed Chinese forces extensively.

UNCLASSIFIED APPLE EXPORT BAN SOUGHT

Eastern Growers' Council to Seek Aid of Agriculture Department.

(Associated Press.)

The Eastern Apple Growers Council, a federation of horticultural societies, yesterday ordered appointment of a committee of its members to discuss with the Agriculture Department a proposal to prohibit under Federal authority exportation of unclassified apples.

Certain of the apple growers have been endeavoring to prevent such shipments by "a gentlemen's agreement," into which several steamship companies entered, but speakers at the council meeting said there has been a considerable movement abroad of unclassified stock. The unclassified apples are those not packed as one of the standard grades.

The council reelected Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, president, and John Napier Dyer, of Vincennes, Ind., first vice president. R. T. Criswell, of Chambersburg, Pa., and H. M. Rogers, of Southington, Conn., also were elected vice presidents.

The council is composed of horticultural societies in States east of the Missouri River. Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland, Virginia, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and New York were represented.

QUAKE AID OFFERED BY SAN FRANCISCO

Gov. Rolph Off to Stricken Area and Red Cross Donates $25,000.

San Francisco, March 11 (A.P.).—While a score of cities today dug out from under the wreckage and havoc caused by earthquakes which last night and this morning shook southern California, the remainder of the State quickly mobilized to give relief.

Action began, although authorities of Los Angeles and Long Beach had declined, with thanks, offers of outside aid as unneeded.

Gov. James Rolph, jr., hurried by airplane from Sacramento to Los Angeles, and, with his emergency relief committee, surveyed the devastated area. Rheba Crawford Splivalo, State director of social welfare, ordered all available social and welfare workers of San Francisco and Sacramento to report to her at Long Beach, where she has established a missing persons and welfare bureau.

The Red Cross started relief work. James L. Fieser, vice chairman of the National Red Cross at Washington, D. C., wired A. L. Schafer, Pacific area manager, who went to Los Angeles last night to direct the work, that $25,000 had been appropriated for immediate relief.

Telegraph offers of further aid poured into headquarters here from chapters of the organization in numerous California communities.

Official San Francisco, from Mayor Rossi down, was ready to extend a helping hand "if needed. Rossi instructed Dr. J. C. Geiger, director of public health, to offer the State Board of Health all possible assistance.

"The earthquake is past and now the problem is one of guarding the stricken area from possible epidemic," Geiger said.

Geiger was ready to act on any health requirement. He arranged with the Southern Pacific for use of its laboratory car, now in Oakland, which is equipped for such emergencies. The railroad offered to transport the car with such supplies and a staff of experts needed.

Telegraph Firms Supply Quake Cash

Sending Funds to Coast; Lift Restrictions on Money Orders.

New York, March 11 (A.P.).—The Western Union Telegraph Co. and the Postal Telegraph Co. were meeting demands today for money in the Pacific Coast earthquake area, accepting orders not in excess of $100 each. Both companies were replenishing their funds on the coast by shipping money there in airplanes.

At the same time Western Union announced that it had lifted its restrictions on the value of money orders coming into New York and was now accepting orders as high as $3,000 and more if necessary.

Last week the company announced money orders would be limited to $100 each, because of a shortage of cash brought on by the bank holiday.

Motion Picture Kleig Lights Put on Debris

Los Angeles, March 11 (A.P.).—The motion picture industry came to the aid of the terror-stricken and darkened communities south of Los Angeles during the night by donating the use of their portable lighting plants. Bodies of many of the victims were found in the debris with the aid of the Kleig lights.

Early today 10 trucks of food and medical supplies were sent to Long Beach from Los Angeles to relieve suffering.

Theater Tickets Bolster Price of Missouri Eggs

A theater has offered 30-cent theater tickets for two dozen eggs each, or an increase of nearly 100 per cent over the price paid in cash by buyers.

Dictatorial powers for immediate rehabilitation were conferred upon former City Manager Charles S. Henderson tonight at a conference attended by Gov. James Rolph, jr., and Admiral Richard H. Leigh, commander in chief of the United States fleet.

Henderson, in accepting the appointment, said he would call a meeting early tomorrow with the city council.

Gov. Rolph told the group President Roosevelt had telegraphed him, asking if the Federal Government could in any way aid Long Beach and other stricken Southern California communities. He said the President had suggested that no technicalities be permitted to stand in the way of immediate relief.

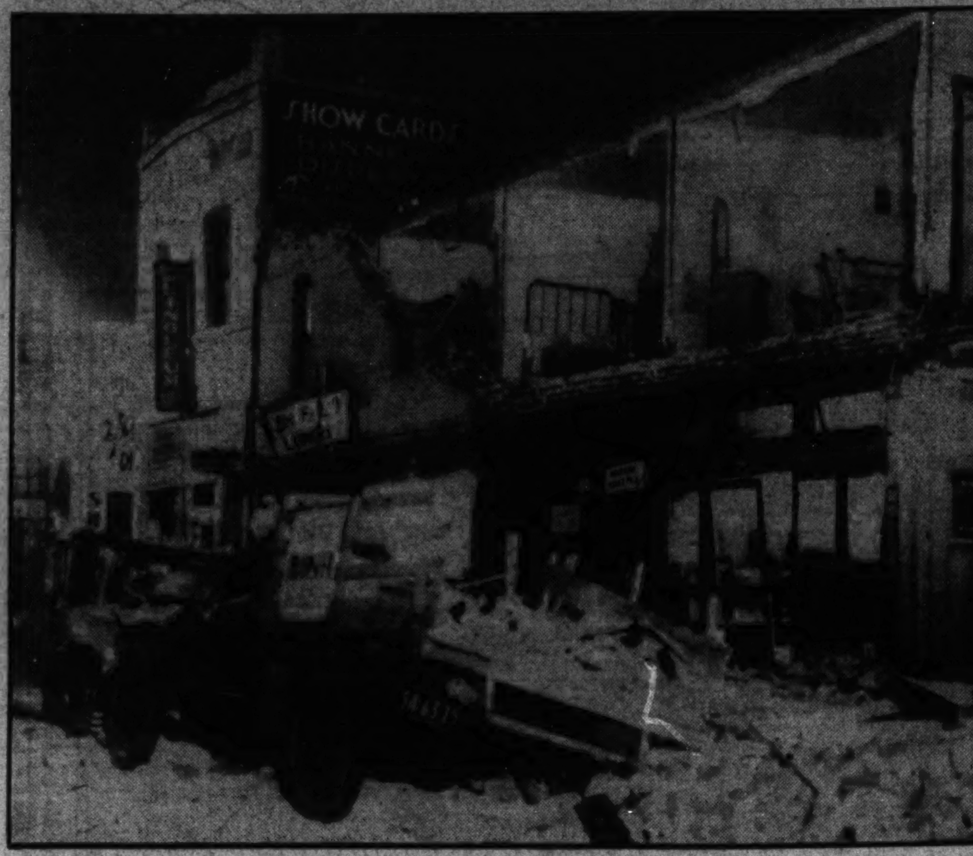
Coroner Frank A. Nance said that but one inquest for the earthquake victims will be held, to be conducted within a week.

The late date for the inquest will not halt funeral services for the victims, Nance said, the only requirement being that persons who can identify the victims hold themselves in readiness to appear before the jury and testify to the name of his or her acquaintance.

Firemen were kept busy during the day putting out more than a score of fires started in various parts of the city. Presence of mind of the municipal gas officials in quickly turning off the gas in its mains on the first severe shock prevented a serious conflagration, fire department officials said.

The only serious fire in the city was that which destroyed the chemistry building of the Polytechnic High School with a loss of probably $100,000.

Destruction Along West Coast as Shown by Telephotos



This graphic telephoto gives some idea of the destruction wrought by the series of earthquakes which desolated Long Beach, Calif., and other communities in the Los Angeles area. The picture was made in Long Beach, which bore the brunt of the temblors. The front of this hotel has been neatly removed, revealing the wrecked interior and scattering debris on the sidewalk.

Three of the more than 130 victims of the California earthquake died here. They were trapped in the wreckage of this Long Beach apartment and store. Long Beach was the heaviest sufferer in the temblor area, more than 60 being killed.

Long Beach Citizens Stick to Open Places

Long Beach, Calif., March 11 (U.P.). The tenacity with which people gathered about fires in streets, parks and fields caused an Army transport to be utilized to bring in cords of fire wood.

This precaution was taken as authorities prepared to shut off electric power lines tonight, because of numerous small bla[illegible] started throughout the day by broken wires.

Earthquake Takes Care Of Hotel for Wreckers

Long Beach, Calif., March 11 (U.P.). The old Virginia Hotel was adorned by a sign "watch it go," placed there a week ago by wreckers engaged in tearing down the structure.

Long Beach to Worship In Outdoor Parks Today

Long Beach, Calif., March 11 (A.P.).—Temples of worship will remain closed tomorrow, but the community church services will be held in four city parks, pastors announced tonight.

City schools will not open for at least a week to give engineers time to examine the buildings. Long Beach also will be without gas.

Hoover Calls Wife To Check on Safety

Pasadena, Where Son's Home Is, Outside of Quake Danger Zone.

New York, March 11 (A.P.).—Former President Herbert Hoover was in touch with Mrs. Hoover and other members of his family in southern California by telephone early today his secretary, Lawrence Richey, said, and was assured they were safe.

Mrs. Hoover is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, jr., who live near Pasadena, outside the danger zone. Richey said the former President will remain in New York a few days longer, and that he has not yet fixed the date of his departure.

Accompanied by his son, Allan, Richey and Lucius Boomer, hotel man, Mr. Hoover took his usual morning walk. The party had breakfast in Boomer's apartment at the Sherry-Netherlands on Fifth avenue, returning to the Waldorf-Astoria about 10 o'clock. Richey said Mr. Hoover had several invitations for tomorrow, but had not yet decided which to accept. He may motor to Long Island for the day.

4 Landslides Seen From Ship's Deck

Passengers Report Spectacle on Shore as Quake Shook California.

San Francisco, March 11 (A.P.).—Passengers arriving here today on the coastwise steamer Yale from Los Angeles told of witnessing four landslides near Palos Verdes, caused by the quakes which shook southern California last night.

The vessel left Wilmington at 5 p. m., and at 5:55 p. m., when the shock was felt, was off Point Vincente. Passengers felt a severe jolt and rushed to the deck, believing the ship had struck a submerged object. Looking toward land they witnessed four distinct landslides as part of cliffs loosened and slid toward the water. One nearly took away the lighthouse on Point Vincente, they said.

The ship was not damaged.

Recent Japanese Quake Was Bigger

Scientist Compares Shocks With Recorded Ones in California.

Berkeley, Calif., March 11 (A.P.).—Prof. P. Byerly, of the University of California here, said today the earthquakes which shook Southern California last night and today were the most severe recorded since that region has become densely populated.

His records disclosed only one previous of as great magnitude, that being in 1857, with its epicenter at Tejon Pass which was felt as far north as San Francisco.

"Last night's temblors, however severe and however much damage they caused to life and property, were not as severe as the recent quakes in Japan," he said. "Southern California's latest quakes did not carry the magnitude of the Japanese quake of a few weeks ago nor was there nearly the energy involved in the great Tokyo quake of ten years ago."

Six Girl Clerks Brave Shocks to Fix Pay Roll

Los Angeles, March 11 (U.P.).—Because six girl clerks in the office of the county auditor refused to be alarmed though the massive Hall of Records rocked depeatedly, workers on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation pay roll received their salaries today.

The girls refused to desert the office and had the pay roll warrants ready for distribution.

Man, Scared by Quake, Runs Without Crutches

Long Beach, Calif., March 11 (U.P.).—A man hobbled into a restaurant on crutches and sat down to dinner.

When the first quake shock came, he forgot crutches and dinner and dashed into the street.

Florida Governor Wires Sympathy to California

Tallahassee, Fla., March 11 (A.P.). Gov. Dave Sholtz of Florida today telegraphed Gov. James Rolph, jr., of California that "all Florida joins me in sincere sympathy and eagerness to assist in any way possible."

number of major shocks to 23. There were numerous lesser tremors.

The tense and jumpy populace steered clear of swaying walls and cracked masonry as the earth shook beneath their feet.

Gov. Rolph, who won note for his relief work in the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906, arrived by airplane from Sacramento. He conferred with local officials on relief action and began a personal survey of the stricken area.

Swift action was being taken to provide food and temporary shelter for the homeless and to give medical attention to the many injured.

The belief was expressed by Edward W. Mattoon, city counsel of Los Angeles, that some of the $4,186,854 advanced to the State by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation March 3 could be diverted promptly into relief channels. Other funds also were available.

The mighty convulsions of the earth left shambles in a part of Long Beach, the largest suburb of Los Angeles. While the earth still rocked and rumbled, the raggedy-nerved populace glimpsed the widespread devastation. A steady stream of persons passed through the aisles of marble slabs in the morgues, searching for missing loved ones.

Other thousands sought safety in the parks of Long Beach. Some of these formed lines to receive food from social welfare organizations, but others sat silent, without appetite. Blue clad United States sailors kept guard over broken buildings, augmenting police efforts.

Others turned back all incoming traffic composed of hundreds of persons hoping to end anxiety over the fate of relatives and friends. A few small mercantile stands did a thriving business, but none of the larger store buildings opened.

The cry of "tidal wave" caused about 2,000 Long Beach residents to flee to higher ground last night, but most of them returned to their places by the sea. There was little to return to, however, in a large part of the city. The new $700,000 postoffice now under construction was badly cracked. Churches and schools were crumbled and broken.

Closed to Visitors.

Los Angeles, as well as Compton and Huntington Park, suffered extensive damage to buildings. The 27-story Los Angeles City Hall, its plaster cracked in many places, was closed to visitors by order of Mayor John C. Porter, who said his action did not mean the building was unsafe, but that it was desirable to prevent crowds from going to the tower. Architects said the building apparently had proven its ability to resist such shocks.

Among the unusual features of the disaster was the death of twelve persons of heart disease while the countryside was trembling. Coroner's officers said the mounting fear of continuing shocks, the feeling that each might be worse than the preceding ones, induced death.

Los Angeles County's 50-year-old red sandstone courthouse was condemned for public use and all employes were ordered out. Many large buildings were cracked and cornices, chimneys, wall plaster and plate glass were crunched to bits in the downtown area.

Earthquake Insurance.

Earthquake insurance specialists disclosed many property owners would have to bear losses even though they carried earthquake policies. It was explained that all underwriters require "deductible clauses" which provide the owner must bear an initial portion of the damage, varying between 5 and 15 per cent. Many property owners, it was said, had reduced or abandoned their earthquake insurance because of economic conditions.

The upraised hand of police did not deter scores of ambitious persons from attempting to enter Long Beach. Airport officials in Los Angeles said some anxiety-ridden individuals were arriving by airplane from points as far distant as El Paso, Tex. Twelve airplanes reputedly were chartered to fly to the stricken city, but whether they succeeded in getting news of missing friends or relatives was undetermined. The fog impeded aerial traffic for a time.

Cots and Blankets Sent.

A crew of 1,500 workers was ordered by Frank L. Shaw, chairman of the Los Angeles County board of supervisors, to go to Long Beach and assist in the recovery of the bodies. A thousand cots and a like number of blankets also were ordered sent there in trucks.

On being informed two or three days would be required to clear Long Beach, Compton and Huntington Park of debris, the Los Angeles milk arbitration board voted to donate to relief agencies 11,200 quarts of milk for those cities.

Earth shocks were lighter and farther apart this afternoon, "which may not mean a thing," seismologists at the Carnegie Institution's Seismological Laboratory in Pasadena reported this afternoon. Hardly was their report in, however, than a sharp, brief lateral shock came at 2:02 p. m. The last heavy temblor was at 8:45 a. m.

Seismologist Is Expecting More Shocks in Few Days

(Associated Press.)

Capt. N. H. Heck, head of the Commerce Department's division of seismology, said yesterday that shocks in the Los Angeles earthquake area may be expected for two or three days, but with constantly diminishing force.

The quivers which are felt subsequent to the main series represent a completion of the adjustment in the earth's crust, and should not be looked upon as forerunners of violent shocks in the immediate future, he said.

Preliminary data on the California earthquake indicate the shock was caused by a horizontal slip in the San Pedro channel a short way off shore from San Pedro and Long Beach. A vertical slip would have caused a tidal wave.

There was a very severe earthquake in Nevada on November 20, 1932, which may have some relation to the one which occurred Friday night in Los Angeles, he said. The Nevada shock was about the same intensity of that which killed many persons in San Francisco in 1906, but the absence of a concentrated population in the Nevada area made it of comparative unimportance, Capt. Heck said.

Reactions

Film Stars Have Amusing Experiences as California Shakes.

Hollywood, Calif., March 11 (A.P.). Maurice Chevalier raced off a movie studio stage set with several swans last night when the first big earth shock struck. The French actor had been recording a song beside a shallow garden pool in which there were several swans.

Marlene Dietrich was autographing a picture for a friend. Her pen made an abrupt line off the picture when the quake started. She finished her signature and dated the picture as a souvenir of the occasion.

Jack Oakie was in a studio legal department debating whether to sign a 50 per cent salary cut agreement. The building began to shake and the startled Oakie seized a pen and signed the agreement.

Carole Lombard was toppled off a fitting stand while trying on an unusually tight gown in a wardrobe department.

Stuart Erwin almost had a traffic argument because of the quake. He had been stopped at a corner by a traffic signal and the driver of a car directly ahead thought Erwin had hit his machine. He left his car and started toward Erwin, but both suddenly realized what was happening.

Lehman Extends Rolph Sympathy

New York Wires Offer of Relief to Governor of California.

New York, March 11 (A.P.).—Gov. Lehman extended the sympathy of the people of New York State today to Gov. James Rolph, jr., of California, and the inhabitants of the Pacific Coast earthquake area.

In a telegram addressed to Gov. Rolph, New York's chief executive wired:

"On behalf of the people of the State of New York I extend deepest sympathy to the people of the stricken district of your State. Please be assured of our readiness for fullest cooperation in any measure of relief or assistance that may be required."

Man's Last Fling On Midway Fatal

Weary Wife Strolls On and Escapes Death in Earthquake.

Long Beach, Calif., March 11 (A.P.). Sterling Taylor's last fling at chance cost him his life.

"Let's go home," proposed his wife, after a tour of Pine avenue pier. "Wait a minute," said Taylor, as they passed a corn game stand, where the first person getting a line filled with kernels won a prize. "I want to play this game just once."

Mrs. Taylor went on and lived. Her husband was caught in the debris and died in a hospital today.

CALIFORNIA WOMEN HEROIC IN TRAGEDY

Collect Automobile Loads of Bandages and Help Distribute Food.

Editor's note—Agness Underwood, who wrote the following dispatch, worked throughout the night in the earthquake area.

By AGNESS UNDERWOOD.

Los Angeles, March 11 (U.P.).—Homeless, destitute, grief-stricken, and even hungry, the women of southern California joined with doctors, nurses and relief organizations tonight to alleviate the misery of thousands of earthquake victims.

When hospitals, with but a few seconds notice, were changed from well-regulated institutions into madhouses of pain and suffering, it was California's women who came to the front to bring aid.

Within an hour hospitals had exhausted all supplies of bandages. Bedding was soiled. Nurses' uniforms were spotted with crimson splotches.

Bedding Collected.

But within the hour, Los Angeles women had collected automobile loads of bandages and bedding and even uniforms to be taken to the stricken area.

Food was distributed at refugee camps within three hours after the first severe quake.

I helped distribute food; gave drinks of water to dying men and women in hospitals; helped mothers hunt missing children.

And many times I rode miles to telephone and telegraph offices to send messages to relatives of critically injured persons.

Searches for Son.

I helped Mrs. Elfa Weers search for her 15-year-old crippled newsboy son, who even yet is missing. She hid her grief by working in one of the many food kitchens established in stricken territory.

The only time real fear was evidenced by the women of the stricken areas was when new tremors were felt. Then many lost their self-control momentarily.

Several earthquake babies were born last night in southern California.

One was Gail Diana ("Earthquake") Dickerson, who came into the world in the flickering glare of a torchlight in an upper room of a tottering Los Angeles building.

Other Walls Collapse.

Another was born to Mrs. W. C. Boyington, of Long Beach. Her child was ushered into the world on an improvised couch in the basement of a Long Beach hospital, while the other walls of the building collapsed.

The pews of a Seventh Day Adventist church were used as beds for some of the critically injured who were removed from St. Mary's Hospital.

Catholic priests and sisters aided in administering to the dead and dying.

I found one mother digging frantically at a pile of bricks that was once her home. She was searching for her 3-year-old boy.

CALIFORNIA'S EARTHQUAKE.

Sympathy from the entire country goes out to California in its hour of affliction. Whenever disaster strikes in one part of the United States the strength of the Nation may be tapped to alleviate suffering. Earthquakes, floods, conflagrations or periods of drought have always brought the American people to a unity of purpose in affording relief.

This disaster overwhelmed Southern California with dramatic suddenness, and yet it was not unexpected. California lies in the most extensive seismic belt in the United States. For many years geologists have feared a major earthquake in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Since that terrible quake of April 18, 1906, which destroyed San Francisco, geologists have given a great deal of study to the California coast. They have traced three major faults, one running through the heart of the State from San Francisco southward. With only a few interruptions this great flaw in the earth, known as the San Andreas Rift, extends for a distance of 600 miles. Displacements are known to have occurred along it for at least 270 miles.

Presumably the current disturbance was due to a slipping of the earth's crust along this fault. Geologists have come to the conclusion that all violent earthquakes are caused by the sudden formation of a new fracture in the earth's shell or by a slipping of great earth blocks on a fracture already existing. It is estimated that these faults or fractures extend into the earth as far as 12 miles. Usually they are not open, because of the pressure of the rock on either side, but they nevertheless represent a complete severance of the earth's crust.

Pressure on the vast blocks of earth that are thus jammed together may increase for many years without any disturbance. When the pressure becomes so great that the blocks are forced to shift the resulting jar shakes the earth's crust, sending out vibrations for long distances. A sudden shift of only a few inches is sufficient to produce a violent temblor. Sometimes the movement is vertical and sometimes it is horizontal, as in the California earthquake of 1906. Separated ends of fences showed a horizontal displacement of from 8 to 20 feet. Other quakes have lifted one block of earth several yards above another, thus making sharp breaks in highways and fields.

Most of the damage results, not from the slipping itself, but from the vibrations which are set in motion by the impact of the moving earth blocks. Successive waves are sent through the earth's crust. When these waves reach the surface it shakes something like jelly in a bowl that is struck by a hammer. Buildings may be shaken to ruins, and water mains are usually disconnected as well as electric power lines, thus rendering stricken cities helpless against fire. Fortunately few water mains were broken at Long Beach, and the city was able to keep fires under control.

NEWS.

When the American public wants the news it turns to the newspapers. Never is this point better illustrated than in times of stress. An earthquake rocks one section of the west coast. The President issues banking proclamations. Congress passes emergency legislation in record time. An attempt is made to assassinate the President-elect. The mere flash of the event may go forth by radio, thanks to the news associations, but the public insists upon confirmation and details, which are furnished by the newspapers. The press, prepared for just such emergencies by years of organization and by expenditures in building up a worldwide news-gathering system, responds to the fullest extent.

Immediately after a great event the newspaper is on the street. It not only carries the first reports, but gives the cause and the results. Nor does its service stop there. Trained employes answer every query. Worries and fears are dispelled by the speedy and accurate information given readily and without charge. The newspaper is a necessity in the lives of all Americans.

THE ECONOMY BILL.

President Roosevelt won a splendid victory in the House yesterday, when the economy bill was passed without amendment by a vote of 266 to 138. One hundred and ninety-six Democrats stood with the President and 92 deserted him. Many of the latter are holdovers who voted for the $2,400,000,000 bonus bill in the last Congress. They seek the veteran vote first, and if the veterans' lobby has no objections these legislators support their President.

Seventy Republicans voted for the economy bill and 40 opposed it. The 40 include holdover members who supported the bonus. They are in the same category as those Democrats whose first aim is to win veteran votes for themselves, leaving the national welfare to take care of itself.

The harassed public, suffering from the hardships of the banking emergency and the delay caused by doubt as to stabilizing the national finances, will take note of the members of Congress who voted against balancing the budget and in favor of enormous undeserved gratuities to veterans who have no war disabilities.

Fortunately the number of House members who have the courage to resist the lobby are now in the great majority. The graft that has drained the Treasury for the benefit of ex-veterans who have no war disabilities is about to be expunged from the law. The House vote makes it certain that no bill will pass which contains this provision.

The Senate Committee on Finance has ordered a favorable report on the economy bill, only two Democrats having voted against it in committee. Some Democratic opposition is expected in the Senate, but it seems probable that the bill will be passed soon. Public opinion is so overwhelmingly behind the President that senators are finding it compatible with their interest to vote in favor of balancing the budget in spite of the open and veiled threats of lobbyists.

The Treasury must arrange a heavy refunding operation on March 15. It is necessary to give assurance that the budget is about to be balanced, if the Government is to obtain money at low rates of interest. High interest rates are equivalent to an increase of taxation—something that Congress is in duty bound to avoid.

An opportunity to protect the public and relieve part of the public burden is now before the Senate. President Roosevelt stands willing to wield the ax of economy. His courage has inspired courage in the House. If senators at this time should be consulting their fears, let them measure their fear of the public against their fear of the lobby, and decide where their greater danger lies. The public is not apathetic now. Its attention is not distracted by other matters. It demands stabilization of the Government as the indispensable precedent to stabilization of business. The citizen's pocketbook is affected. He expects Congress to cooperate with the President in stopping the drain of hundreds of millions now handed out to individuals who have not earned it by any war suffering or injury.

A few senators seeking notoriety may oppose the economy bill, but they will destroy their own influence and usefulness if they do so. If Republicans should seek to block the bill for partisan reasons they will misrepresent the Republicans of the United States, who support President Roosevelt in this crisis without thought of partisanship.

The economy bill should be passed by the Senate tomorrow.

BOGUS ARMS PARLEYS.

The United States Government looks with disgust at the maneuvers of leading governments in Europe in connection with the disarmament conference. Apparently each of those governments is attempting to gain special advantages while pretending to be willing to make sacrifices for the sake of reduction of armaments. Great Britain is anxious to keep the disarmament conference alive, so that the United States will not turn a cold shoulder upon the debt negotiations and the proposed economic conference. France demands new security guarantees, in view of the Hitler menaces. Hitler now must make good with his program for achieving equality of armaments, or suffer a reaction at home that may destroy all that he has built up. Italy supports the German position, both because of sympathy with Hitler fascism and because Germany's attainment of arms equality will end French efforts to dominate Europe. Poland and Germany are moving toward a clash.

Europe's quarrels and pursuit of secret objectives are making the disarmament conference dangerous. Instead of promoting international good will, it is used as vehicles of intrigue, the aim of which is anything but world cooperation for peace by reduction of armaments.

Not a single word or act emanating from Geneva, the nest of war plots, has been conducive of international good will, and no American attending the disarmament conference can truthfuly say that the deliberations have revealed any intention on the part of the governments to reduce armaments. The peoples of Europe doubtless desire peace and relief from armament burdens, but their governments pursue a contrary policy.

BONDS FOR PUBLIC WORKS.

President Roosevelt seems disposed to postpone any recommendations he may have for Congress on unemployment relief until after the budget has been balanced. Rumors that the President will ask for a $500,000,000 bond issue for public works are widespread, but the President remains silent on the subject. It is apparent that he does not consider talk of a bond issue appropriate at present.

If President Roosevelt can force his economy bill through Congress, he will have power to balance the budget for the first time in three years. That fact alone would be a powerful stimulus to business. It might prime the industrial machine and set in motion the forces that are essential to recovery. But if the $500,000,000 economy plan should be followed by a $500,000,000 bond issue for public works, the budget would be unbalanced again, and most of the benefits that are expected to accrue from a balancing of expenditures by revenue would be lost.

One of the foremost reasons why the administration is anxious to balance the budget is that extensive funding operations will become necessary soon. If the Treasury is in a sound position, the Government may be able to save a large sum by issuing replacement bonds at lower interest rates. The issuance of $500,000,000 in new bonds at this time might seriously impair the chances of a successful conversion. President Roosevelt may conclude that a construction bond issue would be unwise until the refunding operations have been completed.

When the Government sells bonds to finance public works it absorbs capital that would otherwise be available to private industry for the resumption of business. It is true that private industry in recent months has not taken advantage of available capital to resume normal production. Fear of the future intervened. If the budget were really balanced, much of the uncertainty would be removed, and industry could be expected to use the capital that otherwise might go into public works at the expense of the taxpayer. It is well known that industry could create many times more jobs than could the Government with a similar amount of capital.

After 64 years' service "Eddie" Savoy, colored messenger at the door of the Secretary of State, retired yesterday. He was appropriately honored by President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull, and department employes. Thousands of foreign envoys and public men have received courtesies at the hands of this faithful messenger, and all wish him comfort and happiness.

Fears of a disastrous temblor on Capitol Hill following the Democratic caucus were wiped out by a sudden avalanche of ayes that seems to have been loosened by some one's big stick.

When their pensions are reduced, the wrong kind of vets might also economize by getting rid of their lobby.

If the Senate will now do its part toward sharpening the economy ax, some clean cutting will be done.

Another Emergency.

A Chat on Earthquakes, by One Who Has Associated With Them.

The sympathy of the Nation goes out to California in the calamity which has visited that fair land. One who has lived through an earthquake never forgets the experience.

Quakes are bad enough under any circumstances, but particularly terrifying when they occur at night. To be awakened by falling objects to a realization that the house may collapse at any moment is a horrible experience.

People who live in regions where earthquakes are common come to be very sensitive to the first tremors. The newcomer is surprised to feel slight symptoms of nausea, and wonders what has made him sick. The experienced resident glances at the chandeliers to see if they are swaying, a sure indication of even a slight shock.

In Spanish-American countries, where earthquakes are common, much of the building construction is of heavy masonry. If a shock is not severe the more cautious ones, at least, urge all present to stand in doorways, where the lintels would be a protection against falling objects, or masonry loosened from the wall.

A heavy temblor that rattles the pictures on the wall and the window blinds and sends china crashing to the floor is the signal for a hurried exodus to the streets. There on the pavements, in Latin-American countries, the Indians and peon classes drop to their knees and remain in prayer as long as the terrestrial disturbance lasts.

It is remarkable how many buildings will pass unscathed through an earthquake that simply sways them gently from side to side. Disastrous results follow when an upward movement occurs at the moment before a building has returned to its perpendicular position.

The physical results of earthquakes take curiously varying forms. Most frequently, after a hard shake, crevices appear in the surface of the earth, varying all the way from mere cracks to dangerous chasms. The next disturbance, reversing this expanding influence, may exert a contracting pressure, and instead of fissures, pavements and sidewalks are buckled up in ridges due to a shrinkage of the earth's surface.

Inhabitants of some of the plains of South America tell of the effects of earthquakes that cause the surface to undulate like waves of the sea. These swells are said to rise so high that an approaching horseman will be hidden from view when he is in the trough of the surging land.

Terrible as the loss and suffering in California has been, it is a comfort to those in every part of the country who have friends and relatives there to know that everything humanly possible is being done promptly and efficaciously to aid the injured and help the needy. Local, State and national resources have combined to render prompt assistance to the stricken district.

SOVIET RECOGNITION

By PAUL J. PHELAN, in a Letter to the New York Times.

Former Gov. Smith before the senatorial committee showed his usual grasp of fundamentals on most of the issues he handled. But on one point he was not up to his par. That was when he said, "I believe we ought to recognize Russia."

Mr. Smith evidently labors under two delusions. He thinks recognition is withheld because we do not agree with the form of the Russian government, and secondly, he considers trade "in the open" a sufficient reason for recognition. When considering recognition of any country neither trade nor the form of government of the country to be recognized is a true basis.

The real principles and the traditional American policy in the matter of recognition has always been based on two points: first, the country to be recognized should have actual and unchallenged possession of the organs of power in the territory over which jurisdiction is claimed; second, the country should have a willingness to perform the duties and fulfill the obligations toward foreign powers ordinarily included and intended by international law as existing between friendly nations. These are generally accepted principles and are proved to be the traditional American policy in John Bassett Moore's "Digest of International Law."

Russian recognition comes down to a discussion of the second of these points. For it is readily admitted that the Soviets have actual and practically unchallenged power over the territory under their jurisdiction. The question is whether they have the willingness to fulfill the fundamental and most commonly accepted principle of international intercourse—namely, tolerance if not respect for the form of government in other nations, and freedom from the stigma of openly declaring and working for the overthrow of these foreign powers.

The fact is the Soviets are not willing to live up to this vital principle. The proof is to be had from the Soviets themselves. The Soviet constitution in its first paragraph declares that "the world has been divided into two camps, that of capitalism and that of socialism." It then goes on to make the important pronouncement that the Soviet states form "a decisive step toward the union of the toilers of all countries into a world Socialist republic." The policy of a government can be authoritatively ascertained from its constitution. The Russian policy evidently is to unite all workers in a world Soviet republic. There is only one way to do this. And that is by overthrowing existing government.

The Soviet government is working toward this end through the Third International. And the United States is considered the most important Government to be overthrown. Hence, the Third International is at work here. That the Soviet government is working through the Third International and that America is the main objective is seen by the speech of Mr. Stalin before the members of the Third International in Moscow, May 6, 1929, when he said: "When the revolutionary crisis will open out in America, this will be the beginning of the end of world capitalism. For this, comrades, we must make preparations * * * placing revolutionary education of the American labor classes at the head."

Notice the "we" and the "comrades" in Mr. Stalin's remarks. He, the ruler of the Soviet government, identifies himself with the Third International and helps them in their plans to overthrow America. Does not the Soviet government by these two declarations, one of its constitution declaring a general policy and the other of its recognized head fostering this policy especially in America, prove the Soviet's unwillingness to rightly conform to the fundamental and accepted principle of international intercourse—namely, tolerance of other forms of government and freedom from the stigma of openly declaring and working for their overthrow? And since adherence to this principle has been the traditional American policy, the question of Soviet recognition comes down to this: "Shall we scrap American principles or not?" I am sure Mr. Smith would be the first man to say "no."

Recognition of Russia is not a question of trade. Nor does it matter if Communist propaganda has had little effect in this country, as Mr. Smith stated. Nor is it necessary to examine the form or legitimacy of the Soviet government. It is a question of whether or not American principles in the matter of recognition are to be scrapped.

The late Calvin Coolidge faced the issue of Soviet recognition clearly when he said: "I do not propose to barter away for the privilege of trade any of the cherished rights of humanity; I do not propose to make merchandise of American principles. These rights and principles must go wherever the sanctions of our Government go."

I can not believe Alfred E. Smith cares to barter away American principles. His stand is puzzling to millions of Americans.

BUILD UP THE NAVY!

From the Providence Journal.

Assurance given by Secretary Swanson that he will recommend building up the Navy to the limits of the London treaty is welcomed heartily. It is unfortunate that this policy has not previously been invoked. Other nations that signed the London treaty have taken larger advantage of the ratios allowed them. Both the British and the Japanese have been much more active than ourselves in this respect.

It is very important that the United States shall make full use of the ratio allotted it before the convention expires in 1936. In all probability some nations—Japan, for instance—will fight hard for a new deal on ratios. The actual size of navies at that time is likely to play a large part in determining their numerical strength for the next few years.

There is no surer way in which the United States can help to maintain the naval status quo fixed by the London treaty than to build up its fleet to the full limits established by that pact. In serving notice that this is to be the policy of the Navy Department under his direction Secretary Swanson deserves warm praise.

ROCK CREEK.

Tomorrow spring will come—her floating veils
Are blown before like sun-entangled spray.
Tomorrow bloom will deck the valley trails,
Where these bright webs have caught and clung today.

The maple buds are all enmeshed in red.
The soft, black earth is spread with emerald-glow;
Forsythia's net is spun of golden thread.

A bird, beguiled by nascent vernal hues,
Breaks into song, that fails to doubtful trills,
When stirring gusts their frostiness diffuse
Through silver swelling trees on sleeping hills.

Reluctant winter stays from yesterday
To greet the heralds of tomorrow's May.

AMERICAN SHIPS.

In the early years of American history, this country was largely a seaboard nation, so the shipping business was of primary importance in the development of local industries as well as foreign markets. At that time American ships carried the greater part of the goods shipped to and from this country. The westward expansion turned the eyes of the new Nation away from the Old World, and in the enthusiasm for highways and later for railroads, shipping fell into a decline which reached its lowest point at the outbreak of the World War. At that time foreign ships were carrying 90 per cent of America's foreign trade.

The handicap suffered by the United States during the war because of her limited shipping facilities, called attention to the necessity of an adequate national merchant marine. The absence of American ships resulted in having to patronize foreign ships charging exorbitant rates. This condition led to the establishment of the United States Shipping Board in 1916, for the purpose of encouraging the development of American shipping. Government aid is required to maintain American shipping, due to the higher costs encountered by the American shipowner as compared with foreign operators. Not only are building charges greater, but crews and officers receive higher pay, and general operating costs are greater.

As a result of the national program for the encouragement of an adequate merchant marine, valuable advances have been made. Whereas but 9 per cent of American shipping was carried in 1914, recent figures indicate 34 per cent is now transported on American ships. The United States had but 112 ships in 1914, while in 1931 the number was 700, rendering regular service to foreign countries, carrying 4,000,000 gross tons and calling at 650 ports throughout the world.

To hold the reins of government aloft,
And drive the conquered self to victory,
The victory that knows full recompense
For things surrendered and for pleasure lost,
That brings us freedom from the baser view
Of life's contending values; with belief

And opens wide the heart in sympathy.
To feel the cosmic pulse of destiny
In every discipline that bows the heart—
This is the life abundant that is given
When from the mind a ruling self is driven.

Many Seen In Mexico's '34 Election

Leaders' Efforts to Silence Talk of Presidential Contest Is Futile.

MEXICO CITY, March 11 (A.P.). Despite attempts of influential political leaders to softpedal 1934 presidential talk, increasing agitation and propaganda for the forthcoming election is under way in Mexico, with more than a score of names of prominent leaders mentioned.

The election will not be held until the first Sunday of July, 1934, but primaries are not so far away. The president elected a year hence will take office in November for a six-year term. He can never be reelected.

President Abelardo L. Rodriguez and all former presidents of Mexico are automatically eliminated from consideration for the post under antireelection laws expected to go in effect late this month.

Political conventions to select their presidential candidates likely will be held late this fall or in January. Definite dates have not been fixed. At present it appears a foregone conclusion that the National Revolutionary party's candidate will be the next president.

• • • •

THUS far former Gov. Adalberto J. Tejeda of Vera Cruz, prominent anti-Catholic and radical, is the only person openly to announce his aspirations and launch his preconvention campaign.

Names of 24 persons are mentioned by Mexico Nuevo, a weekly, in an informal poll just announced. Obviously, many of those mentioned are rank outsiders, although indications at present are that the name of the next president is contained in the list submitted for readers' votes. It includes:

Luis Cabrera, former minister of finance; Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, military commander in Monterey; Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, secretary of war Antonio Diaz Soto y Gama, National University professor; Prof. Federico Gonzalez Garza, former governor of the federal district; Fernando Gonzalez Roa, Ambassador to the United States; Gen. Raul Madero, brother of the martyred President Madero; Gen. Jose Maria y Maytorena, former Governor of Sonora; Nazario Ortiz Garza, Governor of Caohuila; Felix F. Palavicini, former secretary of public instruction; Albert J. Pani, secretary of the treasury; Gen. Manuel Perez Trevino, president of the National Revolutionary party; Dr. Jose Manuel Puig Casauranc, minister of foreign relations; Col. Adalberto J. Tejeda; Gen. Miguel M. Acosta, minister of communications; Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, former minister of agriculture; Col. Carlos Riva Palacio, former Governor of the State of Mexico, and Aaron Sanez, candidate in 1929.

ARGENTINA'S "GRAY SHIRTS" MAKE DEBUT

Heads of Movement Expect 10,000 in Buenos Aires Procession.

BUENOS AIRES, March 11 (A.P.). Fascism in Argentina has emerged in uniform and expects to parade 10,000 "Gray Shirts" in the streets of this capital on April 29.

The occasion is the first anniversary of the death of Gen. Jose Uriburu, leader of the 1930 revolution, which overthrew the radical party regime of Hipolito Yrigoyen. The "Gray Shirts" are the old civic legion, which supported Uriburu's coup d'etat.

In the year since Uriburu handed the presidency to his duly elected successor, Gen. Augustin P. Justo, and sailed for Europe, the legion has assumed more openly the characteristics of faciam, despite pressure upon the government for its dissolution.

Uriburu had intended to study German and Italian fascism and application of its principles to Argentine problems, but died before he could do so.

The legion's manifestations are always linked with homage to Uriburu. After a mass in his memory on the second anniversary of the revolution the Fascist salute was given publicity for the first time by Argentines to an Argentine.

And on February 20, first anniversary of Uriburu's retirement from office, the Fascist uniform of gray, with Sam Browne belt and "overseas" cap, made its debut when a company of legionnaires thus garbed marched to the Uriburu tomb.

Argentina's "Gray Shirts," latest addition to fascism, are shown parading in Buenos Aires, keeping alive the spirit of the late Gen. Jose Uriburu (inset) in whose cause these men fought when their leader overthrew in 1930 the radical regime of Hipolito Yrigoyen.

Justo's Government Feels Pressure for Legion's Dissolution.

The body is credited with only a few more than 10,000 members, although it claimed 27,000 during the revolution. It has no connection with the Fascists of Germany, Italy or Chile.

Although insignificant as a political influence in comparison with the army, it stands prominently in the background biding its time to throw its weight toward a conservative dictatorship if the radicals thrown out of power in 1930 threaten to come back.

Once President Justo was said to be ready to sign a decree dissolving the legion. Then the radical plots of December broke and the "Gray Shirts" came into the open again as a pro-Justo force.

Graduates' Mating Best, Dean Believes

St. Louis, March 11 (A.P.).—Marriages between college graduates are more likely to succeed than those of couples lacking such education, in the opinion of Mrs. Adele Starbird, dean of women at Washington University.

She attributes the difference to the "more congenial interests" of man and wife who are both college-trained.

Mrs. Starbird said that although today's conventions are "changed," the girl of 1933 is neither better nor worse than her mother or grandmother.

Paris Seeks To End Debt Row Quickly

Interest Due Last Year and June Payment Provide First Problems.

PARIS, March 11 (A.P.).—A new phase in Franco-American war debt negotiations is expected by French official circles, now that the Roosevelt administration has been installed.

Joseph Paul-Boncour, foreign minister, chatting recently with newspapermen, said he looked for developments in the debt controversy to move swiftly after March 4.

The first steps are expected to deal, seriatim, with:

The December 15, 1932, interest installment of $19,261,432 which the Chamber of Deputies refused to pay without reservations.

What is to be done with the $38,500,000 slice of the principal due on on June 15 and for which no provision is made in the 1933 budget.

What is to be done about revision of the whole debt which at funding in 1926 amounted to $3,863,650,000 and which has been reduced by payments totaling $486,075,891.

Official quarters frankly expect that a moratorium on the June 15 installment will be declared to last until negotiations are completed. They do not see how debt accords can be reached with Great Britain and France before that date.

• • • •

FRENCH officials profess to see an advantage to France in the fact that Britain is opening debt negotiations immediately. They believe that the English thus will serve the French as "shock troops" and that when the Anglo-American bargaining is over, or at least well under way, it will be fairly clear what France may expect in the way of scaling down.

President Roosevelt's insistence that monetary and economic problems be discussed as well as debts met with approval in Paris, where it was pointed out that this is in line with French policy which regards the debt problem as a unit of a much larger question.

The bad impression made in America by the December default has left its mark in France. Those of moderate opinion declare that the action of the Chamber did not represent opinion of the people and that America should not hold the latter responsible.

Officials are quick to distinguish between "default" and "deferment." They like the latter term much better.

Amateur Moon Map Follows Long Study

Alameda, Calif., March 11 (A.P.).—An amateur astronomer, George D. Baird, has made a map of the moon to round out his studies. The former athlete, who won the 3-mile walking championship in 1883, has concentrated on the study of the moon during the years he pursued his hobby.

The map shows all of the principal features of that dead world of volcanic craters—the great mountain ranges, huge craters and valleys.

Duce Always Right, In Fascist Decalogue

Rome, March 11 (A.P.).—The fascist militia, which has just completed its tenth year of existence, accepts as a fact that Mussolini can do no wrong.

Point eight in the militiaman's decalogue is, "Mussolini is always right." The tenth commandment is that the duce's life must be held dear above all things.

The decalogue begins with a warning that the militiaman must not believe in perpetual peace.

Polish Spy Confesses And Welcomes Jail

Warsaw, March 11 (A.P.).—Confession being good for the soul, Joseph Thaddeus Rudnicki-Rowinski, captain of reserves, gave himself up to the police.

He accused himself of having been a spy since 1928, including time when he was on active service.

He said he had caused the death of several Poles who were shot by Soviet G. P. U. agents. To crown it all he confessed being a bigamist four times over.

His trial took place behind closed doors. No witnesses were called, the man's deposition and documents being found sufficient.

He was sentenced to thirteen years' imprisonment and marched jauntily to the cells, saying that his conscience was clear at last.

Chapel, Shut 4 Centuries, May Reopen

VATICAN CITY, March 11 (A.P.). Pope Pius is said by Vatican prelates to be considering a proposal to reopen the Sancta Sanctorum, ancient papal chapel which has remained sealed more than four centuries.

The ceremony would be one of the most solemn of the Holy Year, beginning April 1. Pius would make a special trip for it through Rome to the Church of St. Salvatore, where the chapel is situated.

For eleven centuries this "Holy of Holies" was visited regularly by the Popes. It contains some of the most precious relics of the life, passion and death of Christ, among them the celebrated image of Jesus, "not made by human hands," which on certain occasions used to be carried through Rome in procession.

Leo X, who reigned from 1513 to 1521, was the last pontiff to enter the chapel and bow before the altar.

It, with the holy stairs, is said to be the only remaining part of the old Lateran Palace, razed by order of Sixtus V in 1589.

They never were moved to the new palace and remain today in St. Salvatore Church. Pilgrims usually visit the stairs, which may be ascended only on the knees. The chapel, tightly sealed, is at the top of the flight.

The stairs used to lead to a corridor of the old Lateran Palace. They consist of 28 white marble steps which, according to tradition, led to the praetorium of Pilate at Jerusalem and were thus sanctified by Jesus' footsteps.

Pius would follow the custom of the earlier Popes, mounting the steps one-by-one in a kneeling posture, praying as he goes.

Migrate to Iceland Following U. S. Ban

Copenhagen, March 11.—The American immigration quota system may lead Denmark to colonize Iceland.

A government committee studying Denmark's surplus population, grown critical because this country's chief field of human export, the United States, is closed, proposed a thorough development of the Northern island.

The population of Iceland is only 106,000. It can support 900,000 people easily, according to experts. Iceland herself would welcome development, it is said.

Up to 1918 Denmark owned Iceland. In that year the mother country gave the island her freedom in much the same way as the dominions are free of Great Britain.

The royal house of Denmark still rules Iceland and its international affairs are in charge of Danish legations and consulates.

The development of agriculture is still somewhat neglected in Iceland, it is stated. Furthermore, Iceland is not as icy as its name indicates. Its temperature this winer has been generally milder than Denmark's.

GALLERY GLIMPSES

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT

Inside, a group of party leaders confer with the President on the banking emergency.

Outside, a group of newspapermen wait for party leaders to stop conferring.

White House guards, trained to keep the portico clear, look askance, hold off. Later they withdraw, discipline completely shattered, as Mac joins newspapermen in harmonizing:

"Oh give me a home where the buffalo roam
"And the deer and the antelope play;
"Where seldom is heard a discouraging word
"And the skies are not cloudy all day."

A new era in White House newspaper diplomacy. And do the correspondents like it?

The House and the Nation witnessed something new in press agentry Friday, when Eddie Cantor was presented to the chamber from the gallery.

OF course Vice President Garner will not admit it, but the transition from Speaker to the second chosen of the land has been a slightly plainful process.

After two years on the House rostrum, he just could not refrain from announcing on his first day in the Senate, not once but several times, "The House will please come to order."

Nor was it entirely unseemly that Senate Democratic Floor Leader Robinson should prompt him on the language to be used in presenting for confirmation the names of Cabinet appointees.

But we were somewhat startled when we called the Vice President's office last week, to hear again Miss Josephine Sterling's familiar: "This is the Speaker's office."

Temporarily, Vice President Garner has taken over the extensive suite at 201 Senate Office Building, converted by the former Vice President from corridor-end to Vice President's quarters. But the suite is destined soon to become just the end of a corridor again. Vice President Garner will move into four rooms adjacent, in the building's new annex.

We almost forgot Charlie Curtis' automobile. Jack Garner assumed he was heir to it along with the office of Vice President. But it seems the car didn't go with the job. The former Vice President dug down into his own jeans to find the necessary cash to buy it, on a trade-in. And now Mr. Curtis wants it back.

THE banking holiday has been used as an alibi for almost everything we can think of, from sidestepping creditors to delaying pay-offs, but Senator Reynolds has discovered a new one.

On advice of physician, he has declared a moratorium on interviews with jobseekers until the banking emergency is past.

Another harried senator assures us he is convinced no one in his State has a job. The State's entire population has passed through his office, he avers.

From now on, watch the Tammany congressional delegation. They are sticking close to Washington. Never have they been so faithful in House attendance.

Jim Ham Lewis cracked the whip. It was a resounding crack, that brought the Senate to attention, startled the galleries and echoed down the long Capitol corridor.

Ever since Jim Ham Lewis was elected whip of the Senate we had been waiting for him to crack it—waiting sort of breathless-like. We knew Jim Ham was not the sort of person to hold a lash and not use it.

But we had not expected it to reach up into the galleries. That was a surprise. Senator Lewis likes the galleries and the galleries like Senator Lewis. It seemed almost treasonable for him to turn on them.

Said Senator Lewis:

"Mr. President, I hesitate to make any complaint against any one anywhere, but I think it is timely in the position with which I am honored by the majority to take the liberty of calling attention to the fact that the occupants of the galleries are received in this body as a courtesy. It is not intended that merriment should be indulged in to the extent that the voice of our leader, or of the eminent senator from Oregon, on the other side, should be drowned out."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Recognition of Soviet Seen As Bringing on Revolution

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our national economic questions are of first importance to the new administration, but in our foreign relations it is doubtful if any reaches further into the future than that of the recognition of Russia. There are at least a dozen angles from which to view this question, and from every one comes a negative reply; and yet some of the leading men in Congress seem eager for recognition.

One objection I quote: "The outstanding proponents of recognition of the Soviet government are either representatives of the purely selfish interests or associated with international political organizations whose loyalty to our Government is qualified by reservations which no patriotic citizen can countenance."

This should include clergymen who seem to be carried into it by altruistic or missionary zeal, with little or no knowledge of existing facts, and the teachers in our institutions of learning who say that "in theory we should admit Russia into the family of nations," but they apply no measuring rod offered by those nations which have made an attempt of communistic practice and without success.

Russia's currency is worthless everywhere outside of national limits, and nearly valueless at home. If our goods are sold there we must accept such goods as they have to offer, all of which are produced by conscript or forced labor, which at once competes with our free labor, living on American standards, increasing our unemployment.

More than that—the very foundation of the whole Soviet structure is subversion of every liberty that we enjoy under our Constitution. They teach that assassination and murder may be employed in the overthrow of our Government, which is the avowed purpose and plan of procedure as soon as sufficient force can be rallied. "Force and violence" is the watchword. Briefly, they propose to break down every function of our Government and to expropriate all property, public and personal, just as they have done in Russia, where those who were in comfortable circumstances are now homeless and without resources; the abrogation of all law, contracts and commitments, and the nationalization of women, breaking down all home life, placing children under state care and reducing our mothers, sisters, wives and daughters to the lowest level known. Social, moral and religious life are banished, churches burned, and the clergy unfrocked and sent to the lumber mills.

Soviet ambassadors and consuls, sales agents and others would bring propaganda into every part of our country, and they would redouble every force now at work for revolution, which it is their purpose to instigate and conduc'. We should not only refuse recognition, but promptly provide laws for the deportation of every alien who advocates destruction of the Government.

Fort Washington Being Restored

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The most important fortress of the Continental Army on the island of Manhattan is being restored to its original form by the City of New York. Situated on the highest ground on the island, the fort commanded a wide view of the Hudson and the surrounding country. Today towering apartment houses hem in the little park and cut off much of the view of the river. The city acquired the plot in 1924 and named it Bennett Park, after the former owner, James Gordon Bennett, whose home had occupied the site. The interest of patriotic citizens and the effort of Reginald Bolton, of the New York Historical Society, have led to the present restoration of the old landmark.

The original fort was of rough stone and dirt, with ramparts and five bastions. Thick and solid, it was well designed to withstand the assault of enemy arms of its day. This fort and the one across the river, Fort Lee, were Washington's main points of defense of the Hudson. In September, 1776, he went to the heights now bearing his name and remained about two months. From Fort Washington he went to the battle of Harlem Heights, which was fought on the present site of Columbia University. Rallying his badly demoralized troops he repulsed the British and Hessians, forcing them to retreat southward.

The victory was only temporary, for shortly after 14,000 well-equipped men under Gen. Howe, Lord Cornwallis, Gen. Matthews and the Hessian general, Baron von Knyphausen, attacked the fort, while British boats fired from the river. Washington, from across the river at Fort Lee, watched the valiant struggle of the 3,000 men in the fort under Col. Magaw against the attacking forces. Equipped with antiquated guns brought from Fort George and some newly cast untried cannon from Connecticut, the little fort held out against the onslaught for some time, but in the end was captured by the enemy. The present work of restoration will re-create the fort as it was at the time of this historic battle.

Domestic Animals Proposed for Zoo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish the suggestion of one of your letter writers of a pioneer log cabin, with appropriate surroundings, as a feature of the National Zoo, could be realized. It calls to mind an idea, which has its advocates, that a well-arranged exhibit of domestic animals at the Zoo would be popular. The city's youngsters would certainly be delighted at the sight of chickens, ducks, geese, pigs, sheep and an old horse and cow and a goat in a Zoo farmyard. I expect a good many country-bred old-timers would go out of their way for a look at the old familiar scene.

Perhaps I am dreaming, but I think the idea would be worth considering in connection with the problem of hard times. It would be worth while if to any extent it increased the sympathetic interest of city dwellers in regard to business methods in farming and the economic stabilization of agriculture.

What better lesson for young Americans than the combination of log cabin and barnyard to teach them what kind of a life it was which in their great-grandfathers' day made this country strong and great?

U-Boat Victims Paid

THE DIPLOMATIC POUCH

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN

New Dean, New Deal.

BACK in the days of Venetian and Florentine grandeur, legates and ambassadors were chosen for their physical appropriateness to the task of representing either the Doges or the Medici. Not since Sir Esme Howard will the Diplomatic Corps have a dean who so exactly fulfills this unwritten law of diplomatic distinction as in the case of the new dean, Turkish Ambassador Ahmet Muhtar. The task of satisfying the exacting whims of the Gazi, or the Gray Wolf of Angora, as Mustapha Kemal has recently been called, is no easy one. However, the representation of Turkish interests in the United States under the direction of the present ambassador has eminently pleased the Iron Man of the Near East.

To a long list of diplomatic successes and honors the Turkish Ambassador has now added the distinction that seniority in the Washington Diplomatic Corps can give. His task it will be to represent the interests of the diplomats and upon his discretion, judgment and tact the settlement of any problem involving the interests of the corps as a whole and the State Department will depend.

Ahmet Muhtar has succeeded in bringing the United States and Turkey closer together than they have been at any time in history. He introduced the sending of American experts to Turkey to assist in the reorganization of the country. This at first provoked some repercussions, not the least of which was the persistent reports launched from Paris that he was to be replaced by Pethy Bey, Francophile, former Turkish Ambassador in Paris. Only in this way could the Quai d'Orsay hope to discourage the growth of American influence in Turkey.

WHEN Ambassador Ahmet Muhtar first arrived in the United States, his presence provoked a storm of criticism because of Turkish treatment of Jews and Armenians that would have well discouraged any other less patient, less tactful envoy. In a short time, however, he had succeeded in mitigating this attitude. This humanitarian attitude had made him the choice of the Turkish government in arranging for the repatriation of prisoners while he was Minister at The Hague, in 1914 and after, in the war.

When the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk was signed, he was appointed by the Porte to be diplomatic representative to the Ukrainian government. First of the deputies of the Old Guard to throw in his lot with the Gazi, he became a leading figure in the first assembly of the Nationalist party in Anatolia. Then it was dangerous to be known as a follower of the Gazi. He became minister for foreign affairs in Mustapha Kemal's first government and gave Mussolini the example of holding three portfolios at once, the ministries of foreign affairs, justice and interior. He went to Tiflis as Turkish representative for the Georgian Republic and was the first Turkish Ambassador to the Soviet government. His success was so outstanding here that he was chosen to blaze the way for reopening Turkish-American relations, and came here as ambassador in December, 1927.

He has the half-lidded eyes of a Kitchener, the aplomb of a Talleyrand and more tact than Olivier, the head waiter beloved of M. Caesar Ritz.

Hungarian Minister Count Lasszlo Szechenyi is leaving to take up his new duties as Minister to London. He will leave the end of this week but Countess Szechenyi and her daughters will only go to London in two or three months.

"What's the matter, count? Are you not going with your wife and daughters?"

"Never," said the Magyar nobleman, "it makes me nervous to travel with five women."

Jugoslavia and Jurisprudence.

THE diplomatic representative of his majesty, the King of Jugoslavia, is one of the most distinguished professors of international law. Dr. Leonidas Pitamic, the Minister from the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, has recently put out a profound philosophical treatise on one of the most abstruse subjects of international jurisprudence. His book is entitled "A Treatise on the State," and in it he makes an exhaustive study of the origins and evolution of the various forms of the state through the successive stages of history.

The first edition of this work was originally published in Slovene by the Society of St. Mohor in Jugoslavia. Since that time, however, the diplomatist author has added several chapters that have to do with the developments of the notion of the state in American institutions.

The volume itself presents some unusual theories that have excited more than academic comment on account of the development of the idea of the Communist state and its place in the history of our own times.

Minister Pitamic was for many years professor at the University of Jugoslavia, where he held the chair of constitutional law before being appointed Minister here.

To the artistic talents of the Diplomatic Corps has been added the rare musicianship of Giuseppe Tommasi, Secretary of the Italian Embassy, whose piano playing and whose skill on the violin was sufficient to bring forth a compliment from Maestro Toscanini at a recent dinner at the Italian Embassy. One of the invited guests to the dinner had brought along in her train one of those amateur singers whose existence is the bane of every sound musician and insisted that she exhibit her vocal prowess before the famous conductor. Toscanini was patient and punctiliously correct. He agreed that the singer was indeed a "great artiste," but when Signor Tommasi unobtrusively sat down later on and played a few bars Toscanini was genuinely delighted. "Bravo, bravo," he cried and the Secretary was forced to repeat.

Night Traffic Class Conducted by Judge

St. Louis, March 11 (A.P.).—Every Wednesday evening 200 or 300 St. Louisans go to night school—and like it. They're students in the traffic school established by Municipal Judge James G. Blaine, and if they miss class they stand a good chance of paying a fine or going to jail.

In nine months 4,000 first-time traffic offenders have matriculated in Judge Blaine's school, have studied their lessons, and have passed the written examination required in order to "graduate."

Not one of the 4,000, records reveal, has been haled into court again for violation of the traffic code, after being educated instead of punished.

The curriculum in Judge Blaine's school consists of four lectures, each one and a half hours in length. Three are given by automobile club officials on the city ordinances, State laws and safe highway driving. The fourth, by Judge Blaine, deals with "minor violations that result in major injuries."

First Tax in 47 Years

Stockholm, March 11 (A.P.).—The economic crisis has intruded on Sweden's financial paradise. For the first time in 47 years the inhabitants of Orsa, in Delecarlia, central Sweden, will have to pay a local tax.

The Orsa community has been tax-free since 1886 when it acquired a large community forest. Income from this has been paying all parish expenses, including roads, bridges and schools.

PRAYER

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Father, guide me down the long
Road of life and make me strong.

Hold me back that in my haste
Beauty may not go to waste.

Calmly let me walk and see
Earth and sky and stream and tree.

Teach me so that I may read
Symbols of my fellow's need.

Let me not press forward, blind,
Heedless, thoughtless and unkind.

Let me some enchantment give
To the years I have to live.

Lord, as I enjoy the trees,
Song of bird and hum of bees,

Stream and sky and plant and vine,
So may this brief life of mine

Now and then some joy bestow
On all those I chance to know.

From a Senator's Diary

By THE 97TH SENATOR

Wednesday.

POLITICALLY we travel in cycles. I recall how a few years ago the reformers used to inveigh against the wicked caucus system. It was branded by all uplifters as a thing of evil, conceived and maintained to assist the "invisible government" in trampling on the rights of the "plain peepul." Back in the days when the progressive movement was getting its start, the caucus was a favorite target for stump orators almost everywhere in the corn belt. Men who walked out of caucuses and declared their independence were decorated as heroes by the home folks.

ALFRED E. SMITH.

And now today we find the Democrats going back to the caucus system as the best method of handling Congress through the present emergency, and we hear the party lash cracking through the corridors of the Capitol with its old-time snap. The caucus, we are told, is to be the dominating force in both chambers from now on. The Democrats have huge majorities in both houses and they are determined to make the most of them. Party discipline is to be restored to its pristine glory. The bloc system, which has been gaining ground steadily for the last decade, is to be relegated to minor importance. With "Big Jim" Farley, "czaring" at the patronage counter, only well-behaved boys will be rewarded. The naughty ones will get no pie.

I think, perhaps, under the circumstances, the restoration of the caucus system is justified, particularly if it works. So far, since its revival, it has worked well among the House Democrats. It enabled them to put through the prohibition repeal resolution. There was only a handful of bolters, and they were permitted, because of the long-standing principles involved, to invoke the rule of "conscientious objectors," so that their party standing was not impaired. The second caucus ironed out differences over the selection of a Speaker and floor leader with rather unusual harmony considering the rivalry for the two posts.

Joe Robinson, our new majority leader, with the aid of his lieutenants, is attempting to set up a rigid caucus system among the Senate Democrats. On measures recommended by the President, Democratic senators are to be bound by a majority vote in the caucus, and two-thirds of the whole number of Democrats will constitute a quorum in the caucus.

On paper, this arrangement appears admirable. But what I am wondering is, what will those two stalwart Democrats, Carter Glass and Morris Sheppard, do when the beer bill comes up? Carter already has served notice that he never will be bound by party pledges when his conscientious scruples are involved. And how can the caucus expect to bind Huey Long or Burton Wheeler when the issue of currency inflation arises?

The biggest selling point for the caucus is the alibi that it furnishes to weak-kneed members for campaign purposes. When their constituents put them on the grill they can always fall back on the plea that the caucus tied their hands and that they had no choice in the matter.

Huey Long's effort to unhorse Joe Robinson as the Democratic leader, as I anticipated, was a dud. Joe may not be a Charles James Fox or a Henry Clay as a parliamentary leader, but he certainly is more than a match for Huey.

Joe moved into the majority leadership—the post Jim Watson vacated with the consent of a big majority of his Hoosier constituents—without much ceremony. About all he had to do was to transfer his offices to a somewhat more elaborate suite.

Thursday.

LEADERSHIP in Congress for the next two years will be chiefly from the West and South. Henry Rainey, of Illinois, is the Speaker of the House. Our new presiding officer in the Senate, Jack Garner, comes from Uvalde, Tex. The Democratic leader in the House is Joe Byrns, of Tennessee. The Democratic leader in the Senate is Joe Robinson, of Arkansas. The president pro tempore of the Senate is Key Pittman, of Nevada.

As if to emphasize this trend, even the Republicans have turned westward for their leadership. Charley McNary, of Oregon, one of the smoothest politicians I have ever known, becomes the Republican floor leader in the Senate. McNary is ideally fitted for the difficult task of leading the minority. He has intelligence and tact and can be counted upon to make the best of the material at hand.

I don't like to pose as a prophet, but—just as I predicted—Dave Reed, in the parlance of some of my slangy young colleagues, didn't get to first base with his proposal to throw the Insurgent Republicans out of the party. He didn't press it because, as he explained, "it was apparent from a discussion with other members of the conference that for a variety of reasons my motion would not carry." I am told that Charley McNary quietly applied chloroform to Dave's motion, explaining in effect "this is no time to be throwing anybody out of the Republican party."

I don't know anything about the personal relations between the presiding officer of the Senate, Mr. Garner, and the presiding officer of the House, Mr. Rainey, but I wouldn't think they would be so cordial in view of Rainey's promise of "a new deal" in the Speakership.

Rainey is a rather outspoken man and immediately after his selection for the Speakership he gave out a statement in which he frankly acknowledged that the House hadn't functioned very well during the last session; that the fault lay in the concentration of power in the Speakership, and that in the future the determination of policies will be placed in the hands of the Democratic membership before they are brought to a showdown on the floor of the House.

Mr. Garner is Vice President now and in no position to snap back at Rainey.

Friday.

IN spite of his reverses, Al Smith still appears to be the most popular individual in American politics. I am quite sure there was no intent on his part to "steal the show" when he decided to march in the inaugural parade, but the applause he got all the way along Pennsylvania avenue from the Capitol to the White House far exceeded that given to any one else in the procession. The roar of the crowds as Al approached could be heard blocks away.

And did Al enjoy it? He fairly beamed. He waved his high silk hat seemingly with as much happiness as if he were being inaugurated President himself.

Al marched as a sachem at the head of the Tammany braves. He draws a clear distinction between the ancient and benevolent society of Tammany and the political organization which bears its name.

No hats are being thrown into the air by the Al Smith faction over the selection of Dan Roper to be Secretary of Commerce in the Roosevelt Cabinet. In the geographical makeup of the Cabinet, Mr. Roper is accredited to South Carolina, where he used to live, but as a matter of fact he has resided in the District of Columbia for many years. He used to be Commissioner of Internal Revenue in the Wilson Cabinet. He is an intense dry and has been a relentless Al Smith foe for years. He was one of the McAdoo leaders in the Madison Square Garden in 1924. In 1928, I am told, he did not go "Hoovercratic," but he most certainly did not take off his coat for Al Smith.

SECRETARY ROPER.

MRS. ELKINS ESTATE VALUE IS $1,000,000

Son Is Main Beneficiary as Will Is Filed Here for Probation.

Mrs. Hallie Davis Elkins, who died in her Connecticut avenue home, March 1, left an estate approximating $1,000,000, it was shown in the District Supreme Court yesterday when a petition for the probate of her will was filed.

Personal property, consisting of $594,800 in cash, stocks and bonds, and other securities make up the bulk of the estate, though valuable real estate holdings here and in New Jersey were valued at $349,141.

Mrs. Elkins' son, Davis Elkins, was named as the principal beneficiary. He is to receive the income from a $300,000 trust fund for life. After other bequests the remainder of the estate is to go to him.

NEW CINEMA OFFERINGS

RIALTO

"THE BIG CAGE." Universal picturization of a story by Clyde Beatty and Edward Anthony, starring Mr. Beatty, with Anita Page, Raymond Hatton, Andy Devine and Vince Barnett. Directed by Kurt Neumann. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Ladeez and gen'lemun. Step right up and see the most spectacular, the most thrilling, the most extraordinary animal act ever performed under big top! Twenty lions and 20 tigers—sworn mortal enemies of the animal kingdom—doing their act under the guiding hand of Clyde Beatty, the world's premier animal trainer! Step right up, ladeez and gen'lemun!

And that, folks, is no circus ballyhoo, for in "The Big Cage," in the sequences at the winter quarters and under the big top as well, there are performed the wildest, the most exciting animal stunts that have ever been screened.

A thread of narrative runs through the picture (but we have forgotten it already), yet it might just as well not be there, for with Mr. Beatty and his training of the big cats little else matters. From the time his 20 tigers are "brought back alive," through the period of training, and the addition of the 20 lions, to the successful culmination of the act employing these sworn jungle enemies, it is a series of thrilling episodes, the greatest battle of wits of man against beast that has ever been essayed by the camera.

Authentic to the last detail—and the details are great—"The Big Cage" describes most minutely the training of the animals, including an unscheduled battle royal between a lion and a tiger, and the precautions taken against any emergency that might arise.

Second only to the 40 packages of potential animal TNT is Clyde Beatty, the only trainer who has ever successfully teamed tigers and lions in the same act. A personable gentleman, Mr. Beatty, and his skill in training these antagonists is no less than his uncanny control of this 10-ton lot of nature in the raw.

"Should Crooners Marry," with Frank Albertson and Robert McWade arguing it out in the affirmative, and a release of the Universal News round out the excellent program.

DIESEL-POWER CAR BUILT AT ST. LOUIS

Builders Say Its Use Will Cut Railway Operation Expenses in Half.

St. Louis, March 11 (A.P.).—A Diesel-powered railway car designed for main-line service, similar to those successfully tried in Germany, has been built in the shops of a St. Louis railway equipment concern.

Rated for a maximum speed of 80 miles an hour, the unit will haul three passenger coaches, its builders assert, at less than half the cost of operating a similar steam train.

First cost of the oil-electric unit is also said to be considerably less than for steam locomotives of equal power. Its makers hope it will prove the "salvation" of railroads now unable to operate profitably with reduced traffic volume.

The new "engine" is more than that in reality. It is a combination locomotive, railway postoffice, baggage and express car. It is 75 feet long and weighs 104 tons.

At idling speed the engines develop 250 revolutions of the crankshaft per minute, and at maximum power only 550 revolutions per minute. This compares with 2,500 to 3,000 revolutions per minute for many gasoline automobile engines.

Engineers who designed the new unit assert a similar but more powerful car, possibly of 1,500 horsepower, can be built which would easily haul on present schedules any of the long, heavy passenger trains operating between St. Louis and Chicago.

Pleasant Plains Citizens Petition House Member

A resolution asking Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), Missouri, member of the House District Committee, to use his influence in having the appropriation for the Monroe School assembly hall reinserted in the District appropriation bill was adopted at the meeting of the Pleasant Plains Citizens Association in the Monroe School.

The secretary of the group was instructed to ask the Commissioners for improvements to Fairmont street northwest, between Sixth street and Sherman avenue, and Girard street, between Georgia and Sherman avenues.

Dave's Song

Camden, N. J., March 11 (U.P.).—David George, a tall, slim mountaineer from Gretna, Va., was formally recognized today as the author of the famous mountaineer song, "The Wreck of Old 97," in a decision handed down by Federal Judge John B. Avis, after two years' deliberation.

Judge Avis directed that an accounting of sales be made under the supervision of a master, who will recommend how much money will be paid to George. The mountaineer claims the RCA-Victor Co. sold 5,000,000 records of the song, some at $1.25 and some at 75 cents.

At the trial George chanted the song without accompaniment and told how he had been moved to poetry by the sight of the wrecked mail flyer, No. 97, which fell from a trestle at North Danville, Va., on September 23, 1903, with nine fatalities.

Iowa State Group To Banquet Friday

Wallace and Pearson Will Be Among Guests at Diamond Jubilee.

Notable figures, including Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and President R. A. Pearson, of the University of Maryland, are expected to attend the diamond jubilee banquet of the Washington Chapter of the Alumni Association of Iowa State College, to be held at the Cosmos Club Friday night.

Iowa State College has contributed three Agriculture Secretaries to the Nation—the incumbent, his father, who served under Presidents Harding and College, and James Wilson, who served under President McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft. Dr. Pearson was once president of the institution.

Among other honor guests at the dinner will be Senators L. J. Dickinson and Louis Murphy, of Iowa. Officers of the Washington Chapter are H. B. Swanson, president, and Miss Catherine Ford, Department of Agriculture, secretary-treasurer.

Virginia Youth Honored at Cornell.

Thomas Dixey, of East Falls Church, Va., a senior at Cornell University, has been chosen as representative of the Southern States and chairman of his section in a movement to develop closer relations between the undergraduates body and the alumni of the University.

Retreat Arranged for Nurses.

"Retreat" program for nurses will be held March 19 at the Washington Retreat House, 4000 Hardwood road. The program will be conducted by the Rev. Edward F. Faresche, director of the Catholic Medical Mission Board, New York City.

PLAN FOR GALLINGER WARD IN FINAL STEP

Contagious Disease Unit Will Cost $540,000 to Complete.

Plans for the contagious disease ward to be constructed at Gallinger Municipal Hospital are rapidly nearing completion in the Municipal Architect's Office under the supervision of H. W. Baker, director of construction and acting municipal architect. The designing work is expected to be finished by the end of this month, but the project will not be advertised for bids until early fall because of the lack of funds.

Modern in every detail, the hospital division was designed with the advice of Dr. S. S. Goldwater, of New York City, one of the foremost hospital consultants in the country. Laid out in a double Y form, the ward building will be capable of the greatest flexibility.

The authorized cost is $540,000, of whih $250,000 has been appropriated. The remainder is contained in the 1934 District supply bill, and is expected to be made available July 1.

There will be 152 beds on the two floors, and in an emergency the eight wing porches may be enclosed to provide an additional 48 beds. These will be apportioned in single-bed rooms, two-bed rooms, four-bed rooms and six-bed wards. This division will enable hospital authorities to separate the various diseases

Each half of the building on both floors will be virtually self-contained, including a nurses station, a serving kitchen, and a dish-washing room. Thus men and women and white and colored patients may be isolated.

The administration wing will be separate from the double Y structure. Besides administrative offices, it will contain a miniature but complete operating room so that emergency operations may be performed without endangering patients in the general hospital.

The building will be adaptable to construction of a third floor whenever the proposed ward proves inadequate. The main kitchen of Gallinger Hospital will be used, but all dishes used in the contagious disease ward will remain in the ward and will be washed in a special room.

The contagious disease hospital will be a fulfillment of the dream of Health Officer William C. Fowler, who has urged its construction almost from the time he took office. At present diphtheria cases are accepted at Gallinger Hospital, and scarlet fever and minor contagious cases go to Garfield Hospital.

RECTOR'S AID PLANS HISTORIC HOME TOUR

Two Alexandria Residences Not Previously Opened Will Be Viewed.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

With the goal of making the annual tour of historic residences in Alexandria a success, plans have already been launched by the Rector's Aid of St. Paul's Church for the event. Mrs. Henry Starr Wattles, president of the organization, is directing the formulation of plans.

Arragnements have already been concluded for the opening of two historic houses which have not been on view during past tours. All of the beautiful residences previously on exhibition, it is understood, will also be included this year.

The spacious and beautiful home of Mrs. M. L. Horner, 601 Duke street, is one of the two not previously shown. This was built in 1795 and was the town house of Benjamin Dulany, a man of prominence. Later it became the dwelling of Peyton Gallagher, a close business associate of Gen. Washington. It has since passed through several ownerships to the present occupant. Gen. Lafayette once made an address from the steps of this famous old home.

The other historic house to be included in the tour is that of Mr. Edward G. Van Devanter, 221 South Lee street. This was built in 1760 and has been recently restored to practically its old aspect. Mr. Van Devanter, an interior decorator, has refurnished the house throughout in period style. There are only a few of this type of residence still extant in America.

$102,984 Contract Let For New Army Building

A contract for $102,984 for construction of one noncommissioned officers' quarters at Walter Reed Hospital has been let by the Quartermaster Corps of the Army to the McCormick-Lenham Co., of Philadelphia, according to an announcement at the War Department yesterday.

The building will be three stories high, and will contain eighteen quarters of four rooms. It will be built of tile with a brick face and slate roof to conform to the general type of recent hospital architecture. The contract calls for completion in 180 days.

Comedy Presented At Armstrong High

Proceeds to Be Used for Scholarship Offered by Alumnae Club.

"The Whiteheaded Boy," a comedy in three acts, by Lennox Robinson, Irish dramatist, with its setting in the town of Ballycolman, was presented last night in the auditorium of Armstrong High School, by the College Alumni Club, under direction of Sterling A. Brown.

An audience of 1,500 was intrigued by the drolleries of speech, the naturalness of situations and the broad human interest of its characterization. The "Whiteheaded Boy," or spoiled child of an ambitious Irish family, dealt with a family-wide emotional crisis, amusing in nature, and averting a tragic outcome by a thoroughly satisfying denouement.

Outstanding among the characterizations were Louise Hill, as "Mrs. Geoghegan;" Samuel Popel, as "John Duffy," chairman of the R. D. C.; Rose Clifford, as "Aunt Ellen;" Audrey Moseley, as "Hannah," a servant; Helen Louise Sparks, as "Baby;" Viola Smith, as "Kate;" Lillian Washington, as "Delia," and Frederick Phillips, as "Donough Brosnan." The proceeds will provide a competitive scholarship offered by the club to a girl graduate of colored high schools.

KOBAK WILL SPEAK TO CAPITAL AD MEN

McGraw-Hill Expert to Talk on "When Buyer Says No" Next Thursday.

"When the Buyer Says No" is the subject of a talk to be delivered before the Advertising Club of Washington at a luncheon Thursday at the Raleigh Hotel. The speaker is Edgar Kobak, president of the Advertising Federation of America, and an active and widely known member of the Advertising Club of New York. He also is vice president and general sales manager of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co.; president of the McGraw-Hill Co., of California, and secretary and treasurer and a director of the Electrical Trade Publishing Co.

Mr. Kobak is convinced that the salesman has heard "no" so often that he fails to realize that the buyer wants to say "yes." He will attempt to prove that President Roosevelt is a sales-minded executive, who knows how to sell his ideas to the public.

Mr. Kobak is a member of the newly formed executive committee for the consideration of intergovernment debts. Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, is chairman of the committee. Alfred E. Smith and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler are among the vice chairmen.

Clarendon Lodge Will Meet.

QUAKE ZONE BANKS TO ADVANCE FUNDS

Leaders in Navy, Treasury and Red Cross Mobilize Aid for Victims.

(Associated Press.)

Under alert leadership from President Roosevelt, Navy, Treasury and Red Cross heads yesterday mobilized aid for earthquake-devastated southern California.

Because of quick work by relief forces on the spot, their task was largely one of backstopping and organizing to assure the damaged communities and their inhabitants of adequate funds and supplies.

But to launch these efforts President Roosevelt was out of bed and busy on the telephone in the early hours, Mrs. Roosevelt helping to relay messages, together with his secretaries. After the orders the President gave, telegrams went out from the relief heads.

By midmorning the Treasury announced it had authorized California banks to advance cash needed by victims, called attention to the authority of Federal Reserve Banks to make direct loans to individuals, and promised that if more was needed it would be forthcoming.

The Red Cross withheld financial policy plans after assuring itself the California branches were on the job for the immediate steps. Later a decision is to be made on what money to send in.

The earthquake had an echo in Congress, where the House directed a resolution of condolence to the people of the stricken area. Another reaction was at the State Department, where Ambassador Debuchi, of Japan, presented in person the sympathy of his government, recalling Japan's great debt to the United States for the millions poured into that country by Americans in 1923, when earthquakes devastated the principal Japanese cities.

After the naval radio carried orders westward, Admiral Richard Leigh, commander in chief of the fleet, reported back that the situation was under control, with landing forces ashore patrolling areas where they were needed to prevent looting.

Concluding his message, he said: "Food serious problem, but organization ready. Wonderful spirit. Cooperation and volunteer help everywhere."

Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, wired offers of assistance to the Mayors of Los Angeles and Long Beach.

The Red Cross expressed quantities of ready-made cotton clothing and bedding to earthquake sufferers in the Los Angeles area and awaited the outcome of a survey by Gov. Rolph before taking further relief action.

Several National Red Cross workers were to be on their way West by airplane last night, Dr. William Dekleine and Verne Moore, of Washington; Robert Shepard, from St. Louis, and E. S. Transue, from Denver, Col.

The cotton clothing was sent from factories in Pennsylvania, Georgia, Tennessee, Texas, Michigan, Virginia and San Francisco.

The shipments to Los Angeles included 108,984 ready-made garments; to Long Beach, 4,176 garments.

From Chicago, 11,040 comforters and blankets were going to Los Angeles, and 660 to Long Beach.

Howard Debaters Publish Schedule

Inheritances and Incomes Will Be Subjects Discussed.

The Kappa Sigma Debating Society of Howard University has announced its tentative schedule to include Ohio Wesleyan, March 23; Fisk University, March 24, and a men's debate with Oberlin, April 5, following a women's meet with the same institution March 31. Howard will meet Hobart April 7, and Morehouse April 17.

The subjects which will be debated are: "Resolved, That no individual in the United States should receive as a gift or inheritance more than $50,000 during his lifetime, or an income of more than $50,000 a year," and "Resolved, That the United States should consent to the cancellation of interallied war debts."

Assistant Prof. Ralph J. Bunche returned to the university last week following nine months' investigation in Paris, London, Geneva and North Africa, covering research in colonial administration, a study conducted for Harvard University under a Rosenwald fellowship. Students in the junior department of the school of music will give a chorus recital at 8 p. m. next Wednesday at Howard Hall under direction of Camille Nickerson.

Holliday's Nomination Forwarded to Senate

The nomination of John H. Holliday, of Missouri, to continue temporarily as Vice Governor of the Philippine Islands was sent to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt. Holliday will serve as acting Governor General of the Philippines upon the departure of Theodore Roosevelt on March 24. He will continue until Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut, now Attorney General in the Roosevelt Cabinet, is relieved to take over as Governor General of the Philippines.

Blaze at Vassar Brings $1,200 Loss

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 11 (U. P.).—Fire in the main building at Vassar College late today caused $1,200 damage and gave the college fire department a stubborn fight for more than an hour.

Two students were making tea when the alcohol lamp they were using exploded.

They ran screaming from the room and turned in an alarm. Students occupying adjoining rooms grabbed up articles of clothing and ran out of the corridor. Later firemen got the blaze under control.

SKETCHES BY INDIAN ARTIST WHO PARADED

of the disarmament crisis, but also of the Far Eastern arms embargo.

(Associated Press.)

An increasingly tense situation in one of Europe's chief danger spots—Pomorze ("The Polish Corridor")—held the attention of American statesmen yesterday while they carefully refrained from any action which might add to the delicacy of the matter.

Officials here noted with some apprehension that apparent tension has arisen between Germany on one hand and France and Poland on the other since the stormy and dynamic Fascist leader, Adolf Hitler, rose to supreme power in the German elections.

While officials were careful not to speak for publication, it was clear that they regarded the situation as fraught with considerable danger.

Definite Bearings.

That the American Government views the recent development as having a definite bearing on the whole movement for limitation and reduction of armaments was plainly indicated. Disarmament with particular reference to the occurrences in Europe occupied the attention of President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Norman H. Davis, American disarmament conference delegate, in their discussion at the White House Friday night. French fears, according to information reaching here, have apparently been aroused by the alleged militarizing of a post on the Rhine which under the Versailles Treaty France contends could not be so employed.

Uneasiness on the part of the Poles was indicated although reports of considerable military activity in the Pomorze were denied.

The French also are said to be alarmed at measures for making Hitler's brown uniformed storm troopers an official German police force.

The developments have brought to the front the most potentially dangerous situation in all European politics, in the opinion of many observers here.

The Pomorze, created by the Treaty of Versailles, is a narrow strip of territory cutting east Prussia from Germany proper in order to give Poland an outlet to the Baltic Sea at Danzig which was made a free city under League of Nations jurisdiction.

A special meeting of the League has been called for tomorrow to consider a protest made by some of the residents of Danzig on the ground the Poles are closing a part of the harbor to commercial activity so that they may concentrate munitions.

Hope Not Abandoned.

It was made clear at the State Department yesterday that the American Government has not abandoned hope that in spite of the disturbing developments a definite agreement upon disarmament measures may be reached.

Officials feel that events may serve to bring the matter to a head and produce definite action where none has been possible before.

The French fear that Germany, irked by failure of the powers to agree upon reduced armaments, will contend that in spite of the Versailles Treaty it can itself proceed to rearm.

The British premier and foreign minister are hard at work in the European capitals upon efforts to save the cause of disarmament and the Roosevelt administration is keeping in close touch with all developments.

Alexander Named Guam's Governor

Will Assume Post in May; Other Changes Made by Navy Department.

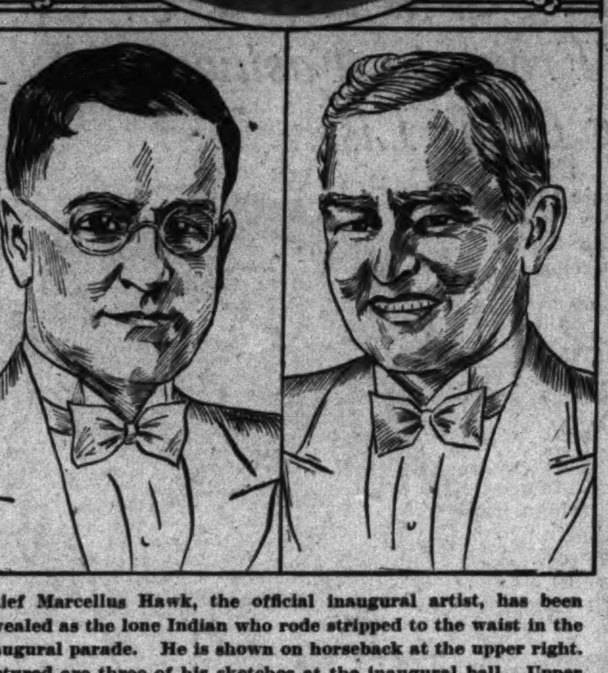
The assignment of Capt. George A. Alexander, U. S. N., to duty as governor of Guam and as commandant of the naval station there was announced yesterday at the Navy Department. At present Capt. Alexander is in command of the U. S. S. Medusa. The change is effective early in May.

The same orders detailed Capt. Chester H. J. Keppler to duty as naval attache of the American Embassy in Berlin, relieving Capt. Kenneth G. Castleman, who has been assigned to duty as president of the general court-martial in New York. Capt. Laurance N. McNair will go to Rome as naval attache, having been relieved from duty in command of the U. S. S. Richmond.

Capt. MacGillivray Milne, former naval attache at Rome, will command the U. S. S. Arizona. Capt. Fred F. Rogers, now in command of Destroyer Division 8, of the Scouting Force, will go to Tokyo as naval attache to the American Embassy there. Lieut. Comdr. Ben H. Wyatt will go to Paris as assistant naval attache to the American Embassy.

Club Sponsors "The Guardsman."

The Business and Professional Women's Club of the All Souls' Unitarian Church is sponsoring the showing of the movie, "The Guardsman," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, 8 p. m. Wednesday in the vestry rooms of the church.



Chief Marcellus Hawk, the official inaugural artist, has been revealed as the lone Indian who rode stripped to the waist in the inaugural parade. He is shown on horseback at the upper right. Pictured are three of his sketches at the inaugural ball. Upper left, Mrs. Roosevelt; lower left, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, and lower right, Vice President Garner.

Brave, Who Rode Seminude in Inaugural Parade "To Bare Heart to U. S.," Is Busy in Conferences Here With Secretary Ickes.

The lone Indian brave, who brought many an "ah-h" and "oh-h" from watchers along the parade route inauguration day, came to The Washington Post last night to deny reports of his sudden death. Rumors had it that his scanty attire during the long, cold ride on horseback resulted in a fatal attack of pneumonia.

Chief Marcellus Hawk, of the Iriquois Tribe, appeared in the line of march stripped to the waist. Chill winds which whipped down the Avenue bothered him little, the chief said.

"My reason for riding clad only in a loin cloth," he declared, "was done for the same reason the white man removes his glove when shaking hands with a friend. I bared my heart to the American people and my fellow man."

It was the same Chief Hawk who rode at the inauguration of former President Hoover. He was clothed—or unclothed—much the same and paraded in a downpour of rain. He was one of the few to whom Hoover returned a salute.

"The Indian voices his allegiance to the original Constitution of the United States," Chief Hawk said, "so I used the sign language to present the patriotic allegiance ride expressing eternal fidelity."

The chief revealed that he would probably never ride at another inaugural. He is returning to his home in New York to carry on the Indians' fight for the rights of their forefathers.

Indian problems have been Chief Hawk's main interest during his visit to Washington. On several occasions he has been in conference with Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes.

It was revealed that Secretary Ickes has shown favor toward Edgar B. Merritt, now an attorney in the Solicitor's Office of the Interior Department, as new Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Mr. Merritt is from Arkansas.

Chief Hawk voiced his approval of the selection. He has known Mr. Merritt for some time and believes he would make "an excellent commissioner of Indian Affairs."

In his home State the chief is noted for his works of art. Not only does he sketch and paint, but former Vice President Curtis once posed for a bust modeled in clay. He was the official inaugural artist.

Try Religion, Plea By Salvation Army

Intensive Revival Meetings Are Being Conducted for Adults.

"All else has failed. Try religion."

With this as a text, the Salvation Army is conducting an intensive series of revival meetings for adults during the entire month of March, according to Maj. James Asher, commanding the District of Columbia Division. Every corps in the city is cooperating in the work and already a surprising number of people has professed religion at these meetings, Maj. Asher said.

Col. William Andrews, of New York City, will conduct the big meeting at Temple Corps, 806 E street northwest, tonight. Col. Williams has been speaking at the various corps headquarters all week and this will be his final appearance in Washington during this campaign. EARTHQUAKE LEAPS INTO TRAP U.S. SET

(Associated Press.)

Uncle Sam's scientists set a trap for an earthquake a few months ago and now a quake has come along and jumped right into it.

The trap—really a series of traps—consists of machines designed to record just how the ground shakes and shivers when an earthquake occurs. A knowledge of this is necessary for scientific construction of buildings designed to resist the "snap-the-whip" effect of earthquake shocks.

Today scientists of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey on the West Coast are on their way to inspect the traps, to see just how much earthquake knowledge had been caught.

Four traps were in the earthquake zone, two at Los Angeles and one each at Long Beach and San Diego. Just how the traps had worked was not immediately known, due to difficulty of reaching points where they were installed.

Earthquake knowledge gained from the records of the traps, etched in the form of zigzag curves on photographic paper, may help prevent earthquake disasters of the future. Chief damage and loss of life in quakes comes from falling buildings and the fires they start.

When the Coast and Geodetic Survey set its "traps" it did not know whether they would be sprung the next day or 20 years hence. Twelve were placed in various parts of the country where it was believed earth shocks might occur. They were set to be "shaken into action" automatically by a quake and start recording its speed, direction and force.

Earthquakes shake buildings in a "double reverse" manner. The top of the building sways one way, while the foundation is moving the other. This sets up a strain that throws off copings, roofs and chimneys, and sometimes causes buildings to collapse. With better knowledge of how this double strain works, it is believed buildings can be stiffened to resist it.

The earthquakes write their own record in the traps. A sheet of photographic paper moves with the quaking earth, under a pencil of light that remains stationery. On the moving paper the light records a curve that is a picture of the earthquake's action.

Quake Pathos and Humor

(Associated Press.)

Tales of tragedy and terror, and of heroism and humor came from the California earthquake area.

Dr. A. M. Firkins, a Compton dentist, was operating on a patient. The building collapsed. He was pulled from the debris dead. The patient, a woman, walked unhurt from the wreckage, the dental apron and towel still across her shoulders.

Mrs. Naomi Ellers, bookkeeper for a Long Beach laundry, fled from the office of the building. She was killed when struck by an avalanche of brick. Had she remained in the office she would have lived. It was the only room which remained intact.

The bank holiday prevented death or injury to scores of others at the same laundry. Business had slowed down almost to a standstill. The 20 women who did work during the day had gone home early—just half an hour before the quake.

The quakes failed to stop motion picture stars from discussing a prospective 50 per cent cut in salary at Hollywood. The players headed for a door of the conference room when the first quake came. Their chairman reminded them "the safest place is where you are." The meeting went on.

Surgeons were handicapped in their emergency work by shocks which swayed their operating tables.

Several hundred Japanese residents of Terminal Island camped all night in San Pedro Hills, fearing a tidal wave.

Hundreds at Long Beach camped amid the ruins of scores of buildings under blankets on lawns, in parks and on vacant lots in the glare of many fires.

A food shortage threatened at Long Beach and Compton, but immediate steps were taken to prevent it.

Telephone and telegraph lines were jammed with calls from anxious Easterners, who sought to learn the fate of relatives or friends.

Throughout the area men and women kept up a steady march through hospitals and morgues searching for the missing, and mostly not finding them.

Earthquakes are a matter of no consequence to old Doc Stork. Gail Diane Dickerson, a daughter of Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. F. D. Dickerson, of Inglewood, was born just as the first earthquake occurred. The lights went out at the hospital and a flashlight was used by the attending doctor.

If it hadn't been for her black cat Mrs. Blanche Morris, 42, of Hollywood, would not be on the casualty list. Frightened by the shock she rushed through her kitchen door, stumbled over the cat and broke her kneecap.

The glare of scattered fires over the stricken area added to the night's terror.

Hitch-Hiker Extraordinary Answers Open Road Lure

"Uncle Jim" is walking again, the good people of Prospect, Butler County, Pa., are saying, and some village wag answers, "Still is what you all mean."

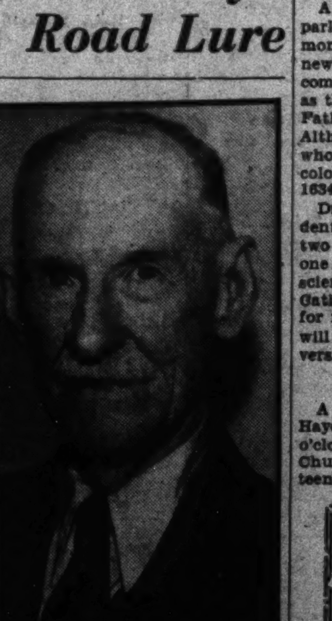
James A. McGowan, burgess of the Pennsylvania town, arrived in Washington for the inaugural and, although he intends to stay for a week or two, the lure of the open road is calling. That same lure, he states, has taken him over 75,000 miles of road during the last four years, despite his 74 years of age.

The "gentleman" hitch-hiker of the roads, Uncle Jim, says that he has little trouble in going from one end of the Nation to the other. Practically the only Democrat in his Republican home town, the veteran road traveler rode 335 miles in 13 hours to lead all demonstrations at the Democratic National Convention with a loud whistle.

The whistle, he states, also comes in handy back in Prospect, where he manages things generally, as the burgess of the town. Explaining his means of getting rides on the road, Uncle Jim said that he always looks like "ready money." Neatly dressed, he picks his cars as they come along the road, and if they conform to his standards of respectability, he hails them.

Entering the vehicle he introduces himself and offers to pay all traveling expenses, and proceeds to amuse the driver by telling witty stories and describing his adventures.

During the recent campaign he hitched rides along the Eastern section of the country campaigning for President Roosevelt. He ascribes his health and long life to being a Democrat.



"UNCLE JIM" McGOWAN.

His grandfather, the first settler in Prospect, bought 400 acres of ground at 15 cents an acre with twelve years to pay for the land 137 years ago. The town now stands on the farmsight, but the traveler, his wife and family of three grown children make their home on 60 remaining acres of the land.

He is staying at the Y. M. C. A. in this city.

PAY CUT PROTESTED BY POSTAL WORKERS

Stabilized Compensation Is Essential, Association of Clerks Asserts.

A protest against further salary reductions was made by the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks yesterday in a letter sent to President Roosevelt by Thomas F. Dolan, president of the association.

Basing their protests on the theory that stabilized pay is essential to the continuity and security of position of the Civil Service Commission, the letter points out to the President that if the pay of employes is to be cut with every economic disturbance, "it would practically mean the end of the civil service," and it also would remove the incentive for men to give their lives to the public service or the national defense.

"Break down these lines," the letter continues, "and you remove the front lines of the defense against the forces of public disorder and destruction, and in an orderly civilization this front line of defense must be maintained if a government is to be secure.

"Government employes feel not only justified but impelled by a sense of duty and solicitation for the preservation of our national life to protest against lowering the salaries or removing any of the safeguards of our civil service system."

Declaring the service system one of the most efficient in the world, Mr. Dolan writes in his opening paragraph:

"It is with considerable fear and apprehension that Federal employes and in particular the employes in the postal service, which I am privileged to represent, learn of the possible action of further reducing the already meager incomes, which by the recent action of Congress will continue to be diminished during the coming fiscal year by the existing reduction of 8 1-3 per cent.

"We have taken a very pardonable pride in efficiently and faithfully performing our very responsible public service, and modestly feel that, by our sincere application, we have contributed to what has been generally held as the most efficient public service in the world."

The crowd which packed several streets adjoining the funeral parlor formed into a procession as the casket containing the man who was shot by Constable Zappa during an eviction riot Monday afternoon was carried out.

The police squads charged, snatching banners from the hands of the marchers. Mounted squads charged down the sidewalks scattering the crowd in all directions. Several men were knocked unconscious. Marchers who continued to the graveside sang the Internationale as the casket was lowered.

Special to The Washington Post.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 11.—St. Petersburg's annual festival of States, one of the South's greatest pageants, will be climaxed this year by a magnificent spectacle, "Triumph," to be presented on the city's beautiful waterfront.

Opening with a procession of illuminated boats on which will be stationed singers and musicians, the pageant will be built around the St. Petersburg Civic Ballet, and directed by Senia Solomonoff, former dancing partner of Pavlowa. The city's leading choirs, orchestras, military organizations and members of the theatrical profession will be included in the cast of more than 1,000 persons.

Beautiful pageantry effects, classical dancing, elaborate state settings and surprise scenes will characterize the spectacle, which will close with a reproduction of the burning of Moscow in 1812 by Napoleon's triumphant army.

Bermuda Islands Without Snakes

Abundance of Flowers and Birds Distinguishes Resort.

St. Patrick may have driven all the snakes out of Ireland, according to the legend, but they have subsequently slipped back to the Emerald Isle, for now a snake is not a rare sight there. The only country in the world which can truthfully assert that it has no snakes is Bermuda. They are unknown there. Bermuda children think of a snake as an extinct monster that lived in the Garden of Eden. If they were to be shown an American rattlesnake, they would probably try to make a pet of it.

The Berumda Isles, lying out in the Atlantic Ocean about 700 miles from New York City, are free from the animal and insect pests which mar the pleasure of visitors to most resorts. There are, for example, no mosquitos. This freedom from snakes and many other pests arises from the isolated position of the islands.

But lacking as she is in snakes, Bermuda has an abundance of birds and flowers. In every nook of the islands one can hear the sweet notes of feathered friends. More than 186 species of birds have been recorded in Bermuda. Many persons think of Bermuda as the land of lilies. That is true; yet there are many other blossoms that contribute to the beauty of Bermuda landscapes. The olenaders, hedges of which traverse the islands, are a mass of flowers from April to August, with colors ranging from pure white to a deep crimson. The passion flower is an exotic plant of great beauty.

Mexico Enriched By U. S. Tourists

$58,000,000 Spent in 1931 by Visitors, Who Numbered 33,660.

"Mexico takes seventh place among competitors for world tourist trade, with a 1931 total income reported at $58,000,000," said Mr. Aub, manager of the American Express Co. "According to the statistics of the Secretary of Commerce, Industry and Work, in the year mentioned 33,660 tourists visited Mexico.

"Complete 1932 statistics are not yet in, but it is estimated that about 35,000 travelers went there last year. Mexico is doing even better than holding its own in attracting Americans across the Rio Grande. Like all new territories which strike the fancy of American travelers, it is becoming a center of group pilgrimages. It is no longer an uncommon sight, both in Mexico proper and in the ancient Mayan cities being exposed by archaeologists, to find groups of Americans taking in the local wonders exactly as similar groups are found along the longer established travel routes of Europe.

"One of the largest of the season's tours is being organized for departure from the East March 10, and the Middle West March 11. The authorities in Mexico are keenly alive to the economic value of attracting tourists from other countries, particularly from the United States, because trade usually follows the tourist traffic."

1933, With Much Leisure, Ideal Time to See Europe

Interesting Events Abroad and Slash in Travel Costs Two Important Reasons Why This Year Offers Tourist Special Inducements.

By DARRELL PRESTON AUB.

The curtain rises on the great tournament of spring and summer life in Europe. The time is the present, the year of 1933; the spectators in the front seats are the Americans who are crossing the Atlantic this year. Never in recent travel history have the front seats been cheaper in exchange for the dollar. Perhaps many of my readers will be among these passengers on luxurious liners which will speed them across the Atlantic in the next few months. They will make port in golden, glamorous lands to find the magnetic continent of Europe this year is electrified with intense activity.

History may be a-borning. Conferences, parleys, state events of high significance in parliament houses and ancient palaces. Diplomatic changes may alter the puzzle-map of empires. Europe may evolve into a different Europe from the one our fathers knew and perhaps lived in. One need not be a student of international affairs to realize that 1933 is an exciting year to be abroad—to remember, to tell about.

Always Glamorous.

The glamour of Europe's island and continental life still lures both young and old. If you seek history, it is at your elbow; triumphs of gothic spires, you look up at Canterbury, at Notre Dame, at Milan; warm blue waters of the Mediterranean, you find Naples, Nice and the Islands of the Blest; fashion, the shops and avenues of Paris. If you seek rare excitements, Europe offers this year an array of events which will attract visitors from all corners of the world—festivals, art exhibits, conventions, carnivals, fairs, sport tournaments, races, opera and processions. Signposts of the charm, variety and interest of life abroad.

Do you like international games? This spring Belgium will play England hockey on April 8 at Brussels. Are you a football fan? The very next day in the same city you can watch Belgium and Holland show you how they play it across the Atlantic. Do you find rowing matches exciting? At London you can watch Oxford row Cambridge.

Italian Auto Races.

Perhaps you're sailing later in the spring. May 1 sees the opening of the Royal Academy Art Exhibition in London, which continues until August 7. Motor racing in Italy and the International Music Congress in Florence in the same month.

Have you ever hoped to play golf on the famous links of Scotland? Gleneagles is the place. To thrill the ladies, there will be ladies open championship contests there May 15 to 19. The International Chamber of Commerce will meet in Vienna May 28 to June 4. The Derby Stakes race will be held at Epsom Downs on the last day in May—the most famous race and course in all the world—a mecca for kings, queens, the rich and poor, all on parade, to see and be seen.

The Royal Agricultural Show, the Henley Regatta, the famous Wagner Festivals at Beyreuth, the conferences of World Federation of Education at Dublin. And so on throughout the European summer, flower shows, colorful boulevards, races, highland games, summer university courses, fashion parades, French watering places, an array of events to magnetize people of varying interests in all walks of life and professions.

Beautiful Scenery.

And for a background, the vivid cities of Europe and its calm and lovely countrysides people by old home folk whose manner of life has changed little through the centuries. Here are the delights of visiting old familiar places, of exploration and sightseeing in ancient castles, in historic towns, and in motor drives through places of startling beauty. Who does not remember where the Corniche road curves like a sickle around the blue Midland Sea or the motor winds cooly through the eternal snow passes of the Alps on the way to the vineyards of Italy?

The travel companies are now busy preparing for all purses and all incomes tours in Europe for the coming summer. These tours will be escorted, and they will be independent. They will include the gay old capitals and the little villages, the scenic beauty spots and the important events. Some tours even include summer sessions at European universities. Economy is the watchword. Extremely low-priced tours are obtainable this year because of the way the steamship lines and the travel industry generally has reacted to the spirit of the times. Steamship fares have been cut drastically, hotel bills figure much less, and everywhere the traveler of 1933 is given the advantage of lower prices. Foreign exchange is at a lower standard, and the American, coming armed with his travelers cheques in United States dollars, receives more value in local money than ever before. No wonder it is now said that in many instances it is cheaper to travel in Europe than to stay home. Europe, in terms of travel cost, is nearer America's shores than it has been for 20 years.

Travel Adds Courage.

Another reason for taking an extended trip this year is that conditions are often such that business can spare you. You return from a European vacation with a new viewpoint, refreshed from the rest and with unexpected ideas and contacts, ready for business. Nineteen three-three may be the last year in which there is this leisure to indulge long-cherished dreams of travel. Next year we may all be too busy.

All the reasons mentioned, the big show, leisure time to see it, lower rates to reach it and take it in, have been operating throughout the last three years, which may be the reason why interest in travel has kept up so well. Certain classes of travel even show an increase. The figures on European travel since 1929 tell the story more graphically than words. As 1929 is usually taken as the "peak" year for comparisons, let us see how European travel fared in the subsequent three years.

In 1929, some 505,600 Americans crossed the Atlantic bound for European ports. In 1930 and 1931 the numbers rose, the former with 618,478 passengers and the latter with 522,365. And in 1932 a total of 502,464 travelers crossed the seas. Half a million Americans, like you and me, who saw their chance, seized it, and discovered that the low cost of travel canceled out what seemed in other years an expense.

Best Opportunity.

The causes which have been operating to stimulate travel to foreign lands during the last three years hold just as good today. In fact they are intensified. Americans who have never been across the Atlantic have in store for them an introduction to the Old World in a most interesting mood, and at a time when conditions have combined to make it not only desirable, but practical and economical to go this year. Veteran travelers have the opportunity to revisit and renew acquaintance with beloved places at a low cost which they will know to be amazing. This is the year when dreams of travel can so easily be made to come true. The traveler of 1933, it can be said, is "playing in luck."

And how can you capitalize this luck? How go about getting under way? Well, first of all, make it a great adventure. In the old days of catch-as-catch-can-and-trust-to-luck, foreign travel, except for a know-the-ropes tourist, was sometimes a disastrous adventure. But today it has been turned into a planned, orderly, organized adventure—from the liner running almost like a de luxe express on steel rails, to the travel company representative who meets you at Southampton, Le Havre, Cherbourg or at any other port you land. Every step abroad is simplified, mapped, made easy—an adventure which clicks like your eight-day clock.

How to Do It.

So I would suggest to you as the first move, decide where you want to go and what you want to do and see.

Second, go to a travel company and get your facts, your routing, your reservations and your tickets. Have it over, done with, off your mind.

Third, procure books, read up. Check what they tell you that is essentially helpful and interesting. You needn't worry about the languages abroad. Good American, like travelers' cheques, passes at face value in Europe.

Fourth, board the liner and kiss your cares good-by.

So prepared, you will find that part of your luck will be a maximum of leisure to do, see, enjoy and bring back a saga of adventure for your stay-at-home friends to envy.

Bermuda to Honor Checks From U. S.

Passage and Hotel Accommodations Are Freely Cared For.

New York, March 11.—Checks for passage and hotel accommodations in Bermuda will be accepted freely during the present money stringency, officials of Bermuda steamship lines and hotels announced today. Checks, however, must be drawn for the exact amount of the bill, for because of the limited amount of currency available, no checks can be cashed.

"Bermudians have full confidence in the basic stability of the American financial structure, and with this in view agents of Bermuda steamship lines and hotels have decided to accept checks for accommodations, to be collected when present restrictions of the bank holiday are removed," Hon. E. J. Waddington, O. B. E., chairman of the Bermuda Trade Development Board, said today before his departure on the new Queen of Bermuda.

"Anyone who has sufficient money in the bank to care for the checks he may write will have the full cooperation of Bermuda hotels and ship lines. If we have no fear of the stability of American bank deposits, certainly Americans should have no fear," said Mr. Waddington. "As far as Bermuda is concerned, bank checks are as good as they ever were."

"Only Game Fish Swim Upstream"

By GEORGE D. RILEY

An old-timer, known as one of the Sycamore Island twins, who has fished the Potomac and its tributaries for the past 55 years, offers some good advice on the use of live minnows as bait for those much-sought-for "big catfish." He says that to be successful in the latter endeavor one must hook the minnow through the tail, since the catfish take the bait tail first and on the first run.

This is contrary to the habits of Mr. Black Bass, who takes the minnow sideways or tail first during the first short run, then after letting it go takes it head first for the final run—the setting of the hook being attempted only on the second run.

In bass fishing the minnow is usually hooked through both lips, sometimes through the back. Eels also swallow the minnow tail first, and are not much enjoyed by bass anglers. Their erratic method of mouthing the bait causes consequent erratic cork action—not to mention more than mild descriptive remarks by the more or less patient angler being fooled by the deceitful bait snatcher.

Every normal human being is afflicted with a hobby or "collecting" mania—be it stamps, ancient clocks, porcelains, tapestries, historic firearms "objects de art" and so on ad infinitum. But the disciples of Izaak Walton, those trout-angling purists who collect fine fly rods, seem to be of the most intolerable variety—especially to their patient and long-suffering wives.

Although all trout anglers are potential tackle collectors, some have not as yet attained the full degree of ambition along that line necessary for "full membership." (George Cook thus far has only "collected" a goodly number of priceless old-time tournament reels.)

No better or more illuminating and mirth-producing story could have been written in defense of the fly-tackle collector than "Fatal Gesture" in the Saturday Evening Post of February 25 by John Taintor Foote. Verily, he speaks our language!

The prime mover in the organization of the Izaak Walton League of America was Will Dilg. The first achievement of the league under Dilg's leadership was creation of the Upper Mississippi Wild Life and Fish Refuge, under an act of Congress of June 7, 1924. Development of this great scenic area along some 265 miles of river, which is expected to include about 190,000 acres of land and nearly as much water, was outlined briefly by Ray Steele at Monday's luncheon of the local chapter, I. W. L. A.

Mr. Steele, in charge of the refuge, pointed out that when present negotiations on land are completed the refuge will include about 125,000 acres of land. Its recreational features are being developed rapidly and are very popular. It is an area of scenic beauty as well as a preserve for wild fowl, fur-bearing animals and fishes. At the present time the fish supply is limited by river conditions such as pollution and erosion silt. With the passing years, the wisdom of Congress in providing for this refuge will be more and more appreciated as a wise act for the common good.

Lansing—The ring neck pheasant isn't interested in travel, but on the contrary dislikes to roam very far from his original home, the game division of the Department of Conservation has concluded from accurate reports obtained from the leg bands of 192 birds.

The 192 reports show that the average bird during the period of a year did not move more than two miles. And, providing the exception to prove the rule, came the report of one bird which had traveled 32 miles.

The figures are based on reports sent in by hunters who shot banded birds during the 1932 pheasant hunting season. The bands were placed on birds raised at the State Game Farm at Mason and released by conservation officers in good pheasant territory.

A total of 5,098 banded cock birds was released during the period between the close of the 1931 pheasant hunting season and the opening of the 1932 season, and of this number, 191 or 3.8 per cent, were reported to have been killed during the 1932 season.

Fifty-five of these birds were reported to have been shot in approximately the same location where released.

The Commerce Department's Bureau of Fisheries is cooperating with State officials of Virginia in establishing State grades for fresh and cured fish, which is the first attempt by this State to establish uniform grades for the benefit of the fishing industry, according to Henry O'Malley, commissioner.

The grading of agricultural products has been carried out in virtually all States with considerable success. Virginia officials decided to try to give similar assistance to those engaged in buying and selling fish and fishery products. Hotel and restaurant owners were among the first to advocate such a development, according to J. H. Meek, of the Virginia division of marketing, who requested the cooperation of the Bureau of Fisheries.

J. R. Manning, representing the bureau, worked with N. W. Broome, representing Virginia, in establishing the tentative grades. It was said that both wholesalers and retailers of fish in Virginia were enthusiastic, and anticipate many economic advantages by the new grading regulations.

TACKLE HINTS.

(From Pennsylvania Angler, February, 1933.)

The rod—Examine the fly rod carefully. In this checkup, particular attention should be given the windings, loosened ferrules, cracked or broken tip joints, or perhaps a guide that may be nearly worn through.

The line—First try the end of the line that was used last season, ascertaining that there are no weak spots. This may be accomplished by taking about two feet of line at a time between the hands, giving it a series of light jerks. The entire line should be checked in this manner. If weak spots are found in the portion used last season, the line may be reversed for use this year. But if doubt exists, a new line is perhaps the most logical solution of the problem.

Leaders—Last year's leaders are seldom trustworthy, if they were used during the season. Leaders that were not used may be given a test by their strength. Preparatory to starting on that fishing trip, it is advisable to soak two leaders thoroughly, placing them between damp layers of cloth in a leader box or paper wrapping. Weak leaders are responsible for the loss of many fine trout each season.

Flies—Selection of flies for a day a stream is of first consequence. It is generally advisable to have at least two flies of the same pattern, and a number of different varieties of flies in the book. A number of strikes on an artificial fly frequently fray it, making necessary a change to a new fly.

The reel—A drop of oil in each bearing of a reel is usually sufficient to keep it in working order. More oil may spread to the line, with the result that a slight film of oil on the water will accompany each cast. Exceptional care should be taken in keeping water from the reel, as grit and sand in water are harmful to reel bearings.

What will President Roosevelt do to aid in restoring wild life?

This question is being asked by sportsmen of three countries, according to a bulletin of the American Game Association; for the United States, Canada and Mexico are mutually interested in a number of species of migratory birds and wildfowl that frequent all three countries. There are some 15,000,000 hunters and fishermen in the United States alone, and several million more in Canada and Mexico.

President Roosevelt is a conservationist. His record of achievement as governor of New York is pointed to with satisfaction and some degree of hope by the sportsmen. They believe that his State attitude may foreshadow a national inclination.

While reforestation holds the spotlight in his conservation activities, Mr. Roosevelt has done much to restore fish and game through the New York State game commission, which he caused to be reorganized. Forestation and reforestation will help both fish and game immeasurably in an indirect way, officials of the American Game Association point out.

Those who are behind the Century of Progress Exposition, Chicago, beginning June 1 next, are very hopeful that Postmaster General Farley shortly will act on the request that a stamp or series of stamps be issued to commemorate the event. However, Farley has not found time to give serious consideration to many applications from every section of the country for special stamp issues.

The Chicago World's Fair people argue that the issuance of a commemorative stamp at this time would prove both a revenue producer for the Government as well as a boost for the exposition.

The great artificial lake to be created by the Hoover Dam on the Colorado River will become a refuge and breeding ground for wild birds and animals under an executive order signed by President Hoover March 3. The new reservation will be known as the Boulder Canyon Wild Life Refuge. Superimposed on part of the land and water area withdrawn for the Boulder Canyon project for river regulation, flood control, irrigation, domestic water uses and power development, the new wild-life refuge will cover a total of about 620,000 acres, approximately 182,000 acres of which will be a vast artificial lake on that part of the Colorado River in Arizona and Nevada.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who has won the hearts and hopes of his people in the brief period he has presided over the destinies of our country, is, aside from a man of action, a real leader, God-fearing, courageous, one of America's foremost minds in conservation of our national resources.

Every field of endeavor aligned with preserving our great outdoors has engaged his heartiest support. An outstanding achievement when Governor of New York was inauguration of a program of reforestation, reclaiming thousands of abandoned farms and continuance of employment for many workers, which is our proudful boast as conservationists.

The overwhelming emergency of financial distress, stopping the wheels of many activities by his immediate proclamation for bank closures, was a sober, determined effort to proceed without further delay to operate upon an already distressing situation. Naturally, a careful diagnosis demanded radical treatment, under which the country could hope to endure. The convalescence is most satisfactory for the patient's return to a sound, sane recovery.

Obviously it is essential at this time to carefully consider the prescribed diet and evaluate food problems as well as protection and raiment of our people, to further secure a more wholesome and permanent recovery, mentally as well as physically.

The mental attitude of our people is happily far better than one could suppose and yet it behooves us to open up every avenue of constructive hope lest we dash them against a perilous rock. Many seekers of relief in the way of official appointments is the result of change of administration, yet precipitation and replacements call for careful regard as to efficiency and economy of taxpayers' moneys.

Third in the line of food essentials we find the fishing industry, and certainly its department in the U. S. Government is highly classified, composed of a Bureau of Fisheries, which throughout the years the commissioner and the deputy commissioner have been promoted through the ranks to their present positions under both Democratic and Republican administrations. Their work is nonpartisan and the very nature of the operations of this scientific bureau would make any break in continuity of service most harmful to the fish.

SO THIS IS RENO

Letters of a Capital Society Divorcee to Her Mother

Dearest Mother: Your Wednesday letter arrived today. It is a great help hearing from you so often. How long are you planning to stay in Florida? I would certainly stay until the cold weather is all over.

I should leave here two weeks from tonight! Today, being Monday, has been a big day, especially as Clare got through and off for the East. Hers was a complicated case on account of a long agreement about the three children and the financial provision for them, so it took 20 minutes from the time we (her lawyer, Mr. Sadler, her resident witness, and I) left the hotel lobby until we were back. Her case was heard in a private chamber, but with the door open into the courtroom so the divorce could read, "Heard in open court." The judge was sitting at his desk when we went in talking to two lawyers who were making appointments with him. Almost immediately they left and the lawyer who was representing her husband came in. Then the judge began: "Case No. So and So, ready with the plaintiff?" Then I left and waited in the anteroom. I can't say her lawyer urged me to stay, although Clare wanted me.

She got hers on cruelty. Mental cruelty. When they lost at bridge or golf he always blamed her, compared her unfavorably with other women, abused her before people, &c. She said the judge asked her the same question I have heard him ask in the court room cases, "And what was the effect of this on your health?" To which one replies, "It made me so nervous that my health was entirely broken down." Then came the agreement about the children and money, then the judge proclaimed that her marriage was dissolved and that they were reduced to the status of unmarried persons. Clare was very grave. (At this point in one of the King girl's divorces she is reported to have said, "Whoopee, judge, now I'm a legal virgin."

It takes a few minutes to make up the divorce, but no one waits for it. It is sent to your lawyer's office, all tied up in pink or blue ribbon and a beautiful gold seal, and you go some time later in the day to your lawyer's office and pay him and get it. Right after the divorce, Clare came up and telephoned her beau in New York. She wore her engagement ring during the ceremony, and it really seems very much like a wedding, except for the groom, as they nearly all wear flowers and all your friends wait to kiss you and congratulate you when you arrive back at the hotel. Mrs. Kaye's mother, the old lady who is keeping the scrapbook, happened to be passing through the lobby when we came back. She started congratulating Clare most heartily, then caught herself up, and added, "since that's what you came out here for." Before luncheon we had a cocktail party and about ten of us had luncheon together, after which we drove out to the club to get her golf sticks and then another farewell party in the afternoon. The lawyer generally comes to these parties to receive his congratulations and to say good-by to his client.

Tonight Josephine McIntyre had a buffet supper in her apartment and we all took Clare to the station for the 9:20 train. On the way out of the hotel the custom is to stop and say good-by to Mr. Sadler and slip him an envelope with $10 in it, which is the usual fee for a witness. Then he says, "I hope you'll come again for a different purpose."

So that's the end of Clare! She carried her divorce in her hand, not trusting it to her bag. Her beau is meeting her in Chicago. They are to be married the day after she gets home. She has changed her plans about marrying in Chicago, as she felt she wanted to tell her children first, but she refuses to wait as long as her mother wants her to.

With much love, devotedly,

ELIZABETH.

6-POINT PROGRAM FOR INDUSTRY LISTED

A six-point program to avoid the political discontent, strikes, lockouts and other labor difficulties that have followed in the path of all previous depressions was presented last night by Lewis L. Lorwin, of the Brookings Institution.

In a radio discussion with Otto S. Beyer, an industrial engineer, Mr. Lorwin said:

"If American labor is to maintain its traditional faith in the progressive and peaceful solution of industrial problems, we must develop a new industrial policy."

Mr. Lorwin's six-point program was as follows: All groups engaged in industry should be permitted to cooperate in its direction; employers and employes in every industry should consider themselves as holding their industry in trust for the public as a whole; the proceeds of industry should be divided in a way to secure a steadily rising standard of living for wage and salary workers; there should be progressive reduction in hours; a system for compulsory unemployment reserves should be established; there should be provision for education and training for industrial citizenship.

NEWSPAPER ADS AID HECHT SALES GAINS

The opening day of The Hecht Company Anniversary selling campaign which began Friday, registered an increase in dollars and cents business of 30 per cent in comparison with the opening day last year.

James Rotto, sales and publicity director of the store, stated: "We have seen more customers in this store buying merchandise for present and future use than we have seen at any time since Christmas. In some departments, our facilities were overtaxed and customers were patiently standing around to be waited on. This campaign has enabled us to put more people to work, to place additional orders in the wholesale markets, to keep our trucks moving, all of which helps the wheels of commerce to roll along."

Mr. Rotto claims that this is a tribute to the optimism of the Washington consuming public and the revival of business has given their employes and the management renewed confidence in the future of Washington business.

Newspaper advertising was used liberally by The Hecht Co. and Mr. Rotto says that this should encourage other advertisers who depend on newspapers to maintain their sales volume.

All sorts of strange currency has been brought out of hiding to make purchases during this sale, The Hecht Co. reporting numerous silver dollars being exchanged for merchandise, old large-size dollar bills, as well as $20 gold pieces and some customers even brought in old copper coins and fractional paper currency of ancient vintage.

GERMANS DRILLING IN GAS MASKS' USE FOR BOMB ATTACKS

Society in Duesseldorf Has Sponsored Preparation by Civilians.

OTHER CITIES ADOPT DEFENSIVE MEASURES

Medical Group Urges Its Members Especially to Study War Cases.

Duesseldorf, Germany, March 11 (A.P.).—Instruction of the public in methods of combating attacks from the air was launched here at the founding of the Duesseldorf group of the "Luftschutz Verband," or "Air Protection Society."

The project is part of a plan that is spreading rapidly in German Cities. In Berlin the "Luftschutz Verband" has been instructing housewives how to save their families from being poisoned by gas bombs.

The Berlin Medical Society urges its members to study diagnosis and treatment of gas cases and in the capital there is at least one fully equipped subterranean gas shelter.

The local group was started after a meeting addressed by former German aces. Their talks were illustrated by action pictures from the World War and "artist conceptions" of the next conflict.

Paints Gloomy Picture.

"There are no means presently available," he said, "to protect a city against a surprise air attack. There are ways and means of protecting the population, and, to a certain extent, the buildings through thorough organization. This organization would avoid or minimize the panic of the population during an attack.

"It is neither possible nor feasible to provide all the population with gas masks. Only those actively engaged in the protective measures during an attack need be so outfitted. For the inactive part of the population, cellers or other places of refuge, afford sufficient protection."

Maj. Somme gave details on the airplane equipage of various neighboring European States, which he contrasted to Germany's condition, military airplanes having been denied this Nation by the Treaty of Versailles.

Maj. Somme said present day bombing squadrons went to 18,000 feet on approaching their objectives This was to avoid detection by airplane locating apparatus. Reinforced construction made it possible to drop planes in a power dive from that height toward their targets.

Instructions for London.

London, March 11 (A.P.).—Detailed instruction in protection of the civil population of British cities against gas attack is being undertaken by the St. John Ambulance Brigade here.

"Make no mistake that with the methods of gas and chemical attack now known, any future war would be a horror for the civilian population," Maj. Gen. Sir Percival Wilkinson, secretary-general of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, said in explaining the plan.

The organization is beginning by instructing officers of its ambulance brigade in the use of gas masks, the treatment of gas casualties and methods of preparing a room to withstand a gas attack.

Matsuoka Regrets Swanson Decision

Envoy Says U. S. Retention of Fleet in Pacific Will Fan Discord.

London, March 11 (A.P.).—Yosuke Matsuoka, Japanese diplomat who arrived here tonight for a week's visit in Britain prior to going to Washington, expressed outspoken personal opinions on Japanese-American relations and deplored Secretary of the Navy Swanson's announcement that the American fleet would be retained in the Pacific.

"I realize the United States has the right to decide her own policy, but as a sincere well wisher of good Japanese-American relations I deplore the decision," said Mr. Matsuoka. "The action is liable to add fuel to the already bad resentment in Japan against the United States. But the Japanese are a gentle people and we control our feelings."

Throughout Mr. Matsuoka emphasized he was speaking as a Japanese citizen rather than as a diplomat.

The class adopted a budget of $400 for the year.

Around the Town

WITH THE STROLLER.

"JUST around the corner" covers a lot of territory. For one thing, in the old days one was wont to go "just around the corner" and with a gusty exhalation decapitate the creamy suds from a schooner of lager.

Of recent years wags have had a lot of fun at the expense of serious-minded statesmen who hopefully prophesied a rosy "prosperity" lurking figuratively "just around the corner."

Getting down to earth, though, there is much to be found in Washington "just around the corner." The bizarre, the romantic, the pathetic, the colorful, the interesting, the historic all are waiting "just around some corner" if one will only seek them.

Take the White House, for instance, inasmuch as the Executive Mansion is more than usual the cynosure of eyes now. Just around a corner or so and one can walk into the watch shop of an old, old Swiss. A real honest to goodness Alpine climber. Now, and for many years past, he has been mending the troublesome insides of Washington's watches. An Old World atmosphere prevails in the Swiss shop, and bright lithographs are on the walls, pictures of Swiss in Alpine costumes and photographs of the old man himself and his clan in the land of William Tell. Stroll around the corner some time and maybe he'll yodel for you.

Let's stoll down town. Just around the corner from a center of busy marts of trade and business is St. Patrick's, with its vine-sprinkled gray walls. Walk inside. Peace. Quiet. An aged woman, probably a charwoman, sits resting in a pew to the rear. Her tired eyes gaze at the ever-flickering candles on the altar and at the saintly statuary softly illumnined. Up towards the middle of the church, an impeccably garbed man of middle age is kneeling. He looks like a business man He is taking a few moments to seek guidance and peace from the turmoil of every-day life—"Just around the corner."

From many of the bits of extraterritoriality that make up Embassy Row on upper Sixteenth street, its just around the corner and a step to Meridan Hill Park, newest of the Capital's greenswards. Here on summer nights cool breezes blow past the commanding statue of Joan of Arc looking down over the city. Dapper Europeans, natty Latin Americans, swarthy Hindus may be seen pacing along or sitting on the scattered benches. Young lovers coo and boisterous boys play—and sometimes steal up and rouge the lips of stern Jeanne of France.

That's what is around just a few of the corners that have come down from the hand of Maj. L'Enfant. Why don't you peer around some?

And this excerpt from a Western Union press release is too good to keep.

"Suggestions have been made that the telegraph company permit certain words to be added free to telegrams. The one suggested most often is th word 'love,' defined as the tenth word in a telegram, but the answer always has been that it might constitute a discrimination in favor of that commodity."

Add similes: As deserted as Washington two days after the inaugural.

How Times Change!

Washington streets are swabbed down every night by a fleet of 12 trucks that go rumbling into the early hours of the morning keeping the good taxpayers from their well-earned rest. Water is forced out through nozzles forward and amidships, on both sides, at high pressure; an operation that cleans the entire street in one motion. The trucks have a capacity of 1,200 gallons, or enough for a herd of camels.

Before motor trucks were substituted for horse drawn vehicles, street cleaning was a real art with the boys of the City Refuse Department. It also occasioned a small parade. Only two men are required to operate the modern trucks, but in the old days it took a miniature army under the command of a supervisor to do a good job.

First in line came a sprinkler, drawn by a team of fine looking horses, groomed as well as their aristocratic brethern of the race track Numbers branded on their necks identified them as property of the District Government. Their sleek hides glistening in the sun, they made a pretty picture stalking majestically down the street.

The vehicle they pulled resembled an over-sized beer barrel, painted gray, with a tin, oval-shaped disk tacked on the side giving it permission to ramble through the city streets. Sitting on an odd, double seat balanced on a pair of still odder springs, the driver controlled two levers which dispensed water through sprays at the rear. This sprinkler prepared the street for a thorough brushing.

Next came wagons, two in number, with large, circular brooms, the same as those used by street car companies in clearing the tracks of snow. When not in action the driver pushed a lever, raising the heavy bristles above street level. One sweeper swirled along a good distance from the curb. The second, following close behind, was nearer the curb and picked up the dirt collected by its predecessor and deposited it lose to the gutter.

Then came a crew of white-coats with long-handled brushes who swept the refuse into neat little piles at intervals of 10 yards or so. Finally came the half ton, or perhaps full ton, dump carts. Two-wheel affairs with square, gray bodies that rumbled along, making a noise like a bass drum.

Whereas the trucks now used not only do the operation with less men, they also do it in less time and just as efficiently. In the old days the boys had to go up one side of the street and then down the other. It was a lengthy process and very often as they came back down the street finishing the job they would see some negligent horse spoil their efforts.

There were five baseball writers at the training camp. One fell from his perch on the water wagon and was missing several days. In the interim his colleague filed stories daily for him, also looking after his mail and telegrams, thinking they had the inebriate's paper completely fooled.

"Please tell whoever is writing your stuff for you to file only 150 words on exhibition games for the final."

Add similes: As nettled as the chap who fails to assemble a jigsaw puzzle after sitting up all night and then sees his young daughter put it together with no more concern than a robin warbling in the sunshine.

Smoot Back Home; Praises Roosevelt

Former Utah Senator Says New Policies Needed in Economic War.

Salt Lake City, March 11 (A.P.).—Reed Smoot, for 30 years a senator from Utah, came home today a private citizen, warm in his indorsement of President Roosevelt's program involving dictatorial powers and stringent Government economy.

"We are in a war against the economic conditions of the world," he said in a newspaper interview. "The President must have far-reaching authority."

Mr. Smoot reiterated previous statements that he will devote himself to his duties as a member of the 12 apostles of the Latter Day Saints Church and his personal affairs. "I have had numerous offers of $25,000-a-year positions, but I'm through with the East," he asserted.

Aviation Equality Pledged Germany

Goering Promises to Spill Blood if Necessary to Regain Place in Air.

Essen, Germany, March 11 (A.P.).—Hermann Goering, minister without portfolio and commissar for aviation, opening an aviation exposition here today, said that as an army flier he had taken a solemn oath to use every effort to restore Germany to her place in the air.

"At Geneva," he said, "our former enemies are attempting to keep German aviation down, but they won't succeed. I have been repeatedly asked to go to Geneva, but have hitherto declined. However, if I go, the last word will be spoken by me.

"We living have a sacred duty to execute, the last pledge of the dead, written in blood, and if in no other way, we must be prepared to redeem the pledge in blood."

Ambitious Plans Formed For Shakespeare Theater

"We Must Make Progress," Says Director W. Bridges Adams, of Stratford-on-Avon House; to Be European Center of Culture; Keeps Sunday Concerts.

London, March 11 (A.P.).—The plans of W. Bridges Adams, youthful and enthusiastic director, for the coming season at the Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford, are the most ambitious yet attempted.

They fall in with his belief that the Stratford Theater, having been endowed by lovers of Shakespeare all over the world, is a public trust not a mere center for routine productions.

Adams sat in the Garrick Club the other day and spoke of his program.

"We had last year, a success twice as good as ever in the past. In spite of world depression and general unrest, the new house was crowded. Not only with overseas visitors, from the United States and from all of Europe, but with British people.

"So it seemed possible, when we began to think of this season, that we could rest on our laurels. We could repeat our successful enterprise in terms of last year—and probably go on like that for years to come."

He smiled and added:

"If that had been our committee's decision, it would have been carried out without me.

"I feel that we must progress. We must make of the theater at Stratford a real European center of culture, a place of experiment, of novelty, of brilliance. Other dramatists than Shakespeare must be included in our considerations, other arts than the drama—for instance music, and the ballet

"This year we are continuing our Sunday concerts, making Stratford a center for fine music, and enlarging on them.

"We are inviting guest directors. We are playing a continuous season instead of the two formerly broken by a closed house during June."

Six plays will comprise the repertoire during the first six weeks of the season which commences April 17, instead of on the poet's birthday, April 23, as formerly. The plays are "Macbeth," "As You Like It," "Coriolanus," "Much Ado About Nothing," "King Richard II," and "The Merchant of Venice."

Thereupon "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Romeo and Juliet" will be added, as well as two plays out of the three, "Hamlet," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

Komisarjevsky has been invited to direct "The Merchant of Venice" and "Macbeth." Tyrone Guthrie will direct "King Richard II."

REICH TRADE POLICY SURE OF DISCUSSION AT SWEDEN PARLEY

TALK OF TARIFF FIGHT WITH GERMANY RISES

Press Makes It Plain Strong Action Will Be Taken if Necessary.

Stockholm, March 11 (A.P.).—The possible suggestions and requests of the Scandinavian nations to the forthcoming world conference, including a growing grievance against Germany's trade policies, are expected to be discussed here at a meeting soon of delegates from member nations of the Oslo convention, including representatives from Holland and Belgium.

The meeting is at the invitation of Sweden, the date yet to be announced. The fact that the invitation suggested a gathering "one or two months before the world economic conference" is regarded as the first open sign that the Scandinavian states, through the Oslo convention, may present a united front at the world gathering.

That trade with Germany will be discussed by the Oslo delegates is looked upon as certain. Recent tariff increases by Germany on certain imports of livestock, dressed meats and lard are looked upon with disfavor by the Scandinavian press, and there is the openly expressed fear that Germany is planning to restrict imports of timber and paper products.

As a result there is growing feeling that Germany is selfishly unappreciative of its Scandinavian market, and talk of a trade war is gaining ground. In Norway, the newspaper Nationen, official organ of the Farmers' Party, had declared editorially that it is time the member nations of the Oslo convention took "united action with regard to Germany's trade tactics."

In Denmark the newspaper Dagbladet Borsen writes: "How long can the play continue? How long can Germany, which cannot pay its loans from foreign countries, and which has received debt moratoriums from all sides, afford to set aside its best markets by its trade policies?"

Sweden, since its trade agreement with Germany expired on February 15, has boosted tariffs on a number of imports from Germany, including flowers, textiles, skins and certain luxury articles.

In general, this has been accomplished by reverting to the tariff standards which prevailed before the lapsed trade agreement was signed in 1926, and the Swedish government has insisted the increases cannot be called retaliatory .

The Swedish press has declared for some time that Sweden does not want to be forced into a tariff war with Germany, but also has made it plain that strong action will be taken if necessary.

Writing editorially in the newspaper, Social-Demokraten, Anders Orne, one of Sweden's delegates in the unsuccessful negotiations for a new Swedish-German trade agreement, declares:

"We have no desire to take the offensive in commercial-political measures against Germany. But if we are attacked on any essential point we shall defend ourselves to the utmost. Of the necessity of this, as far as the conditions are known to me, there is no difference of opinion among our people."

The Oslo convention was formed a year ago at a meeting of prime ministers at Oslo, Norway, and embodies an agreement that the member nations will give proper notice to each other in changing tariff policies or in the matter of tariff increases. It has long been regarded, however, as the framework for aggressive united action if conditions make such action necessary.

Shipping at San Pedro Further Tied Up by Fog

San Pedro, Calif., March 11 (A.P.). Shipping at the local harbor was delayed this morning, a dense fog making it impossible to take soundings necessary to ascertain the positions of main channels changed by earthquake shocks.

Several ships managed to navigate the harbor in and out of the harbor last night. No damage to shipping was reported.

NAVY'S NEW AIR QUEEN IS CHRISTENED

The Navy's new air giant, the Macon, sister ship to the Akron, was christened at Akron, Ohio, yesterday by Mrs. William A. Moffett, wife of the rear admiral who directs the Navy's aeronautics. Commander Alger H. Dresel (insert below) is being detached from commander's post on the Akron to be skipper of the new ship.

MACON CHRISTENED BY MOFFETT'S WIFE

Akron, Ohio, March 11 (A.P.).—Hailed by President Roosevelt as completing the Navy's five-year aviation program, the U. S. S. Macon, second of the two largest airships in the world, was christened today, while a March snow swirled outside.

Braving subfreezing temperatures, several hundred of the Nation's air-minded stood in the frigid 8½-acre dock while a 325-piece band, recruited from Akron's high schools, played patriotic music. Upon a flag-draped stand under the Macon's giant bow, Mrs. W. A. Moffett, wife of Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics, pulled a silken red, white and blue cord and pronounced, "I christen thee Macon."

Pigeons Are Released.

At the signal, 48 pigeons, emblematic of the ship's dedication to the Nation and to her element, the air, were released. Two of them headed for Macon, Ga., 500 miles away in the warm Southland, the rest for Akron nests.

At the same instant, a picked ground crew released the cables and the 785-foot length of the mammoth Macon billowed gently upward in the hazy atmosphere of the air dock's "sky." The Macon was officially "air-borne."

Immediately, she was made fast again to be made ready for the first trial flights, tentatively set for March 30.

Almost as eager to be off as the two homing pigeons was a group of 80 of the most beautiful girls from Macon, Ga., who shivered throughout the ceremonies, but decided to stay for the dinner and ball tonight given by the Akron Women's Chapter of the National Aeronautic Association.

Macon Mayor Present.

They were accompanied by C. Glen Toole, Mayor of Macon, who presented a silver service to the new ship's captain, Alger H. Dresel.

President Roosevelt telegraphed Rear Admiral Moffett: "It must be a source of gratification to you because of the splendid and continuous record you have made as chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics since it was created in 1921 to be able today to complete the Navy's five-year aviation program by christening the U. S. S. Macon, at Akron, Ohio. I congratulate you."

The Macon, sister ship to the U. S. S. Akron, was started in December, 1931, a few weeks after the Akron was accepted by the Navy. Designed as the largest, fastest and safest airships afloat, they are nearly twice the size of the Graf Zeppelin and almost three times that of the Los Angeles.

3,710 Days' Care Given At Children's Hospital

During February the Children's Hospital gave 3,710 hospital days care to house patients, according to statistics made public yesterday by Miss Mattie Gibson, superintendent. The statistics also show 3,110 visits to the dispensary, where treatments corresponding to doctors' office care are given and where 369 emergency cases were cared for, and 965 visits to the Child Welfare Department for the prevention of disease.

The hospital has admitted ten students for the post-graduate course in pediatrical nursing. This is the first class in the new graduate school which is, for the next few years, to replace the Children's Hospital School of Nursing.

Baden Put Under Federal Authority

Karlsruhe, Germany, March 11 (A. P.).—Robert Wagner, federal commissioner, today took over executive duties for the whole state of Baden a few hours after a concordat with the Holy See had been solemnly confirmed by an exchange of documents.

The exchange was made in the presence of members of the Baden government, leaders of the Evangelical Church and Msgr. Cesare Orsenigo, papal nuncio.

State President Joseph Schmitt said, "the state has been placed under police protection."

Appendicitis Victim Is Flown to Shore

The Acamar, flying from Miami, contacted the Kemp off Ponce de Leon at 1 p. m., and landed here on the return flight at 5 p. m.

Hippman, whose home is in Dallas, Tex., was taken to Jackson Memorial Hospital, where authorities said he probably would be operated on tonight.

200,000 JOBS HINGE ON REICH ELECTION

Goering Pledges Clean-Up of Commune Graft and Return of Spoils.

Berlin, March 11 (A.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's iron broom will be wielded more vigorously than ever tomorrow when two more elections will be held throughout the Reich. These are the provincial and municipal-communal elections.

It is estimated that the fate of 200,000 office holders will be at stake. Approximately a million candidates are running for the places.

In Berlin alone, where the Communists hitherto have been dominant, 7,403 candidates are running for 225 municipal offices and 780 other jobs in Greater Berlin's 20 districts.

The fate of anti-National Socialist councilmen and other officials may be imagined from a speech delivered yesterday by Hermann Goering, minister without portfolio, at Essen.

"This coming Sunday there will be a big cleanout and it will only be the beginning," Capt. Goering said. "The German communes, once the strength of the German people, are ruined and overburdened by debt. The worst form of corruption has been rampant.

"I have prepared a decree, called the anticorruption decree, which will tear up the present accursed system of graft, root and branch."

The cabinet minister intimated that his measures would be retroactive and that persons found guilty of graft would be called upon to refund their spoils. He hinted that the pensions of such offenders might be revoked.

Chancellor Hitler, in a final campaign appeal to the Nation, asserted that solidarity in Germany must come before solidarity with foreign powers.

MOTORIST LIABILITY LAW SOUGHT AGAIN

McLeod Reintroduces Bill That Died in Senate at Last Session.

Representative Clarence J. McLeod (Republican), Michigan, yesterday renewed his fight to require District automobile owners to take out liability insurance, in one of the several local measures introduced in the House.

The automobile responsibility measure, which passed the House last session but died in the Senate, would force drivers whose permits have been suspended by the traffic director, to furnish proof of their ability to pay damages.

Representative Allard H. Gasque (Democrat), South Carolina, reintroduced his bill to provide for election of members of the District Board of Education. The District Commissioners would be authorized to set up election machinery for the annual selection of board members. Three of nine members would be elected every year.

It was learned that the District 3.05 per cent beer bill will be reintroduced, although some other member than Representative Loring M. Black, jr. (Democrat), New York, may sponsor it this session.

New Jersey Man Minister to Haiti

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt yesterday submitted to the Senate the names of five assistant secretaries of the Postoffice and Agriculture Departments, who are already in office under recess appointments. He also nominated Norman Armour, of New Jersey, to be Minister to Haiti. This appointment was made by President Hoover but never confirmed.

The nominations included Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, First Assistant Postmaster General; William W. Howes, of South Dakota Second Assistant Postmaster General; Clinton B. Eilenberger, of Pennsylvania, third assistant; and Stillman Evans, of Texas, fourth assistant; and Rexford Guy Tugwell, of New York, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

Paul Knabenshue of Ohio, was appointed Acting Minister and Consul General to Iraq.

Big Scientific Discoveries Often Result of Accident

Many Just Waiting to Be Picked Up for Years Before Seen to Startle World and Add to Its Store of Knowledge.

Ithaca, N. Y., March 11 (A.P.).—Seemingly "accidental" discoveries in science are often like finding a $5 gold piece lying at noon hour on the sidewalk at a busy city street corner. Some one is bound to spy the coin

There is a small vacuum tube in the Cornell University physics laboratory which proves this. The tube is glass, about the size and shape of a medium-sized gourd. It was in use at Cornell in 1895 to study the curious green glow appearing in its larger end when an electric current was passed through the vacuum.

One day in that year Roentgen announced the discovery of X-rays. American newspapers carried the news by cable. At Cornell a news dispatch was read by Prof. George S. Moler,

"Why," he exclaimed, "our tube must give those rays."

He placed a clock cogwheel, along with two aluminum plates, inside a tightly closed pasteboard box. The box was placed close to the tube and just beyond the box was a photographic plate. The current was switched on, and after an "exposure" of many minutes, a good X-ray picture of the cog resulted.

Cornell had had this tube in operation for several years before the cog picture was taken. So had other laboratories all over the world. For these tubes were favorite objects of scientific study then.

One scientist who, like Roentgen, concentrated his observations on the peculiar glow, had had photographic plates spoiled by the tube but his observation passed unnoticed. The discovery was just waiting to be "picked up" for years before it was seen.

Cornell University psychologists tell the story, too, of an illuminating engineer who obtained a good contract by using the laws of compensation in colors. A wealthy man in a large American city was installing lights in his home for two reasons—for illumination and to set off the charms of a marriageable daughter.

A rose colored light was placed above a large table in one room. That was said to be the contractor's idea. The illuminating engineer seated the daughter at the table, with the rose glow on He pointed out that the shadows below the curves of her head and face were green. Studied from this point of view, a lot of green area could be seen, its effect unpleasant.

The engineer changed the position of the rose lights so that their beams came from below the level of the face. This changed the position of all the green facial shadows. They were completely removed from the lower face. A few appeared about the eyes or just above.

In that position they were voted distinct beauty aids, and the engineer signed a contract.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENT LIABILITY IS STILL BAFFLING PROBLEM

Failure of Two Plans in Operation to Satisfy Stimulates Ideas.

PLAN LIKE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION URGED

Latest Suggestion Would Make Insurance Compulsory, but Modify Rates.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Motordom throughout the world still struggles with that perennial among its problems, how best to go about compensating the innocent victim of the traffic accident.

So far it has put into operation two projected solutions. One is compulsory liability insurance legislation which requires that all car owners shall provide protection for possible accident victims before they are allowed to register their automobiles. The other is so-called financial responsibility. It differs in that the insurance requirement does not become compulsory until after the driver has had an accident or otherwise proved his probable proneness to accidents.

If one makes an exception of England and Sweden, both of which have compulsory insurance laws, neither of the operative programs of the present moment is proving completely satisfactory from all viewpoints. It is this circumstance which is influencing advocacy of two other proposed solutions, neither of which has yet been submitted to practical test.

Originated in U. S.

Both of these have their origin in the United States. One, known as the "Marx plan," and modeled along the line of workmen's compensation insurance, would require every motorist to pay a premium into a State fund when registering his car. Out of this sum accident victims would be compensated on some scale proportionate to their normal earning power.

The second untried proposal which motorists some day may find written into the laws that govern their motor vehicle operation is a form of compulsory insurance. It differs from that now in force in that rates will be fixed on the basis of the individual's accident record. All drivers would be required to guarantee their ability to compensate possible mishap victims, but underwriters would be limited in the rates assessed against those whose traffic department was most exemplary. In the case of both of these plans, administration of the compensation fund would be removed from the jurisdiction of civil courts and placed in the hands of State commissions appointed for that special purpose.

The object of the commission form of administration is to eliminate the delay in providing financial relief to those injured, or to the dependents of those who lose their lives in traffic mishaps. An incidental end that would be served by this policy is the relief of court dockets from the congestion which sometimes results in a lapse of more than a year between the accident and the settlement of damage claims.

Proposals for Changes Made.

Indicative of the fact that there is dissatisfaction with both of the operative compensation laws are proposals for changes which are heard in every legislative year. In the biennial sessions of State assemblies in the United States this year, several such proposals already have emerged.

Connecticut, pioneer in the application of so-called financial responsibility, would fare better with outright compulsory insurance, in the opinion of those sponsoring a bill for a change in the latter system. Massachusetts, which first adopted and for six years has zealously defended its compulsory insurance law, has just deleted from its statute books a provision which the Legislature construed as an entering wedge for financial responsibility as a substitute.

These, however, are not the only evidences of the unbalanced state of decision with regard to the matter. Utah, which has no such legislation, is considering a proposal to enact a compulsory insurance measure. New York's financial responsibility law lies always within the shadow of a strong advocacy on the part of powerful groups for a test of the workability of the "Marx plan," or a law fashioned after the workmen's compensation measures.

Agitated in Ohio.

Another State in which agitation in behalf of this plan persists, though less intensely, is Ohio. It is the home State of Judge Robert Marx, of Cincinnati, who devised the proposal on the basis of a special study financed by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Advocates of various proposals point to one rather general improvement in public comprehension of the problem which is being tackled. It is the disposition to get away from trying to measure the various compensation plans by some safety yardstick.

Much the same point of view is held in England and in Sweden, in both of which laws similar in principle with that of Massachusetts have encountered far less opposition and are reported to be serving the function of accident victim compensation

To those most closely identified with the problem it is an interesting fact that the zealous search for a solution has not been weakened by the fact that motor vehicle accidents last year showed their first reduction since 1921. The decrease from 33,740 to 29,500 represented a percentage drop of 13 per cent, and the death rate of 70.5 per 100,000 fell to the lowest level in more than a decade.

Despite this fact, however, agitation in favor of some form of compensation measure manifested itself in the guise of definite legislative proposals in eight State legislatures.

BUD THOMAS STARS AS NATS BEAT ATLANTA, 4-3

Rookie Yields 1 Hit in Last 3 Innings

Friederichs' Lack of Control Wastes 3-Run Lead in 4th.

By BOB CONSIDINE
(Post Staff Correspondent).

MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—A ragamuffin little Atlanta ball team threw something resembling a scare into the ranks of your beloved Nationals here today and only a slightly flukey ninth inning rally on the part of the Nationals could convince the Crackers that it is not nice for their disheveled team to defeat the immaculate next world's champions.

The score was 4 to 3. The credit of winning the first game of the season falls on the freckled ears of Bud Thomas, whose career was launched on Monument Lot Diamond, No. 7, two years ago in The Post's Capital City League. He went into the game in the seventh inning after Bob Friedrichs, a compatriot, had thrown enough curves into the upper grandstand to permit Atlanta to tie the score at 3 to 3. Thomas allowed but one hit in the last three frames.

Kerr Provokes Vital Balk.

Pitching conservative ball and backed up ably by a hybrid squad of regulars and rookies, Thomas was finally rewarded with the game in the ninth inning by virtue of a spirited little rally that ended somewhat unsatisfactorily for the Cracker rooters when Johnny Kerr, who had been advanced to third by Cecil Travis' single over second and Sam Rice's perfect sacrificial bunt, was permitted to walk down the home stretch and score standing up, because Shorty Long, the perspiring Atlanta pitcher, had balked.

Kerr had a lot to do with the balk, heckling the youngster no end by making false starts for the plate when Mr. Long wanted to concentrate completely on thick-lipped Dave Harris, who was at bat at the time. Harris' eventual offering was an anemic roll to the catcher. Kerr himself had started the ninth by singling cleanly over short.

Linke Allows 3 Hits And Walks 3.

Eddie Linke, the fat rookie, pitched the first three innings for Washington, allowed three hits and walked three for a reasonable enough record, but when Friedrichs entered the game and began picking off innocent spectators up in the boxes most of the rhyme and reason left the game. Red Barron, of the Georgia Barrons, was the big punch of the home team's scoring inning, doubling through Cecil Travis to score two of the three runs.

Of the rookies used, Boken and Bolton looked good enough to step right into regular service. Travis was visibly shaky throughout the proceedings.

All of 129 people saw the game.

Florida Derby Is Gallop for Charley O.

Jungle King Second, Beaten 3 Lengths by 10-1 Shot.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., March 11 (A.P.).—Charley O, a full brother to the once illustrious Mike Hall, ran the most scintillating race of his career to win the Florida Derby and $10,475 before a closing-day crowd of about 15,000 here this afternoon.

The bearer of the R. M. Eastman Estate's silks, capably ridden by the solemn faced Syrian, Johnny Gilbert, flashed past the judges with three full lengths to spare over Jungle King, the Greentree Stable's colt, which carried the hopes of the favorite players. Another three lengths away came Inlander, in the colors of the Brookmeade Stable, to annex the show position from Mrs. Jack Howard's Ebony Lady.

Charley O completed his mile and a furlong journey in the fast time of 1:49 3-5, only two-fifths of a second away from Pari-Mutuel's track record. His supporters collected $22.40 for every $2 wagered straight on the colt.

Jungle King in Close Quarters.

Jungle King, the colt that runs with the long stride of Twenty Grand, another son of St. Germans which brought gold and glory to Mrs. Payne Whitney, had some excuse in that he was in rather close quarters before reaching the stretch, but he obviously was not a match for the winner today. Jungle King was a 4-to-5 shot.

Ebony Lady and Golden Fate were used up dueling for the lead in the first 7 furlongs. Jungle King broke well and showed more early dash than usual, although not being asked to attempt to keep up with the leaders. Charley O was perfectly rated in fourth place and clear of interference. He began to creep up on the pacemakers after leaving the back stretch and, coming around them turning into the home lane, asserted his superiority like a champion.

Jungle King was clear and running well as he entered the stretch but he could not make up ground on the flying winner, which scored easily. Inlander, far back in the early stages, improved his position with a rush in the final 3 furlongs. He came a bit wide and then swerved slightly while trying to catch Jungle King. Ebony Lady held on to finish fourth.

Running in the Niagara A. A. U. annual games against a team of eight men, the Pennsylvania quartet negotiated the distance in 17 minutes 21.7 seconds. The previous record was 17.43 2-5.

Venzke ran the fastest mile of the four—4:14. Carl Coal was next best at 4:21. Bill McKniff and Dean ran their miles in 4:23 and 4:24, respectively.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 11 (U. P.).—Babe Ruth led his stone crabs to a 13-2, defeat at the hands of Earle Combs' Crawfish in an intraclub practice game played by the New York Yankees today.

Ruth hit poorly. He got but one single in five tries. His baseball duties done, the Babe dashed off to Bellaire to play a golf exhibition match with Miss Diana Fishwick, former British champion.

Col. Jacob Ruppert is due tomorrow for a conference over the Babe's salary. Ruppert has offered $50,000, and has indicated it is his final offer. Ruth wants at least $10,000 more than that and has threatened to quit if the Yankees don't increase their bid.

Red Sox Regulars In Victory.

Sarasota, Fla., March 11 (A.P.).—The Boston Red Sox regulars today bunched four hits, three for extra bases, in the second inning to gain a 3-2 victory over the rookies in the first intersquad game of the spring season.

Dale Alexander opened that frame with a triple, Bob Seeds got another, Johnny Hodapp a double and Mike Meola scored Hodapp with a timely single. Meola, Jones and McNaughton each twirled two singles for the regulars and the rookies had Andrews, Johnson and Kline working for them.

Rain Shortens Work Of Tigers.

San Antonio, Tex., March 11 (A. P.).—Heavy rainfall today caused Manager Bucky Harris to call off most of the Detroit Tiger workout.

The day developed one situation to make it memorable when Earl Webb, Tiger outfielder, mysteriously missing since last week, accounted for his nonappearance with a brand new explanation. He said the bank holiday left him without sufficient cash to buy his ticket to training camp. He is still at his Plesant Hill, Tenn., home.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 11 (A. P.).—For the first time in many years the St. Louis Browns will be without a slugger.

Cronin Bans Pennant Talk, But Nats Are Dead Serious

By BOB CONSIDINE
(Post Staff Correspondent).

MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—One cycle of the spring training season ended today when Joe Cronin, sculptor of Washington's 1933 baseball hopes, sent his squad into its first exhibition game of the season.

And, since it sort of ended one period on which Cronin could look back and form some sort of sweeping statement, we asked him if it had cemented or destroyed his hopes of a pennant.

"Pennant," repeated Mr. Cronin, with a not too pleasant inflection; "what's that?" It was a slip of the memory for us. Pennant talk is strictly taboo down here. It is only with great reluctance will anybody discuss it. It is as much of an unmentionable topic as writing about holdouts in front of Clark Griffith—and that is pretty dangerous, even with Griffith's lumbago.

Absence of Pennant Talk Significant.

In fact, pennant talk has been so religiously avoided down here that it gives rise to the idea that perhaps the pennant is buzzing so seriously in the minds of everybody on the team that they don't want to talk about it, just as a World War veteran here and there doesn't like to discuss what happened in France. In years gone past, when the chances of winning the American League crown were not near so good, on paper, at least, there was more idle talk of how to spend the world series money than there is this season.

All the talking about pennants is being done at home—all the thinking about it, down here.

The thing that probably stops the pleasantly talkative young manager from speaking in pennant terms is the fact that while he is apt to admit that the 1933 team should be a better club than the 1924 team, the last three Washington teams won as many or more games during the years 1930, 1931 and 1932 as did the 1924 team, yet finished only third. Competition up at the top of the league has grown terrifically since Washington's pennant days—and shows no definite signs of abating.

Cronin believes he has a team this year that won't buckle during the dog days. He believes that the 1933 club will have no voodoos, will not pay any attention to the St. Louis bugaboo (inasmuch as now we've got their three best players Goslin, Schulte and Stewart), and further believes that if the team ever snares a lead, such as it has been wont to do at the start of the season, it will hang on to it with greater tenacity than before.

Still young enough to believe in the sporting angle of the national pastime, Cronin subscribes to the notion that last winter's trades have spread around the circuit many of Washington's chronic enemies—such as Simmons going to Chicago—and that natural rivalries are now in vogue all over the circuit, instead of only with New York and Philadelphia. It should make the boys get in there and fight every day, not just play their best against the leaders—for it has been proved that they can hold their own with the leaders, the Yanks and the Athletics. It is the second raters that have been dragging down Washington for years.

"It's the best ball club—the best bunch of fellows I've ever mingled with, or seen," says Joe, very earnestly. But as for a managerial statement on the pennant sitcheashun the folks back home are mooning about—nix.

Nats' Regulars Play Atlanta Club Today

Special to The Washington Post.

Biloxi, Miss., March 11.—Minus rookies, the 1933 Washington regulars will strut their undeniable stuff here tomorrow, when they engage the Atlanta Crackers in a return game at the Biloxi ball park.

Manager Cronin plans to use his first-string team of Kuhel, first; Myer, second; Cronin, short; Bluege, third; Manush, left; Schulte, center; Goslin, right; Sewell, catcher, and the following pitchers, three innings apiece: Bill McAfee, Jack Russell and Lefty Burrows. Monte Weaver may replace Burrows, it was held possible tonight.

Lowering clouds and sprinkles of rain late tonight threatened, however, to wreck tomorrow's whole situation.

SEEDED ACES ADVANCE IN TENNIS

By HENRY McLEMORE.

SEVENTH REGIMENT ARMORY, New York, March 11 (U.P.).—Paced by four of the country's "big ten" players, the seeded brigade in the men's national indoor tennis championships moved into the second round today with but the loss of a single set.

The honor of marring the select list's chance for a perfect record for the opening day went to Harold MacGuffin, of Philadelphia, who outgalloped George Lott in the first heat before succumbing to the veteran Chicago internationalist, 4—6, 6—2, 6—2.

While Lott, always a slow starter, was having his troubles with Young MacGuffin, most of his comrades of the seeded group were winning under wraps. Frank Shields didn't find it necessary to remove his sweater in polishing off Allen Swayze, New York University star, 6—3, 6—1, and Berkeley Bell managed to breeze by Bryan Hamlin, of New York, in love sets without a single one of his famous swan-dive volleys.

Sutter Winner by 7—5, 6—3.

Cliff Sutter, No. 3 national ranking and the man who all but whipped Ellsworth Vines at Forest Hills last summer, dillied and dallied to a 7—5, 6—3 victory over Dr. William Rosenbaum, of New York. Sutter, making his second appearance on the indoor boards, was bothered a trifle in the first set by the deceptive lighting, but found himself in the second and ran the middle-aged doctor weary with his sharp-shooting from the baseline.

Gregory Mangin, defending champion, made short shift of Frank J. Welton, requiring less than half an hour to win, 6—0, 6—1. Mangin, who prefers indoors play, stroked with an accuracy and authority that indicated he would take a lot of beating before relinquishing the big silver bowl that goes with the title.

Sidney B. Wood, who stands just a notch below Sutter in the national ranking, showed the best tennis of the day in turning back Edward W Burns, 6—4, 8—6. Burns, one of the best club players in New York, was in top form and Wood was forced to show most of the shots he used in Davis Cup play two years ago. Wood won the match largely on his scintillating work at the net. Once he gained the webbing. Wood, volley working perfectly, was all but unpassable.

J. Gilbert Hall and Dr. Eugene McAuliff, seeded seventh and eighth, respectively, disposed of Clark Andrews, of Yale, and George Key, of Harvard, respectively. Hall, using his hard forehand to advantage, won by 6—4, 7—5, and McAuliff, who relied in the main on back-court steadiness, took his match at 6—3, 6—4.

Summaries of the first round included:

Clifford Sutter, New Orleans, defeated Dr. William Rosenbaum, New York, 7—5, 6—3; John M. Hamilton, Yale, defeated J. H. Sillman, London, 6—3, 7—5; J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., defeated Clark Andrews, Yale, 6—4, 7—5; W. E. Arensberg, Cambridge, Mass., defeated J. H. Baker, Newburgh, N. Y., 6—2, 6—3; W. McM. Martin, jr., St. Louis, defeated Samuel P. Harbison, Sewickley, Pa., 6—1, 6—0; George M. Lott, Chicago, defeated Harold MacGuffin, Philadelphia, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3; Frank X. Shields, New York, defeated Allen W. Swayze, New York, 6—3, 6—1; Berkeley Bell, New York, defeated Bryan Hamlin, Southampton, Long Island, 6—0, 6—0; S. Ellsworth Davenport 3d, Cambridge, Mass., defeated Richard O. Covington, Ashville, N. C., 4—6, 9—7, 7—5; Sidney B. Wood, jr., New York, defeated Edward W. Burns, Brooklyn, 6—4, 8—6; Gregory S. Mangin, Newark, N. J., defeated Frank J. Welton, Brooklyn, 6—0, 6—1.

G. U. DEFEATS CARNEGIE IN THRILLER

Hargaden Leads Last Half Attack in 43-41 Victory.

WITH the rafters of McKinley High gymnasium rocking with the feverish excitement of suspense from the opening whistle until the final gun, Georgetown University's basket ball team won a nose decision, 43 to 41, from the scarlet clad team of Carnegie Tech.

It was an upset victory that placed G. U. in a tie with Pitt for third place in the Eastern Intercollegiate League. Georgetown battled from behind through most of the game to gain the lead and stave off the last-minute efforts of the Tartans, who, with one goal from the floor needed to tie the issue, could only rim the basket.

The contest, last of the season for G. U., was a battle between two guards, Hargaden, of Georgetown, and Fergus, of Tech. The latter outscored Hargaden, but the latter had more scoring support from his teammates.

Carnegie Leading At Half, 22-19.

At the half Carnegie was ahead, 22 to 19. Hargaden's shots put Georgetown in the van for a few minutes. Its slight lead, however, was dissipated by the brilliant shooting of the blond Fergus, who dropped in three field goals from beyond the 20-foot mark.

In fact, for several minutes it seemed that Fergus could make any set shot from within the Georgetown territory. Failing to get an opening near the basket, the Tech Team would feed him the ball and it would swish through the cords.

Hargaden and his fellows started in the battle again and forged 5 points ahead of Tech with only a minute to play. Fergus sank one from beyond the foul line. Tech made one of double foul, and just before the gun ended the struggle, Fergus was banished on four personal fouls. He had scored 9 times from the field and 5 from the foul line for a total of 23 points. Hargaden scored 7 times from the floor and 3 times from the foul line, a total of 17 markers.

In a preliminary to the main contest, the Central High five swamped the Georgetown Freshmen, 30 to 13. Keyser led the Mount Pleasant lads with 10 points, all from the floor.

20,000 Crowd Expected At Golden Gloves Bouts

New York, March 11 (U.P.).—A capacity crowd of more than 20,000 was expected at the final bouts of the Golden Gloves boxing tournament Monday night at Madison Square Garden.

The Golden Gloves finals, consistently the best attended fistic show in New York each year, will be fought by 36 boys, survivors of an original field of 1,500 who have been campaigning for slightly more than a month.

Today's Race May Draw Field of 10

St. Brideaux, Larranaga, Kinscen Among Entries Named.

HAVANA, March 11 (A.P.).—With White Clover II, star of William DuPont's Fox Catcher Farms, of Wilmington, Del., the prerace choice, ten high-class handicap performers today were named for the $50,000 Cuban Grand National, which will be run over 1¼ miles at Oriental Park tomorrow.

The big English-bred horse, piloted by Buddy Hanford, will carry 118 pounds, 2 less than Mrs. Payne Whitney's St. Brideaux, the high weight of the field. Allan Ryan's Larranage, also well considered, will pack the third highest impost of 115 pounds.

The other entries with their weights are S. S. Friedlein's Fortunate Youth, 106; Mrs. Emilie Denemark's Pigeon Hole, 112; the Chile Stable's Cambridgeshire, 105; C. Leroy King's Pari-Mutuel, 105; Mrs. S. H. Fairbanks Gold Step, 110; John Marsch's Chief John, 108, and I. A. Carreaud's Kinscen, 112.

Sweepilla, 8-1, Wins Juvenile Stakes.

Winning the first race of her career, O. F. Woodward's Sweepilla today came from behind to win the $2,500 Cuban juvenile stakes.

Well rated by Willie Curran, the daughter of Sweep staged a sensational finish to get under the wire a nose in front of J. H. Louchheim's Biddy Gal, an offspring of Sir Gallahad III. Fred Weiner's Shoteur was third in the field of eight.

Shoteur was the first to show and set a hot pace going into the stretch, leading Biddy Gal by a neck with the fast stepping Sweepilla only a head back in third place. The trio took almost stride for stride in their thrilling dash for the judges' stand, but in the final yards, the Woodward filly stuck her nose in front.

Little regarded in the wagering as the result of her recent poor performances, the winner paid 8 to 1 in the orals and $35 for $2 in the mutuels.

CHARLEY O. WINNER OF FLORIDA DERBY

Slapdash, the Wheatley Stable's unbeaten 2-year-old, which won the fillies' division of the Nursery Stakes and two other races, was a big disappointment in the running of the Hialeah Juvenile championship. The odds-on favorite in the field of six, the daughter of Stimulus finished fourth. Constant Wife, carrying the Dixiana silks, took the $2,310 winner's share of the purse by a length and a half to pay $26.70. She equaled Wise Daughter's track record of 0:33 4-5 for 3 furlongs. C. V. Whitney's High Glee earned the place by a head from Wise Ways, representing the R. M. Eastman estate. Slapdash was another head away just out of the picture.

The race was robbed of much of its interest because of the enforced withdrawal of the colt Dartle, winner of the male division of the Nursery Stakes. The youngster was a victim of slight fever and coughing.

High Glee bumped Race Street just after the start, but aside from that the race was truly run. Constant Wife broke well and rushed to the front. She stole a two-length lead when halfway home and continued gamely in the drive to the wire. Slapdash rushed up to second place, but the closing challenge of High Glee and Wise Ways was too much for the choice in the final stages.

Tela Springs Surprise In Opener.

Tela sprang a mild surprise when she got up to win the opening event by a neck from the heavily backed Frigate Bird. Some Knight was beaten three lengths for the place. Sky Haven, a successful sprinter at the meeting, had the most early speed, but found the distance of a mile too far and gave way to Frigate Bird after entering the stretch. Tela, a slow beginner, finished powerfully and overhauled the favorite in the last few strides, to return $14.40.

Those who kept faith in the luck of Trainer Hirsch Jacobs profited handsomely when Zorana won the second contest at odds of $33.90 for two. Von Sion was second, a length and a half behind the winner and a length before Wise Anne. The race was run to order for the winner, which raced close behind Lavaal and Von Sion, this pair setting a dizzy pace to the stretch. Zorana sailed around the leaders turning for home, and won going away.

The crowd was treated to the prettiest blanket finish of the meeting in the third event, when four horses reached the judges noses apart. Wise Advocate, Buddy Hanford up, earned the decision and paid $16.90. Broadway Lights was second, with Aegis and Below Cost next in line.

Brown Wisdom and Below Cost cut out the early running, but both tired when the final drive began. Wise Advocate, last away, made up a lot of ground, and, closing strongly on the outside, just got up in time. Broadway Lights did not obtain free passage until straightened out in the stretch, while Tipton could not ride a strong enough finish on Aegis to earn the purse.

Don Leon registered a lucky victory in the sixth race, foiling Cathop's attempt to give the P. M. Eastman estate a double by the margin of a nose. Broad Meadows lost the place by a length. Jockey Horvath, who rode the winner, crossed over on Cathop in the first quarter mile and then shook his whip in a manner to disturb the second horse in the stretch drive. Don Leon carried his speed farther than expected, but never could shake off Cathop. Broad Meadows was in early difficulty and closed powerfully to land in the picture. The winenr paid $18.10.

Peace Lady in winning the finale by a head to return $54.60 made the rout of form players complete for the day. Rowdy Boy nosed Blackmock out of the place. The handle today was more than $250,000.

Books to Operate At Fair Grounds

Will Install Reputable Man to Handle Clubhouse Bets in 1934.

New Orleans, March 11 (A.P.).—Bookmaking will be installed as an added attraction for betters at the Fair Grounds race track next year, the Crescent City Jockey Club announced today in making public plans for the 1934 season.

"It has been finally and definitely determined by the management that the clubhouse will be turned over to bookmakers in 1934 under the management of some reputable man and with the possibility that the books will be limited to a reasonable number of the better class of men in the profession," the announcement said.

Return of the books will not supplant the mutuels, it was announced, but both systems will be used. Those who use the mutuels will take their chances on pay prices in the general pool, while those patronizing books will be able to bet at fixed odds. The management clearly indicated that the move was a further attempt to meet competition offered by bookmaking establishments away from the track.

Lack of Pitchers Bemoaned by G.W.

Few of 70 Candidates Aspire for Mound Duty; Three Drills Daily.

With nearly 70 candidates now working out and more indicating a desire to try out for positions, George Washington University baseball practices will be held three times daily for the next two weeks, Coach Ed Morris declared yesterday.

To date the Colonial diamond hopefuls have been restricted to gymnasium workouts in which little more than limbering up exercises are practicable. However, in the three days he has been observing, Coach Morris has detected a lack of pitching prospects, which he hopes will be remedied through the reporting of additional candidates.

The Colonial baseball team, the first organized in 30 years, will play all of its games at night in Griffith Stadium. Extra attractions will be arranged to precede the games and all profits will be turned over to the National Capital Civic Fund. Season tickets good for ten admissions, priced at $2, are now on sale at Joe Turner's Annapolis Hotel office and the G. W. U. Gymnasium.

Spring football drills for the Colonials will commence Wednesday at the Tidal Basin. A special invitation for new candidates to report was issued yesterday. Coaches Pixlee and Walsh are faced with the problem of replacing ten graduating players.

Bolling Five Ousted From League Lead

With Parrack showing the way with 19 points, Crop Production yesterday ousted Bolling Field from the top of the Government League by bowling over the Airmen, 39 to 28. The final few minutes of the game were played under protests by the Aviators.

It was a hard-fought battle all the way, with Parrack's work proving the margin of superiority which the Crop tossers held over their foes.

Agua Caliente Cuts Stake to $25,000

Former $108,300 Race Is Reduced Again; To Be Staged March 26.

Agua Caliente, Mexico, March 11 (A.P.).—The Agua Caliente Handicap, a race which three years ago paid Victorian, the winner, $108,300, will be run on March 26 this year for $25,000.

The $100,000 purse guaranty was halved last year, when financial difficulties forced a suspension of the winter meeting, and the resultant $50,000 purse was halved today after another suspension of a week.

Jockey Club officials said the scheduled 80-day meeting probably would be resumed Tuesday if the California banking situation cleared up. It was suspended at the close of the sixty-third day, March 5.

An offer of horsemen to permit the club to reduce purses for run of the mill daily races from $500 to $400 and to cut stake purses was accepted by Jockey Club officials.

Sothoron Grid Star In Maryland U. Game

With Norwood Sothoron playing the star role, Golds took the measure of the Blacks, 12 to 0, in an intra-squad football contest at the University of Maryland yesterday afternoon.

Taking a well-directed pass from Dick Nelson, half back, Sothoron dashed 17 yards for the first touchdown in the third period, while in the fourth quarter he crossed the goal line again on a 30-yard run after another pass from Nelson. Both attempts for the extra point were frustrated.

It was the first regular game of the spring season, with the Gold eleven exhibiting general superiority, though held scoreless for the first half. Only those players were used who will be available for next fall's team. The Golds' line-up contained several of the 1932 varsity combination, while the Blacks, for the most part, were freshmen.

W. & J. GAME ISADDED BY COLONIALS

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY'S football schedule for 1933, which has been in the process of formation since early last fall, was completed late yesterday afternoon with the addition of three games to the six already listed.

Of chief import was the announcement by the Colonials that George Washington would meet Washington and Jefferson here November 10 in a Friday night game at Griffith Stadium. A game with Catawba opening the season here on September 30, and an invasion of Grand Forks, N. Dak., to meet North Dakota University in a night game on October 6, fills the other dates that had been vacant on the schedule.

Tennessee and Auburn Play Here.

Previously G. W. had announced six games for 1933 that already stamped its schedule as the most imposing and impressive list of gridiron battles ever attempted by a local college team with both cochampions of the Southern Conference, Tennessee and Auburn due to play at Griffith Stadium.

The completed schedule shows eight of the nine games listed at Griffith Stadium, four on Friday nights, with North Carolina State as the Thanksgiving Day attraction.

Washington and Jefferson a few years ago was a power in Eastern football and last season showed indications of regaining its former standing.

The complete schedule follows:

September 30—Catawba, here.

October 6 (Friday night), North Dakota University, at Grand Forks, N. Dak.; 13 (Friday night), Clemson, here; 21, Auburn, here; 27 (Friday night), West Virginia Wesleyan, here.

November 4, Tennessee, here; 10 (Friday night), W. and J., here; 17 (Friday night), Tulsa, here; 30, North Carolina State, here.

Golf Check All Right But Won't Even Bounce

Miami (A.P.).—Winners in the Miami-Biltmore $5,000 golf open were paid off in checks—the day after President Roosevelt declared a national banking holiday.

St. Ritas Is Leader In Alexandria Series

Alexandria, March 11.—By winning 20 to 16 over the Sigmas last night, the St. Rita five gained the lead in the second half of the local city senior series. Pierpoint led the attack for the winners. In another series game, the Central A. C., with Sublett, Prinks and Trenary doing the scoring, defeated the Virginia A. C. in a 21-to-20 thriller.

K. C. Boys Five Lands 115-lb League Title

K. of C. Boys Club yesterday won the 115-pound title in the Boys Club League, with the game little Washington Boys Club five figuring prominently in their triumph. Earlier in the afternoon, the Washington Boys Club five defeated St. Martin's in a 15-14 thriller and then, only an hour later, the same five met the K. C. Boys and succumbed, 20-15, in another hair-raiser.

HENRY "POPEYE" IRVING, who meets Young Van, of Southwest Washington, Tuesday night for the middleweight championship of the District. The bout is a "natural," for which Capital boxing fans have waited a year. Both are knockout artists.

Middleweight Clash Tuesday Backed by Stellar Program.

SOCK meets sock at Portner's Tuesday night and someone is going to hit the canvas. Northeast is willing to bet that it won't be Henry "Popeye" Irving and Southwest is willing to wager it won't be Young Van. Northwest and Southeast really don't care which one takes the count but agree that the battle will be worth going miles to see. These two Washington middleweights, who have had the fight fans clamoring for a battle between them for more than a year, have finally been lured into the same ring at the same time.

The bout was tentatively scheduled for Portner's last spring, but after Van turned in a spectacular victory over Knockout Burns, of Baltimore, and Irving took the count from Turner, a Norfolk boy, the match was erased. Last summer the Cornell-Donovan interests had Irving and Van all set to pack them in at Laurel when Sammy Britt, who Van had previously beaten, stopped the Southwest boy. Again the battle was dropped.

Rivals Have Improved Of Late.

Of late both Van and Irving have shown improvement. Van came back after a long training siege to flatten Billy Vermillion, of Baltimore, and shocked the local fight colony by outfighting the clever Walter Kirkwood. Irving, always the possessor of a killing right, has been coming through regularly.

It will be that Irving right against Van's damaging left and terrific infighting. Northeast says Van can't take the force of Henry's pet stock of trade and stay up. Southwest says that Irving won't be able to land that blow and will wilt under Van's hard left and his stinging body attack.

Despite the fact that both have done the majority of their training at Frankie Mann's gymnasium, they have never opposed in a workout. Since they signed for this bout they train at different hours. Previously, however, when both were in the gym together, it was noticeable to those around the gym that Irving hit the big bag with one eye on Van and Van boxed with one eye on Irving.

The importance of the bout to Irving is shown by his return to road work, under the direction of Harry (Kid) Groves. Irving for a long time has let an occasional soccer game serve him as a conditioner. Van, a stickler for condition, is not missing any bets in his training.

The main go fails to hold all the fan lure. Although the home-town rivalry angle is missing, the clash of Stumpy Jacobs and Roy Manley in the six-round semifinal should make the ring hum with action. Both are hard hitters and each has been anxious to meet the other for some time.

In another six, which would have been a main bout at this time last year, Billy Landers, the Norfolk buzz-saw, tackles Tommy Horn, of Baltimore, in what looks like a sizzler. Horn recently won from Izzy Kaplan. These featherweights will be aiming at a better shot at Portner's.

Northeast also is keenly interested in Bob Lowry, a boy who has done a lot of free fighting in that section. Lowry meets Tex Mills, of Norfolk, at six rounds. Mills held Jimmy Reed, who starred hereabouts, to a draw and won from Toots Bashara.

The program will open with a six, in which Willie Essinger opposes Jackie Levinson, a Norfolk boy.

Boxing Bits Hereabouts

THIS game of boxing is a tough one to dope out. Listen to what Patsy Donovan has to say about it:

"Red Barry scored a sensational victory over Izadora Gastanago at Holyoke Mass. Shortly before he dropped a lop-sided decision to Les Kennedy at Portner's Arena. Kennedy had just lost to Marty Gallegher, although Marty in his previous start had lost to Babe Hunt in 10 rounds at Atlanta, Ga. A few weeks ago Hunt was flattened by Gastanago in Chicago in three rounds."

Arthur DeBeve certainly upset the works in Baltimore last Monday when he won from Charlie Gomer. The DeBeve match was supposed to have been a tune-up affair for Gomer's shot at Battalino in Baltimore. Recently Gomer defeated Jimmy Reed.

Ray Bowen turned down an eight-round preliminary with Roy Manley on the Van-Irving card Tuesday, on the basis that a win over Manley would not improve his status hereabouts. Bowen is gunning for a shot at Joey Goodman.

Bouncing Nick Antonelli is hot after a return match with Bucky Taylor, who is scheduled to meet Roddy Davis at Portner's shortly. Antonelli and Taylor staged a furious battle a few weeks back, one of the finest at the reformed brewery this season. Nick is training diligently.

Maxie Rosenbloom's victory over Adolph Heuser was no surprise to Washington fans who had seen him toy with Bob Godwin and Red Barry, but the manner in which he came from behind to win is a surprise to the boxing world in general.

FLASHES.

Man Bites Dog Twice!! . . . Henry Irving is doing roadwork every morning in preparation for his bout with Young Van. . . . And he is accompanied by Marty Gallagher!! . . . The explanation lies in Harry ("Simon Legree") Groves, who brings up the procession with his whip and bloodhounds . . . Eddie Daley, who pushes the gloves into the ring for the main event every Tuesday, picks Bob Lowry as the outstanding pugilistic prospect of the season. . . . Says Bob, who went to Florida a lightweight and came back a middleweight, is more like the old-time fighters than any he has ever seen. . . . Studies punches and ring tactics at least an hour every day. . . . And Eddie isn't often wrong. . . . He picked Kennedy to beat Godwin and Barry and Tow to massacre Prante. . . . "Red" Barry faces his toughest opponent so far in Joe Sekyra, whom he fights at Holyoke tomorrow. . . . Joe, who has never fought at over 185, possesses the most educated left hand in the ring. . . . He can either slug or box—depending upon his opponent. . . . He boxed Gastanago, whom Barry decisioned, until he had him as dizzy as a waltzing-mouse on a merry-go-round. . . . And then he punched him out. . . . Against Barry he will probably slug all the way. . . . And he's just about fast enough to get away with it. . . . Jimmy Edwin, the Old Machiavelli of Maui, has been offered a flat $500 for a Sarron bout with Armizendi on the coast. . . . He's holding out for $1,000—and the odds are 10 to 1 that he'll get it. . . . Since Billy Strickler scored that quick knockout at Portner's and punched Walter Kirkwood so hard in the brisket, even Billy himself is beginning to have faith in the efficacy of his revised mode of hand-wrapping. . . . Tony Herrerra, one of the best lightweights, may be unveiled at Portner's soon. . . . Under the auspices of Jimmy ("Clark Gable") Irwin, who raised him from a mere stripling down in Mexico. . . . Benny Schwartz collected the -25 weight forfeit posted by Petey Sarron, who came in 1¾ pounds overweight. . . . What happened to the Hartley boxing bill? . . . Barefoot Green, the Fredericksburg furrow-follower, suffers from fallen arches (flat feet to you).

Coast Artillery Five In Pair of Victories

McCahey, Fox and Gleason looked best for the Artillerymen, while the playing of Benham for the Eagles, and Thuney and Charlie Tyson, of the Pepco, was best for the losers.

VIRGINIA AVE. SOCCERISTS GET TEST

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

VIRGINIA AVENUE, survivor of the first round of the Washington and Southeastern District Soccer Association Cup tie tournament, will meet its most formidable opponent of its youthful career this afternoon when it plays the strong Columbia Heights Grays, champions of the Capital City League, on the Benning field.

The Virginia Avenue lads won lasting fame last Sunday when they stopped the strong Brunswick Club, 2 to 1. But today is another story, as the Grays are a much stronger team than Brunswick although the latter club defeated the Business Men early in the season.

Grays Not Holding Foe Lightly.

Manager Edwards, of the Grays, is not holding the Southeast kickers lightly, for, despite their youth and inexperience, they are pesky little fellows and take delight in constantly worrying older opponents. If the Navy Yard boys keep heart and press as is their usual game, Messrs. Edwards, Konnells and company have a busy afternoon.

Louis Mitchell, former Marlboro star, has done a good job of coaching Virginia Avenue. Mitchell played at Marlboro under the tutoring of John Malloch, sr., and as a consequence, he is giving his charges a touch of old country play mingled with the American style. The difference lies principally in methods of advancing the ball. Old country players rely mainly on dribbling and short passing, while the Americans are prone to resort to kick and rush tactics.

The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock with Jack Caldwell calling the fouls. The Benning Field lies just south of the Benning Bridge on Anacostia road. Admission is 25 cents.

Two Capital City Games Today.

The Capital City Soccer League will complete one of its most successful seasons this afternoon with two games. Concord will play Gaithersburg on the Monument Grounds and Columbia Heights Blacks meet Marlboro at Marlboro.

The Recreation League also reaches its final stages with a lone game between Park View and the Dux A. C. on the Monument Grounds at 1 o'clock. This circuit is closing the first year of its existence and it has been one of the most successful soccer circuits ever launched in the District.

The sponsors of the league, the Department of Playgrounds, decided to experiment with a Sunday league in order to fill the dwindling ranks of the senior organization, the Capital City. The results have been more than satisfactory. At least two of the clubs in the circuit are ready to go up to the Capital City League next year intact and more than a score of individual players will make good material for the various teams in the senior circuit.

Gar Wood's Challenger To Try His Boat First

Detroit, March 11 (A.P.).—Hubert Scott-Paine, English challenger of Gar Wood for the Harmsworth Trophy, today announced through J. Lee Barrett, secretary of the gold cup committee, that he will not enter a craft in the race this fall unless experiments this summer prove to his satisfaction that he was a worthy challenger of Wood's boat.

The challenge announced ten days ago was regarded as indicating a definite intention on the part of the Englishman to enter a boat in the event. In his statement Scott-Paine cited what he termed precedents established by American competitors who challenged and later withdrew from international competition in England.

Sholls Team To Perform Tuesday

Titular Games Reach Fever Stage During This Week.

THE District championship games in the A. A. U. basket ball tournament will reach the fever stage this week with play in at least five classes moving swiftly toward the finals. Some of the best basket ball of the season here has already been played in the tournament at the Tech High Gym and even harder-fought contests are to be expected. Twenty-four games have been recorded to date and ten have been decided by less than 5 points.

This week will bring several of the best clubs in the city into action, including Sholls, winner of the unlimited crown last season as the Saks & Co. Five; Griffith's Consumers, Bethesda Firemen, Potomac Boat Club, Woltz and McLean.

Sholls, favorite in the unlimited class, drew a bye in the first round and goes into battle Tuesday night for the first time, meeting the Higbie, Richardson team, which impressed with a first-round victory over the Colonial Canoe Club.

Tomorrow night's unlimited class feature brings the Griffith Consumers against the Bethesda Volunteer Firemen. This game promises to be a thriller. Both clubs boast high scorers. Tommy Peck, member of several title clubs, is at forward for the Griffiths, while Melton is the chief point maker for Bethesda. Ford and Lyles, two of the best guards in town, will see action.

Three other games are on the program tomorrow. The Woltz and McLean clubs, both well backed to take the 145-pound title, clash. In the 130-pound class, the Aloha Lites, composed of Gallaudet students, makes its debut against the Christ Child team, while the St. Martin and St. John's Aces clash in the 100-pound class.

A. A. U. officials hope to complete the quarter-finals of the unlimited and 145-pound class this week.

The tournament is sponsored by The Post.

Frank Pinn, sophomore, has been named captain of the court team at Howard University next year, following an informal get-together of the squad. Pinn, the Bison tall and lanky center, has played two seasons with the university squad. He is a native of Lynchburg, where he formerly starred on his high school team.

Granville Warner has been reelected manager of the team for the next season. He is a member of the sophomore class, and a former student in the New York high schools.

Eastman Runs Quarter Below Record Time

Stanford University, Calif., March 11 (A.P.).—Ben Eastman, Stanford middle distance star, ran the quarter mile in the fast time of 47.5 seconds today around two turns and against a stiff breeze.

The time bettered that of Maxie Long, of the New York Athletic Club, who, in 1900, set the present record for the distance around two turns of 47.8 seconds.

The run was part of the meet between the San Francisco Olympic Club and Stanford University.

Princeton Loses Thrilling League Game, 29-28, Averting Play-Off.

Philadelphia, March 11 (U.P.).—Yale's varsity five beame the champions of the eastern intercollegiate league as the University of Pennsylvania scored a thrilling 29-28 victory over Princeton in the Palestra here tonight.

It was Princeton's last game of the season and upon it hinged the outcome of the race. Had Princeton won, the Tigers would have tied Yale for first place honors and the second playoff in as many years would have been necessary to decide the championship.

A crowd of 7,000 saw the Tigers go down to defeat at the hands of Penn for the second time this season. At no time was either team more than three points in the lead which see-sawed throughout.

The first half ended with a 14-14 tie. Two minutes later it was 28 to 27 and with less than a minute to go, Penn tallied the last goal.

NAVY BOXERS BOW, 6-2, TO SYRACUSE

Lambert's Victory, Two Draws Net Tars' Points.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 11.—Navy's boxing team today encountered the most decisive defeat in its history of the sport, going down, 6 to 2, before the championship team of Syracuse University before 4,000 spectators at Archbold Gymnasium here.

Moran Scores His 24th Knockout.

Joe Moran, champion of his class, hung up his twenty-fourth victory at McNaughton's expense in the first round. He rained lefts and rights to McNaughton's head at the outset and sent him reeling about the ring. A hard right high on the cheek opened a gash in McNaughton's face and in a moment he was a crimson smear. Another volley sent him diving through the ropes and the Navy towel was thrown in.

George Negroni, Syracuse half back, finished Herold in the third round after beating him bodily all the way. Herold was down for eight in the second and went out for keeps under three solid rights in the third.

Art Dolan, Navy feather, put up the best battle of the day. He slugged it out with Al Wertheimer, national collegiate champion, for the full route. Wertheimer made him miss many times, but Dolan got over an occasional wallop that jarred the champion. Wertheimer was down for a short count in the third, but got up and peppered his man with a two-fisted barrage that had him in bad shape at the bell.

Referee—Jack Lewis.

Metcalfe Shatters 60-Yard Dash Mark

Clocked at 6 1-10 Seconds in Central Collegiate Title Track Meet.

South Bend, Ind., March 11 (A.P.). Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette University's sensational Negro sprinter, ran through another record today, racing 60 yards in 6.1 seconds to better Loren Murchison's 10-year-old mark in the annual Central Intercollegiate Conference indoor championship meet.

Undefeated this year and holding or sharing almost every sprint record, the Hilltop hustler used the fast Notre Dame fieldhouse strip for his latest achievement. Starting faster than usual, he led all the way to defeat Jim Schatte of Michigan Normal, by two feet. His time clipped a tenth of a second off the mark made by Murchison in 1923.

Michigan Normal scored 31½ points to win the team title and break Notre Dame's six-year record as champion. Michigan State College finished second with 28 1-3 points, with Marquette third with 14.

Old Maestro Confesses Weakness for Baseball; Enters Post's Contest

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

HAIR and dandruff were literally showering around The Post baseball contest editor last night as he scratched his head seeking some little idea in the way of news for prospective entrants when suddenly in walked the old maestro, Ben Bernie, who, with his orchestra, is playing at the Earle this week.

Bernie was accompanied by Nelson Bell, The Post's gift to dramatic criticdom, and Hal Totten, Chicago's "Graham McNamee," who is at the mike at all of Bernie's broadcasts.

Following the usual introductions, Ben broke down and confessed that he was guilty on three counts: Firstly, of being a baseball nut; secondly, of having a flair for entering contests, and, thirdly, of having a firm conviction that he can win the contest now being held by The Post.

Has Leaning Toward Old-Timers.

"It doesn't look very hard to me," said Ben, waving his pencil as though it were a baton. "I may be a little rusty on some of the old-timers, but, making allowance for the fact that the ball has been 'rabbited' in recent years, I think a fellow would be perfectly safe in naming practically an entire line-up of stars of not more than ten or twelve years back.

"For instance, there's Joe Judge at first, Bucky Harris at second, Ossie Bluege at third, Joe Cronin at short, Muddy Ruel behind the plate, Walter Johnson, Stanley Coveleskie, Fred Marberry and Al Crowder as pitchers, and Goose Goslin and Sam Rice as outfielders. That leaves me two short, and I have gone to the old-timers for them—Eddie Ainsmith as the second catcher and Clyde Milan as the center fielder."

Oddly enough, Prof. Bernie only hesitated once while filling out his ballot, and that was when he came to the second base position. "To tell you the truth," he said, "I think Buddy Myer's name could go there just as well as Harris', but I'm playing psychology in naming Harris, because I know that he was a great pet of Mr. Griffith's—and after all, you know, I'm trying to match Griffith's selections."

Should Maestro Bernie draw down any of the opening day game box seats offered as the three prizes, it will be a good break for some of the soldiers of Walter Reed Hospital, as he plans to have the tickets sent to the wounded war veterans in case he wins.

"You see, I'm booked up full for the next couple of months and could not arrange to return to Washington for the game. I'm just sending in my ballot because I like to enter contests. That's one of my weaknesses."

If any Washington fans have a weakness this way, they have but a few more days in which to succumb to it, for entries close next Wednesday night.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 11.—Midshipmen marksmen divided honors in a double bill here today. Their varsity team won the annual indoor small bore contest with George Washington University by a score of 1,389 to 1,366, but McKinley High School, of Washington, got the better of the plebes, 1,328 to 1,293. Firing as usual was from prone, kneeling and standing positions.

In the varsity meet, the firing from prone and kneeling was extremely close, the Tars leading by 2 points at the former and one in the latter, but picked up 20 points from standing. Midshipmen Wells and Brightenburg, of the Colonials, tied for high gun honors, each registering 282 of a possible 300. Dave McDougal, captain of the Navy team, who usually captures this honor, tied with Brylamski, of George Washington, for second. Each shot 279.

New Welter Ace Boasts Punch and Perfect Style

Southpaw Finally Wins Crown After Champions Dodged Him for 3 Years; Forces Fields From Start in Title Victory.

By ROBERT EDGREN.

YOUNG CORBETT 3D adds another to the list of American-born world's champions of Italian descent. His real name is Ralph Capabianca Giordeno. He was born at Fresno, Calif., in 1908. The name, "Young Corbett," was given him when he began to box because his fighting style was reminiscent of the days of Young Corbett 2d, who was Willie Rothwell, of Denver, and who did some of his best fighting in California.

It was also something like the fighting of the first "Young Corbett," who was George Green, of the Olympic Club, in San Francisco, who learned his boxing from James J. Corbett and who beat Mysterious Billy Smith at Carson, Nev., on the same day that Corbett lost the heavyweight title to Bob Fitzsimmons. Jim Corbett never had a reason to be sorry these other Corbetts took his name. George Green beat a lot of the most famous welterweights of his time and was a title claimant until he ran up against the doughty Joe Walcott. Rothwell knocked out Terry McGovern twice and scored a long list of wins.

Champs Have Dodged For Three Years.

Young Corbett 3d has been on the trail of the welter crown for several years and the only reason he wasn't champion three years ago was that the champions were afraid to give him a chance to win the title. Corbett is a southpaw. He fights with his right hand and right foot advanced. He is different from other southpaws in that he has developed a practically perfect boxing style and can hit effectively with either hand. While not a slugger, he has scored knockouts in about a third of his fights. He is a clean and forceful hitter, very aggressive, very strong, very fast. He can box with the cleverest.

When he defeated Jackie Fields in ten rounds in San Francisco on Washington's Birthday he took the jump on clever Jackie in the first round, forcing the fighting from the start and landing left-hand punches that traveled so fast Jackie couldn't block or get away. Jimmy McLarnin, sitting at the ringside, was impressed by Corbett's fast, hard, accurate hitting and said after the bout that "any one who fights Corbett will know he's been in a fight." McLarnin refused to take a contender's share of the purse for a Young Corbett match, which shows a certain amount of respect for Corbett's fighting ability. Corbett himself took much less than a contender's share in the Fields fight. Fields pulled down $35,000 and Corbett took the fight for half of what was left of the gate money after taxes, Fields' share and $6,500 for the club's expenses had been deducted, which left a little less than $3,900 for the new champion.

But what Corbett wanted was that world's welterweight championship. He had been waiting a chance to win it for a long time. He is 25, and the past three years have been spent in a drive for that title. Young Corbett was a very good fighter when he first had a chance to meet a champion. Jackie Fields held the title in 1930, having won it from Joe Dundee. On the Pacific Coast there was quite a demand for a Fields-Corbett match, and "Gig" Rooney, then Fields' manager, signed the articles. Fields was clever and a good, game fighter, and if Rooney hardly gave a thought to Corbett's chances he only followed the general opinion of the crowd, for Fields was a heavy favorite in the betting. But Corbett gave the cocky champion a beating through the first six rounds, knocking the wind out of him with left hooks to the body. Corbett broke his good left hand on Fields' head in the eighth and Jackie carried the last two rounds. Corbett took the decision. But it was a long time before his broken hand mended. Corbett didn't get the title in that first fight with Fields and "Gig" Rooney had cautiously insisted that he must come in overweight so the title would not be at stake. Corbett is naturally a welterweight and he had to put on a couple of pounds for the weighing-in.

Thompson Barely Managed To Last.

The following July, when his hand was all right again, Corbett fought Young Jack Thompson, who had defeated Fields in Detroit and was a new title holder. Thompson was strong, clever and dangerous, but Corbett gave him a terrifying whipping, knocking him down and beating him all over the ring. Thompson barely managed to last the ten rounds. But he was protected by an overweight clause, too, Corbett having been forced to come in a pound over the class weight limit to prevent Mr. Thompson from losing the title even if he was knocked out.

For some time the welterweight title has been "protected" in this way by a combination of managers who have so arranged things that it is passed around from one fighter to another without going out of their control. A champion is supposed to be a fighter who stands ready to defend his title against all rivals, but we've had very few real champions in the past ten years.

After whipping Thompson in a nontitle bout, Corbett had to go along meeting ordinary fighters. No titleholder would have anything to do with him. As much as $60,000 was offered Thompson to give Corbett a title fight, and the offer was turned down. Thompson tossed off his title for a small fraction of that amount, and so did Champions Freeman and Brouillard, who also barred any match with Corbett.

When Fields held the title again Corbett was still barred as a contender. Among the silly excuses offered was that the champion didn't like fighting "southpaws." However, there was no more big money to be made in the East, and when the California boxing commissioners ruled that Fields must fight Corbett or nobody in that State, Manager Kearns took the chance and got as much as he could for it.

Young Corbett is not in any combination. He worked his way, lone-handed, against all combinations and won the welter championship by his own efforts and because he is a much better fighter than any of the men who have been passing the crown around. While he was growing discouraged after three years of trying to get a chance to fight for the title, and talked of retiring, now that he is champion, I have no doubt he'll be one of the fighting kind.

MANY CLAIMS TO FAME IN BASEBALL

Rixey Tallest, Critz Lightest, Hoag Has Smallest Feet.

By PAUL MICKELSON.

CHICAGO, March 11 (A.P.).—If you're interested in baseball superlatives, here's a few from the major leagues as they steam up for the big 1933 show:

OLDEST PLAYER — Jack Picus Quinn, of Brooklyn, of course. He'll be 48 years old on July 5 and has been with six major league clubs during his long service—the Yankees, Braves, White Sox, Red Sox, Athletics and Brooklyn. He's suffering from infected teeth and contract trouble, but expects to be ready for the firing line next month.

Rixey Tallest Player In Majors.

TALLEST PLAYER—The veteran, Eppa Rixey, is the giant of them all at 6 feet 5 inches, and has been for a long, long time.

SHORTEST PLAYER — Earl ("Sparky") Adams, ailing Cardinal third baseman, the midget of the majors, standing only 5 feet 4½.

SUPERDREADNAUGHT HEAVYWEIGHT: Bob Fothergill, the "Massilon, Ohio big boy," leads again at the scale tipping pressure of 230 pounds around a 5 foot 10 inch frame.

MAJOR LEAGUE "FLYWEIGHT:" Hughie Critz, of the New York Giants is the lightest of both leagues, boasting only 145 pounds when in the "pink."

OLDEST PITCHING STAFF, rookies included: Cincinnati Reds. Average age 29. Oldest, Eppa Rixey who'll be 42 on May 3. Youngest, Keith Frazier, obtained from Bartlesville, Okla. He'll be 20 on May 18.

Connie Mack Is Oldest Manager.

OLDEST MANAGER: Connie Mack, himself, he's doing it for the 33d straight year and dishing out wisdom to his youngest team in years.

YOUNGEST MANAGER: Joe Cronin of Washington. Twenty-six years old in his first year.

GREATEST STICKER WITH ONE CLUB: Urban "Red" Faber, White Sox. "Uncle Urban" is getting ready for his twentieth straight season with the White Sox, always pitching.

MOST NOTORIOUS TRANSIENT—Burleigh Grimes. Burleigh and his slippery elm have given service to seven major league clubs—Detroit, Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, New York Giants, Boston Braves, St. Louis Cardinals and the Cubs. Never pitched a game for Detroit but it was the first team he got a try with in the majors. Expects big season with Cubs after appendix operation. "Rabbit" Maranville of the Braves has been shifted around ten times among major league clubs but has been connected with only five over a much longer period—22 years—than Grimes. He's been with Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, and St. Louis twice, the Cubs once, and with the Boston Braves three times.

LONGEST MAJOR LEAGUE CAREER WITHOUT GOING TO THE MINORS—Rixey again. Rixey came to the Philadelphia Nationals from the University of Virginia in 1912 and has been in the majors ever since. He pitched eight seasons for the Phillies and is expected to work his thirteenth in a row for the Reds this year.

Ruth Highest Paid Player.

LOWEST PAID PLAYERS—About 10 rookies, who paid their own expenses to the spring training camps for a try.

Infielder Is Injured By Quake on Coast

Long Beach, Calif., March 11 (A.P.). Otis Brannan, second baseman of the Hollywood Baseball Club, of the Pacific Coast League, suffered a foot injury in the earthquake and will be out of action for two weeks. The Green Briar, Ark., player, who formerly played for the St. Louis Browns, became a casualty when he was struck by a piece of flying concrete.

The Hollywood club is training at a Long Beach field. The hotel occupied by the players was slightly damaged in the earthquake. The athletes were temporarily quartered tonight at a gun club.

CAPITAL CITY LEAGUE CALLS MEETINGS FOR ALL CLASSES

Fee Lowered In Unlimited Section

New Officers Ready to Outline Plans for 1933.

THE Capital City Baseball League will start preparations for its eighth season Tuesday night, when all unlimited teams of the city are invited to attend an organization meeting in the offices of the Department of Playgrounds, room 313 District Building.

Following this meeting, all other classes will meet on successive nights. Wednesday, the seniors will gather; Thursday, the juniors, and Friday, the midgets and insects. All meetings will be held at 8 o'clock. It is not necessary to have formed a full team to have a voice in the meeting, as all individuals who are planning clubs are invited to attend.

A new class will come under the fold of the Capital City League this season. For several years the Pee Wees have been clamoring for recognition and adhering to this the new officials decided to call a meeting of these youngsters in the playground office Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Unlimited Class Fee Lowered to $15.

These get-togethers are primarily to outline plans for the coming season which old-time sandlotters say will be the greatest in the history of baseball in the District. Old timers say that hard times give an impetus to the sandlot variety of the National game, and is the stage set?

Some sandlot leaders are of the opinion that the age restrictions should be changed. There are those who think the limit should be raised in certain classes and still others who think it should be lowered. The discussion will be open and the majority opinion will rule.

Franchise fees will be the same as last season with the exception of the unlimited, which will be lowered to $15 from $20, which was the amount of last year. The unlimited franchise is merely a collateral and if a team completes the season without forfeiting more than two games it receives its fee back.

New Officers Form Season's Plans.

The new officers, Richard S. Tennyson, president; Lieut. Max Prentice, vice president; Bernard McCarty, secretary-treasurer; Col. Hjalmar Ericson, Capt. Kendall Fielder and Louis Atchinson, of the board of directors, have formulated some interesting plans for the teams this season.

These officials have arranged for trophies for winning clubs in each division and several interesting innovations that will aid in making the local championships more interesting than ever. The meetings will be short and to the point. The league will be sponsored by The Washington Post and the Department of Playgrounds.

One of the plans that the officials agreed to divulge before meeting time was to hold a mass meeting of all clases before the opening of the season in the board room of the District Building. Figures prominent in baseball, both local and national, will talk and other entertainment will be provided.

Hyattsville High Five Routs Annapolis, 50-9

Special to The Washington Post.

Catonsville, Md., March 11.—Hyattsville High tossers tonight found the Annapolis High five the softest kind of pickings in their first-round match for the Western Shore title in Maryland championship play, winning, 50 to 9. As may be gleaned by the score, the Annapolitans were outclassed from start to finish, the first half netting them but 2 points.

Coger, with 18 points; Calhoun, with 15, and Meade, with 10, appeared to be a match for the rival five almost single-handedly.

Miller, Beaver Dam's Star, Graduate of Caddy Ranks

By DAVE HERMAN.

JOHN R. MILLER, Beaver Dam's sharpshooter of the links, possesses a title in golf that places him in a class all by himself.

Miller, in addition to being the champion of his own club, also is the champion of District Club champions. This is a rather unique title, but Miller richly earned his laurels by outclassing a crack field of champions and runners-up from twelve clubs in the tournament conducted last November at Kenwood.

Playing rock-steady golf throughout the thirty-six holes, the Beaver Dam star carded rounds of 76, 75—151 to top his nearest competitors, one of which was none other than Harry Pitt, of Manor, by five strokes.

This was a feat in itself, and when it is to be considered, that Miller defeated the best golfer from each District club, his performance is really something to brag about.

Due to the press of business, Miller has participated in few tournaments around this section, but when he finds the time to play in them, Dame Fortune usually smiles on him. Before joining hands with Beaver Dam four years ago, the champion of champions did quite a bit of golfing as a public links player. For three successive years—1925, 1926 and 1927—he had the honor of representing Washington in national public links tournaments. It was in the municipal championship at Cleveland in 1926, that Miller proved a serious threat for national honors. Here he qualified easily, disposed of his first-round opponent, but was eliminated in the quarter finals.

Twice Departmental Champion.

Miller was twice departmental champion, acquiring this title in 1929, losing it the next year, but regaining it in 1931. Last year he was beaten out by two strokes by Tom Belshe, Indian Spring Big Bertha, despite a sensational 72 on his last round at Kenwood. This 72, 10 strokes lower than his first day's performance, proves that he is a golfer with strong finishing powers.

You might call Miller a veteran in golf. About 25 years ago he started out as a caddy at the old Columbia Country Club, on Georgia avenue, toted the bags for about six years, but decided that baseball was a much better sport. From 1915 to 1923, Miller was an active figure in District amateur baseball circles. He was a star catcher with the Park View A. C., which twice won the unlimited championship.

1921 National Open Inspiration.

Golf again caught his fancy during the summer of 1921. It happened at the Columbia Country Club and the event was the national open. Here he saw Long Jim Barnes blaze home triumphantly with a record-smashing score. He says he watched with interest the playing of Bobby Jones and Gene Sarazen, both of whom were beginning to make their preference felt at that time in national competition. Miller became inspired by the performances of these two young fellows and decided to dig up his old aluminum clubs of the vintage 1910, add a few more sticks to his equipment, and resume his golf in a serious way.

A very steady player, Miller has the unruffled calm of a Walter Hagen. He hits all of his shots well and is deadly with his approaches. Miller claims he gets more pleasure out of playing his chip shots with a mashie niblick than with any other shot in his bag. He attributes his accuracy in the short game to good timing and wrist action.

Two Fine Rounds Netted Club Title.

In winning the Beaver Dam championship this year—and he whipped through the field like a hurricane—Miller shot as low as 72 and 73 over a course that has withstood the challenge of the best golfers in the District. He also was runner-up in the Brightwood ex-caddies championship, won by Harry Pitt, in which competition his old friend, George Voigt was a contestant.

Miller is so encouraged by his playing during 1932 that he expects to take time this season to participate in the various championship events conducted in the District and Middle Atlantic section. He bears watching.

5 GOLF TIES IN HAGEN TOURNEY

Dutra, Smith, Wood, Espinosa, Runyan Card 70's.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 11 (A.P.).—Bunched at the top of the pack with scores of 70 each, five of the country's leading professionals today led a classy field that included winners of every major championship this winter, at the halfway mark of the 36-hole $1,500 Walter Hagen open golf tournament here.

Topping the 40 entries, with scores of two under par were Olin Dutra, of Los Angeles; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y.; Al Espinosa, Akron, Ohio; Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., and Horton Smith, Chicago.

Three other stellar shot makers—Walker Hagen, Detroit; Johnny Rouse, Chicago, and Harry Cooper, Chicago—turned in subpar cards of 71 for the first day's play over the Florida Country Club course.

With the field so closely bunched, a battle royal over the concluding 18 holes tomorrow in quest of the $300 first prize money was promised.

Six players, all bracketed at 73, were within easy striking distance of the opening day's pace setters. They are Clarence Hackney, Atlantic City, N. J.; H. T. Allen, Deland, Fla.; Archie Hambrick, Zanesville, Ohio; Dick Metz, Deal, N. J.; Roland Hancock, Stoneham, Mass., and John Revolta, Menominee, Mich.

Willie Macfarland, Tuckahoe, N. Y.; and Tony Manero, Elmsford, N. Y., tied with 74's, and Charles Guest, Deal, N. J., had a 75.

Five players tied with 76 each. They are Henry Bon Tempo, Springfield, Mass.; Joe Ezar, St. Louis; Walter Johnstone, Vero Beach, Fla.; George Christ, Rochester, N. Y., and Bill Mehlhorn, New York. Clarence Doser, Rochester, N. Y., took a 77.

MIDDLEBURG HUNT CARD LISTED

Twelve Events Carded in April 15, 19 Meeting.

Special to The Washington Post.

WINCHESTER, Va., March 11.—Twelve events, four over timber, three over brush, four on the flat, and one for mules, constitute the program for the thirteenth annual hunt race meeting of the fashionable Middleburg Hunt, to be run Saturday, April 15, and Wednesday, April 19, at the famous Glenwood course on the estate of Daniel C. Sands, M. F. H. of the hunt, in Loudoun County, east of here.

The meeting is under the sanction of the hunts committee of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association. Entries close at midnight, Saturday, April 8, with Robert B. Young, secretary, Middleburg. Amateur riders must be qualified under the rules of the N. S. and H. A.

Interest in the meeting, always one of the best sponsored by hunt clubs in the East, is widespread. The indications point to a record entry list.

The Middleburg meeting follows by one week the meeting of the Deep Run Hunt Club at Curles Neck, on the James River below Richmond, the season opening April 1 at Camden, S. C. From Middleburg the scene of galloping silks shifts to Maryland for the series of point-to-points in that State, culminating in the historic Maryland Hunt Cup, stiffest race in America, to be run April 26. The steeplechasers will come back to Virginia May 6 for the annual running of the Virginia Gold Cup at Warrenton.

Horsemen who keep in touch with what's going on in the various racing establishments that patronize the hunt club meetings in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania are of the opinion that the forthcoming season will see more top horses under colors than has been the rule in recent years.

As in former years, the feature race at Middleburg is the Middleburg Cup, to be run the opening day. The Middleburg Cup, for 4-year-olds and upward, the bona-fide property of persons making the entry, is to be run over 4 miles of stiff timber.

KENTUCKIANS DOMINATE TEAM.

Atlanta (A.P.).—The first All-Southeastern Conference basket ball team contains the names of DeMoisey, forward; Sale, center, and Johnson, guard, all of Kentucky; Wade, of Louisiana State, guard, and Waits, of Mississippi, forward.

Women's Champs Run Win Streak To 57 Straight

Durant, Okla. (A.P.).—The fifty-seventh consecutive victims of the Cardinals of Oklahoma Presbyterian College, who will defend their National A. A. U. women's basket ball championship at the tournament in Wichita, Kans., March 20-23, were the Dallas Golden Cyclones, Babe Didrikson's old team which was ousted from the championship last year by the Cardinals.

The national champion women's team, captained by Doll Harris, leading feminine basket ball scorer in the Nation, averaged more than 100 points per game in one series in Oklahoma and Texas this year. They beat the Mangum All-Stars, 102-8; the Sherman Pool Team, 99-8, and the McKinney, Tex. Independents, 104-11.

MacDonald Smith Returns to First Love—Clubmaking

Nashville, Tenn. (A.P.).—MacDonald Smith, the veteran Carnoustie Scot, has found a golfing thrill more satisfying than a 300-yard tee shot dead to the pin.

Although one of golfdom's foremost stylists, Smith's new love in the game of woods and irons is the designing of golf clubs that have come to be accepted as among the best on the market. And what a kick he gets from perfecting these implements for golfing wars.

A firm believer in hickory-shaft clubs, it was not strange that Mac Smith should come to the land of hickory to realize a long-nurtured dream of his—the perfect golf club.

After the big tournaments of last year Mac headed for Nashville, home of "Old Hickory," where the loads of raw hickory pour in from the neighboring timberlands. Here he quietly established his workshop. In fact, he was in the city six weeks before he was discovered and welcomed as a citizen.

Now almost everyone knows where to find Mac when he is not firing away in a tournament. He's in his workshop, filing a club head, swinging a model or experimenting in hickory shafts.

He is something of a "Hickory" zealot, and there is an ever-increasing flock of converts to his shafts. Among the latest are Leo Diegel and the veteran Belle Meade Country Club professional, George Livingstone. Also there is a five-year contract to supply all shafts and wood heads for the Professional Golfers Association.

"For the good golfer, the sensitive, five-fingered golfer, there is no substitute for hickory," Smith says. "The golfer who desires perfection thinks of his clubs as a master musician does his violin. There is a feel to it—a feel that only hickory can give.

Diamond Oiler Five Wins A. A. U. Crown

Kansas City, March 11 (A.P.).—The Diamond Oilers of Tulsa, Okla., won the A. A. U. national basket ball championship here tonight by defeating Rosenberg, of Chicago, 25-23.

The Oilers, who defeated the Wichita (Kans.) Henrys, three times champions, in last night's semifinals, held a 13-7 lead at the intermission, but the Chicago team, a dark horse of the tournament, played brilliant ball in the second half to wipe out the advantage and make the issue in doubt until the end.

Atlantic Coast Doubles To Harrison and Newman

JOE HARRISON and "Dutch" Newman last night won the Atlantic Coast doubles championship, the event being rolled in two five-game blocks. At Lucky Strike, in the afternoon, this pair turned in a 1,286 total and it put on the finishing touches at the Northeast Temple alleys in the evening, ending with a mark of 2,601. Besides the glory, the victory netted the winners $50, while second prize of $25 went to Ray Barnes and Astor Clarke, who had a 2,534 total.

The event proved to be strictly a two-team affair, with Harrison-Newman and Barnes-Clarke running in the positions in which they finished from soon after play started. The latter duo had a 1,255 to show for the first five games.

Bowling Standings

RALLYING in the final three-game block of the Husband and Wife bowling tournament at the Arcadia last night, Mr. and Mrs. Minson came from fourth to first with a brilliant set of 729—the highest rolled in either block. This gave them a 1,365 total. Mr. and Mrs. P. Harrison finished second, with 1,328, and Mr. and Mrs. Quigley's 1,301 was sufficiently high to net third place.

There were many changes in this final block. As the first one ended, it looked as though it would be a two-family affair between the Quigleys and Harrisons, who topped the field with 683 and 680, respectively. Neither pair could closely approach the Minsons' 729, however, while the Harrisons were able to pull up to second place by turning in a 648 as against the Quigleys' 618.

Surely no one can say that Mrs. Minson was any handicap to her spouse last night, for she had a 354 set as a result of 123, 104 and 127 games. Her husband trailed her in the first and last game, but came through with a fine 148 in the middle one, which helped considerably. This, by the way, was high game for the night, while Mrs. Minson's 127 tied Mrs. Collins for high among the "weaker" sex.

MT. RAINIER HIGH NINE REPORTS

Diamonders Due to Answer Call on Wednesday.

CANDIDATES for the Mount Rainier High School Baseball Team will be assembled for the first time this season Wednesday afternoon by Coach Perry Wilkinson. Practice will get under way Thursday or Friday with favorable weather conditions.

With the same material available that gave the Mounts the runner-up position last year in the northern division of the Prince Georges County scholastic series, prospects for another successful season are bright. Most of the 1932 players will have to hustle to hold onto their positions, however, as a number of last year's reserves are at hand and some promising new material is likely to develop.

Ten 1932 Veterans Return.

Mount Rainier has high hopes of going far in the Prince Georges County championship series, which will start about April 15. Last season the Mounts twice defeated Hyattsville High, strong county rival, but succumbed to Maryland Park in the final game for northern county honors.

Providing weather conditions are favorable, a general athletic program at Mount Rainier High will be started March 20 under supervised direction of faculty members.

KENILWORTH FIVE WINS CROWN

Mt. Vernon Bows, 29-28, in Sunday School League Thriller.

THE Kenilworth team won the championship of the Sunday School League last night by defeating the Mount Vernon five, 29 to 28, in a thrilling battle, decided by a free toss dropped through the rim at the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium last night by Bob Lyles, with the score tied at 28-all and less than a minute to play.

Kenilworth succeeds the Elbrooke team as the champion and turned back the effort of the Mount Vernon five to regain the crown it wore for a number of seasons. In addition to his winning point, Lyles teamed with Zahn at guard to hold Don Garber and Forest Burgess, the latter the G. W. star, without a field goal in the second half, while Roberts' hot hand put Kenilworth back in the running.

Mount Vernon started with a dash which seemed to have the game headed for a rout. Kenilworth moved up on their rivals and was trailing by two points, 15 to 13, at the half. From that point on it was anybody's game.

DOWN the FAIRWAY
by DAVE HERMAN

IN an effort to stimulate more interest in District golf, Al Houghton, Kenwood's wizard of the links, will open a coaching school at the Central Y. M. C. A. on April 3.

This announcement should come as pleasing news to members of the Y. M. C. A. who are anxious to learn something about the ancient Scottish pastime. Houghton plans to give six lessons each week. Young and old will participate, the Kenwood professor tells us.

Devoting an hour to each lesson, Houghton will stress the fundamentals of the game. His task should not be a hard one, since most of his pupils will consist of men who are well conditioned and will not need much limbering up before they are able to swing the clubs freely.

This Houghton fellow, besides being a sturdy money golfer and instructor de luxe, has always had his eyes open for enterprises of this type. Already he has acquired the reputation of being a good promoter of tournaments, as testified by the success which crowned his efforts in the two National Capital open championships staged at Kenwood. Such undertakings are naturally done for the sake of dear old golf.

Houghton Expected to Branch Out.

It would not be surprising to see Houghton branch out in the professional field in the next few years. He has the spirit of a go-getter, and is looking to better himself. Last year his prize money from tournaments amounted to over $1,000, and he stands alone in this respect in the Middle Atlantic section. This season Houghton expects to exceed this figure.

It is no secret that Houghton was given a flattering offer by a local organization to become business manager of the public links golf courses when that body was attempting to outbid Concessionaire Loeffler. Houghton, it is recalled, quickly turned down the proposition, stating he preferred to continue as a playing pro. Such a decision unquestionably showed that he has confidence in his ability to go out and win money in a field that is composed of some of the finest young professionals this country has ever seen.

The Kenwood pro was to have teamed with Henry Picard, of Charleston, S. C., in the international four-ball championship in Florida won by Horton Smith and Paul Runyan. He had to call off the trip, thus delaying his first crack at 1933 professional competition. Houghton, however, will open his campaign on March 24-25-26, when he will participate in the South Carolina open test slated for the Wappwo Country Club, of Charleston. This carries a $2,500 purse. He embarks on March 21.

North-South Tourney Gives Houghton Bid.

As a tribute to his fine 1932 performances, Houghton recently accepted an invitation to participate in the famous North and South open championship at Pinehurst, N. C. Of course, anyone may enter, but the invitation means free room and board during the two-day classic March 27-28. Johnny Golden, stocky Noroton, Conn., pro, is the defending champion. Houghton likes to play at Pinehurst. It was over this beautifully designed layout that he tied with Picard and Al Watrous for first place in the Midsouth open back in November.

Another Houghton comes marching along. He is Al's younger brother, Bill, a lad of 17 summers. Bill has been converted from ranking No. 1 caddy at Kenwood to assistant to his big brother. Already he has taken on the professional air in the golfshop.

Bill Houghton was the youngster who caddied for Horton Smith when the Joplin Ghost won the National Capital Open this past season. Smith considered him one of the finest caddies he ever had, and so satisfied was he with the boy's work that he handed him a good bit over $50 for the job of toting the bags 54 holes during two of the coldest golf days this District has seen in many a year.

To quote Horton Smith:

"That boy knows how to caddy. He is as good as they come. His judgment in selecting clubs was perfect."

Give this Bill Houghton a few more years of experience and you will see his name in bold relief. Right now he plays in the low seventies.

Kenwood Plans for Busy Season.

Kenwood, which will sponsor another National Capital event this fall, is getting ready for an active golf season. The course is being dressed up. The new club manager, R. S. Bohen, formerly of the Racquet Club of Philadelphia and Chevy Chase, is mapping out a program of golf activities. Bohen, successor to C. P. Grady, has been connected in executive capacities with different golf clubs for the past 22 years, and Kenwood considers itself fortunate in being able to secure such a man for the post.

Bill Bowman, the lanky youngster who greets Kenwood players at the first tee, will continue as caddy master.

No stone will be left unturned by Manor Golf Club officials in their effort to whip the course into championship condition for the sectional trials for the national open on May 15. Work of remodeling the ninth green will commence shortly. Golfers have complained that it is too sloping and the carpet will be rebuilt so as to give it a true putting surface. The tees also will be rebuilt.

Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase maestro, will return to his professional duties here April 1 or 2, he told Bill Hardy, one of his assistants, during the course of a long distance telephone conversation the other day from the former's winter golf club, Indian Creek, Miami Beach, Fla.

Barnett called for the express purpose of having Hardy make him up a set of clubs. Hardy went to work on the sticks right away. Which goes to show you what a craftsman this Hardy fellow is. Barnett long has considered him one of the finest young clubmakers in the country.

Larkin Also Due Back Soon At Chevy Chase.

When Barnett returns, Gene Larkin, his assistant, who also is holding down a professional winter post in Florida, will be back at Chevy Chase. In the absence of both, Hardy has been holding down the fort, ably assisted by Sandy Douglas, the veteran Scot caddy master.

Chevy Chase plans no big alterations on the course this year. The sand traps are being cleaned to make them more fluffy, the trees are being touched up, and shrubs and additional trees are being planted.

Take Harry Strong, for example. Playing the second hole, he missed his second, but sank his third for a birdie, thanks to the use of a number six iron. He approached from 153 yards.

His brother, J. P. Strong, playing in the same foursome, wished the six or eight inch cup was present on the fourth green. Shooting from 100 yards away, his ball danced up to within one inch of the hole and stopped dead. He missed an eagle by that margin, but got his birdie four on this tough 465-yard hole.

T. L. Menne, a new member at Beaver Dam, whipped out his mashie on the sixth and canned a 50-yard approach for a birdie three.

Now comes the trap shot demon. His name is A. W. Smith. He knocked his third into the treacherous trap guarding the green on the 465-yard par 5 tenth, and holed out with his niblick.

Beaver Dam Improving Course.

Beaver Dam promises to be a busy course this spring and summer. The management is going forward with its program of improvements. Cliff Spencer's modernly equipped golf shop, which will also have a neat place in the rear to shelter the caddies, will be dedicated next week. It is situated in a strategic spot, just by the first and tenth tees.

Temporary greens, which were being used for some time at Beaver Dam, were abandoned last week in place of the regulation carpets. The permanent greens were being treated with chemical for ground patch. Cliff Spencer explains that the reason for the delay in reopening them was due to the fact that it would be dangerous to play on them until after a good rain. Why? He explains that the chemical applied would burn the green if golfers were to walk over them before the rain.

Of cheering news to Beaver Dam golfers is the announcement of the opening in the spring of a driving range about 300 yards long. An attractive putting green also will be installed some time in the near future, it was announced.

The three new holes which are being inserted on the third nine are certain to strengthen this layout considerably. No. 6 will be converted into a 190-yarder, No. 7 a 490-yarder and No. 8 150-yarder. The ninth hole, incidentally, will be enlarged to 440 yards.

In going over the list of good prospects for the District this season, it might be well to mention the name of Douglas Mattison, who in the opinion of Cliff Spencer, bears the earmarks of a champion golfer. Mattison is gradually whittling his score down to the low eighties. Although a trifle wild off the tee he has nice form, and is fast improving. Maybe another Johnny Miller or Martin McCarthy!

Holes Add Driving Power To Golf Clubs.

A recent issue of Popular Science brings forth a story that the holes in the face of golf clubs add to driving power. This is interesting news to local clubmakers.

According to the article, by decreasing the air resistance, perforations in the head of the golf club are said to increase the distance of drives by more than 15 per cent.

Continuing the article says:

"The clubhead is hollow with ¼-inch holes running through from side to side. On the reverse side is an oblong opening, revealing the inside. The inventor follows the principle of the tennis racquet in reducing air resistance, reasoning that the club should be constructed to travel through the air with greatest possible ease."

Improved and larger tees and better fairways and greens are causing no end of comment at Rock Creek these days. Already eleven tees, 30 by 50, have been fixed up. They are three times as large as the other tees.

Two well-known feminine golfers of the District are sojourning in the south. They are Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, of Columbia, and Mrs. Harrison Brand, of Chevy Chase.

Middle Atlantic champion and winner of numerous medal honors in District events, Mrs. Haynes left a few days ago to spend some time with friends in Augusta, Ga. While in Augusta, she expects to participate in the tournament on March 17, 18, and also to get in quite a bit of golf before returning to compete in the many women's championships which the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association will sponsor, beginning this spring. In the Augusta tournament, Mrs. Haynes will be playing in a field composed of a number of British stars.

Mrs. Brand, one of the outstanding golfers at Chevy Chase, is in Miami Beach, recuperating from a recent illness.

George Diffenbaugh, abbreviated Indian Spring pro, continues to report improvement in the golf game of Dick Kreusberg, young Georgetown student. Kreusberg, in recent strolls over the course, has been hitting close to the 70 mark. Here is a boy who possesses a polished iron game.

Diffenbaugh also let us in on a secret. Tom Belshe, to whom he gave his first lesson about six years ago, does not like winter golf. Belshe plays his best golf during the spring and summer. The former champion of Indian Spring shuns the cold weather, the pro reports.

GLASSFORD GATHERS HEAVY SUPPORT FOR D. C. COMMISSIONER

Lack of Legal Residence Is Obstacle; Offutt Hurt by G. O. P. Backing.

By J. BERNARD M'DONNELL.

Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, retired, erstwhile chief of police of Washington, has been seriously advanced for the post of District Commissioner.

President Roosevelt has been asked by a newspaper publisher, who supported the Roosevelt candidacy in the last political campaign, to appoint Gen. Glassford.

Whether Gen. Glassford will be appointed remains to be seen. The President is willing to pay his political debts if the payment demanded does not go beyond the lines of reasonableness. But one of the major difficulties confronting Gen. Glassford in his ambition to be District Commissioner is the question of residence.

The law requires that a District Commissioner shall be a bona fide resident of the city. Gen. Glassford is not a legal resident of Washington. He always has claimed some other place as his home. Following his resignation as superintendent of police here, he announced he was going back home and he left the National Capital to launch a private venture in the State he claimed as his home. Subsequently, he returned to Washington in response to demands that he return and permit himself to be advertised and gather friendships with the view to support for his prospective candidacy.

Candidacy Is Serious.

Gen. Glassford's candidacy is to be taken seriously. There will at least be a battle about it.

Another of the more important candidacies for District Commissioner is that of George W. Offutt, jr. Mr. Offutt is a Washington lawyer who has long been indentified with civic affairs. He is chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council of the District. His appointment has been urged in a letter addressed to the President. The letter was signed by several widely known business men of Washington. Both Republicans and Democrats have signed the letter.

Robert N. Harper, who made a fortune selling a patent medicine and later became president of the District National Bank, from which he retired some time ago, is one of those who have indorsed Mr. Offutt's candidacy. Mr. Harper has been an active Democrat in the District in the days when it wasn't popular to be a Democrat in Washington and his indorsement will have weight.

Indorsers That Hurt.

But other indorsements of Mr. Offutt's candidacy will probably hurt more than they will help. The names which are said to be signed to the letter for the President include Thomas P. Littlepage, who confided to newspaper reporters a couple of years ago that he was the Republican "boss" of Washington; Mark Lansburgh, former president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, wealthy department store owner, and another Republican, Edwin C. Graham, who has often been described as one of the Republican "bosses" of the District; E. C. Brandenberg, another Republican, who is counsel of the Board of Trade, and others. But Mr. Offutt's candidacy also is to be taken seriously. If he has powerful local Republican support, he also has the support of some Democrats.

John H. Korman, formerly connected with the Prohibition Buerau, is another candidate, as is Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, incumbent, who wants to be reappointed. Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired, who was chairman of the inaugural committee, also has been advanced for the post. Admiral Grayson's opponents, however, are discounting his claim to preference by saying that the genial, widely beloved former physician to President Wilson is a perennial director of inaugural ceremonies. There are others who haven't been mentioned, as well as the large number who have been mentioned in these columns. Obviously most of the candidates are going to be disappointed. There are only two Commissionerships. One the surest bets, however, is that whoever is appointed will be a person who meets with the approval of John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman, and his brother-in-arms, John B. Colpoys, chairman of the Democratic central committee of the District.

Newspaperman Is Backed For Commissioner Post

Fred E. Emery, well-known Washington newspaperman, was indorsed for District Commissioner by the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association at a meeting last night at the Mount Pleasant branch of the Public Library.

Mr. Emery was invited to the meeting and introduced by an officer of the association. A native of Washington, he was one of the founders of the National Press Club, is a member of the board of managers of the Columbia Historical Society, and vice president of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

Thomas H. Braden, president of the association, presided. Following the meeting refreshments were served.

Dr. Reichelderfer Speaks on Health

Tuberculosis Economy Is Called Short-Sighted Because of Gains.

The early diagnosis campaign sponsored by the National Tuberculosis Association was officially approved for Washington in a statement issued yesterday by Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, president of the Board of District Commissioners.

"Speaking not only in my official capacity," he said, "but also as a physician, I feel that it is my duty to remind the public that we are not yet out of danger from the spread of tuberculosis and that our city has experienced an increased number of deaths from this disease during the past three years.

"During this and ensuing years we are likely to feel the effects of the continued economic depression. It is false economy to cut the provision for maintaining our various public health services at such a time as this."

Gibson Offers Bill That Passed Last Session Just From Habit.

For years Representative Ernest W. Gibson (Republican), Vermont, has been introducing and reintroducing in Congress a bill to revise the District license code. It has become a habit with him.

Every session, as regularly as each new Congress rolls around, Representative Gibson has dug the bill out of his files and dropped it in the House bill hopper. It mattered not that it was just as regularly ignored by the House District Committee.

But last session the District Commissioners got behind the measure and it was made law. But Representative Gibson is a consistent and persistent legislator. Yesterday he introduced it again. At his office it was explained that it was dropped into the hopper by mistake and would be withdrawn.

Three local measures, including a bill to deny lawyers who have not passed the District bar the privilege of calling themselves attorneys in the District, were reintroduced in the Senate yesterday.

The lawyer bill was put in by Chairman William H. King of the Senate District Committee, who thinks District bar membership should be essential to hanging out a lawyer's shingle in the District.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, former chairman of the District Committee, reintroduced bills to eliminate alley dwellings in the District, and authorize the laying of fuel pipe in Northeast Washington.

FIRE HOUSE ON 16TH STREET POSTPONED

Economy Delays Building at Colorado Avenue After Battle Over Site.

Although the District Commissioners have won a long-fought battle to establish their right to erect a fire house at Sixteenth street and Colorado avenue, they probably will not take advantage of the victory for several years because of a desire to economize at every opportunity.

Fire Chief George S. Watson yesterday conferred with Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, commissioner in charge of the Fire Department, about the matter. He insisted that the site should not be changed, but he pointed out that maintenance of the fire house would cost $40,000 a year.

The District government has $71,718.50, appropriated in 1928, to build the fire house, but it is not likely that the Commissioners will take on an additional liability of $40,000 a year at this time.

Only a few months ago the United States Supreme Court held that the District Commissioners had the right to use the site in question for a fire house location even though it was bought for park purposes.

Residents of upper Sixteenth street have fought against location of the fire house in that vicinity for several years.

HOUSE REALIGNMENT OF SUBCOMMITTEES HINTED BY BUCHANAN

Assignments to Be Delayed Until New Bureau Set-Up Is Ready.

A realignment of House Appropriation subcommittee membership all along the line, after the House resumes sessions following its brief recess, was hinted at yesterday by Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, slated to be next chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Representative Buchanan said he was influenced in this intention by the prospect of widespread shifts in Federal agencies under Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas' Government reorganization plan.

Month's Delay Seen.

His decision may delay appointment of the House District Appropriations subcommittee and subsequent reconsideration of the District appropriations bill, defeated last session, by at least a month.

Representative Buchanan indicated that the local subcommittee would be among the first organized, to expedite consideration of the measure He said he may organize the deficiencies appropriations subcommittee before any of the others.

Haste Waste of Time.

"It would be foolish to appoint members to the various departmental subcommittees now, when we do not know what Federal agencies will be handled by the groups to which they are named," he said.

"We have members of the House who are experts on the finances of certain bureaus and departments, and it is essential that they be appointed to the subcommittee handling supplies for those bureaus. When I receive some intimation of what the reorganization plan will contain, I will make my assignments, but that may not be until we return from the next recess."

Scene of the Schindler Peanut Products, Inc., plant as fire swept it, doing $25,000 damage.

OLD ATHLETIC CLUB, NOW PLANT, BURNS

Peanut Butter Factory Fire Rages Next to 15,000 Gallons of Gasoline.

Having withstood the grunts and groans of wrestlers when it was the Business Men's Athletic Club more than 40 years ago and many years of use as Schindler's Peanut Butter Factory, one of the old Washington landmarks, at 1339 South Capitol street, succumbed to flames yesterday which seriously injured two firemen and endangered the whole neighborhood by their proximity to 15,000 gallons of gasoline.

The ramshackle structure remembered by all of this city's "old-timers" blazed furiously for more than an hour as firemen who responded to three alarms battled the flames to prevent them from spreading to the cleaning plant next door, where the large quantity of gasoline was stored. The building smoldered about three hours, keeping a large force of firemen at the scene.

Fireman Henry J. Beahm, 38, of 1316 Forty-fifth place southeast, attached to No. 23 Engine Company, suffered a fractured arm, injured side and possible internal injuries when he fell down an elevator shaft in the burning structure.

Fireman William James, 35, of 3103 Alaska avenue southeast, was treated for severe burns to the face and burns to his eyes. Both men were admitted to Emergency Hospital.

The flames were first seen by Dallas Mitchell, an employe of the Howard Cleaner's plant, next door. He called in an alarm and notified Wilbur H. Odell, manager of the plant, who sent all of his employes out of the building nearest the flames and operated a fire trap which sends all of the inflammable cleaning fluid on the premises into tanks in the ground.

Calvin Lauber, District fire marshal, estimated the damage caused by fire at about $25,000. The fire was said to have been started by a peanut cooker, which was found in operation. Gas flames under it were thought to have boiled the peanut oil over the cooker and started the blaze.

All of the employes of the plant had left the building at 1 p. m. and an hour later the fire was discovered.

G. U. SEISMOGRAPH WAVES ARE TANGLED

Father Sohon Believes Only First Quake Caused Excessive Damage.

The main and initial shock began at 9:02 p. m. Friday night and it was followed by five after-shocks, the Rev F. A. Sohon, director of the seismological laboratory, said.

Of the shocks, Father Sohon said, only the first could have caused excessive damage. The others were recorded at 10:45 p. m., 11:45 p. m., 12:30 a. m., 2:30 a. m. and 4:30 a. m.

The first shock was not severe as major earthquakes go, Father Sohon said. He interpreted it as another of the California disturbances

The tangled earth waves set up by the series of shocks, he said, made a complicated record on the instrument from which it was impossible to determine the exact center of the disturbance.

The California quakes are explained on the principle of isostasy, or disturbed balance far below the surface of the earth.

This balance is disturbed by the deposit of eroded material on the ocean floor near the coast. When this deposit becomes sufficiently heavy the underlying rocks give way and there is a sudden severe shock.

9,683 IN THIRD CORPS AREA SEEK TRAINING, 50 PER CENT EXCESS

Registration for C. M. T. C. Continues Heavy; Many Quotas Unfilled.

Continued heavy registration of applicants for enrollment in this year's citizens military training camps has drawn a suspension of active procurement this week in one-third of the counties in the Third Corps Area, according to Maj. Charles Demonet, in charge of District procurement.

Maj. Demonet went on to explain, however, that registration has not yet closed in Washington although there is every indication that it will close soon. He urged all boys between 17 and 29 who are interested in the free summer training to communicate with his committee and to file applications at the earliest possible date.

50 Per Cent Excess.

With the opening of camps still four months away, 9,683 applications have been received in the C. M. T. C. office at Corps Area Headquarters in Baltimore. This represents an excess of 50 per cent over this year's procurement objective of 6,000 for the corps area as a whole.

Of the 64 counties that have so far exceeded their quotas as to bring a suspension in active procurement, 33 are in Virginia, 30 in Pennsylvania and one county, Alleghany, in Maryland.

Procurement activities will be continued in all other counties under the policy of giving equal opportunity to every community. Where quotas have been exceeded surplus applicants are placed on a preferred waiting list to be accepted in order of the date of application in filling shortages in counties where the quotas are not attained.

Will Open on July 11.

All C. M. T. C. in the Third Corps Area will open this year on July 11 and will be conducted for 30 days. Mileage to and from camp, all necessary expenses, such as food, shelter, medical attention and clothing are provided by the Government.

As formerly, the camp courses this year will stress citizenship training and physical development along with drill and marksmanship. The largest camp will be at Fort George G. Meade, Md., where 1,950 students will be trained. Other posts near Washington maintaining C. M. T. C. camps are Fort Hoyle, Md.; Fort Washington, Md.; Fort Howard, Md.; Fort Meyer, Va., and Fort Monroe, Va.

Senate Group Is Named For Mail Contract Quiz

(Associated Press.)

Vice President Garner set up a committee of five senators yesterday to investigate the policy of awarding ocean and air mail contracts.

The committee, appointed in compliance with a resolution adopted at the last session, is headed by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, and includes Senators King (Democrat), Utah; McCarran (Democrat), Nevada; Austin (Republican), Vermont, and White (Republican), Maine.

Man Writes Note; Dies From Poison

Fred Yaeger, 44, 4700 Georgia avenue northwest, died at Casualty Hospital late yesterday afternoon from the effects of a quantity of poison which police said he swallowed with suicidal intent.

He was found lying on an old cot in a garage at the rear of 1604 Park road northwest, where his wife, Edith, was employed by E. J. Davis, who called the rescue squad. First aid was quickly administered and he was removed to the hospital, where he died a short time after arrival.

Police said a note he had written indicated he had planned to commit suicide. It also was learned that he came to Washington only a few weeks ago from Raleigh, N. C.

3 Utilities Decide Against Penalties

Also Declare They Will Not Suspend Service in Banking Crisis.

Three Washington public utilities have informed Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, that they will not invoke penalties or suspend service during the banking crisis, even though the moratorium ordered the first of last week expired yesterday.

The Potomac Electric Power Co., the Washington & Georgetown Gas Light Co. and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. have all indicated a willingness to extend every consideration possible to their customers.

Because of this attitude the commission probably will not renew the moratorium order this week, but will keep a close check on the situation.

Haven Afforded Evicted Renters

Families Are Accepted on Condition They Move When Income Rises.

Two buildings at 919-921 Twelfth street northwest have been converted by the Volunteers of America into a haven for families evicted from their homes for nonpayment of rent, it was announced yesterday by Staff Capt. Arthur E. Wise, regional commander of the organization.

The three-story structures on Twelfth street were turned over to the Volunteers by C. Phillips Hill, of the Doubleday-Hill Electric Co. Families sheltered in the haven are selected by the Emergency Relief Bureau. No rent is charged the occupants, the only condition attached to their occupancy being that they will move to other quarters as soon as their incomes become sufficient to enable them to pay rent.

LOCUST ROAD HOME OPEN FOR VISITORS

Model House of Washington Post Has Attractive Advantages.

The latest Washington Post model home sponsored by J. Wesley Buchanan, Inc., and built by Paul T. Stone, Inc., will be open to the public for the first time today. This home is located at 1334 Locust road northwest, which is one block north of Kalmia road, in that delightful upper Sixteenth street section that offers many advantages as to location and convenience. The home is a brilliant example of quality construction and economical maintenance.

Built at a time when construction costs are probably at the lowest ebb; painstakingly designed by an architect of broad experience on colonial architecture and sturdily constructed, it has a charming setting with dogwood trees on its front and rear terraces.

The building itself is of all brick construction with unusually wide windows which permit added light to each room in the house. It is of the popular center hall plan, the living room being to the left of the hall, with colonial open fireplace and door opening to large covered living porch to the side of the house.

At the back of the living room are double French doors leading into a most attractive den or library. On the other side of the hall is a modern colonial dining room, to the rear of which is a kitchen that will delight any housekeeper. There just seems to be those extra cabinets and drawers that every housewife has looked for and seldom found in the average modern residence.

At the rear of the hall is a lavatory and toilet which may be approached either from the center entrance hall, the library or den, or the kitchen.

On the Second Floor.

On the second floor there is a master bedroom, dressing room and private bath the entire depth of the house. On the other side of the hall are two other modern bedrooms with connecting door between. The connecting door is a feature in itself, as it can be used as a connecting entrance between the bedrooms, or closed to make an extra closet for either of these rooms. These two bedrooms are served by a very beautiful bathroom, conveniently located, and also reached through the hall on the second floor.

The third floor has been completely finished in celotex and will make an excellent overflow room, playroom, storage room or could even be converted into an additional bedroom if needed.

One of the many features of the home is a very large and beautifully arranged recreation room in the basement, which is attractively finished with oak flooring. There is, of course, a suitable laundry and furnace room, and a two-car detached brick garage at the rear, with paved alley.

The builders and sponsors of this home are to be commended for the delightful arrangement of rooms and conveniences displayed in this home. Truly, it is admirably adapted for gracious living and economy of maintenance.

Joseph B. McSherry, 1724 H street northwest, was selected to furnish the home by Mr. Stone. With this expert on interior decorating and furnishings of the American home in charge, there is a fresh, new charm in the way the colors are handled in each room.

The living room has a large sofa in rust and companion chair in green. They are upholstered in durable wool frieze. Matched lamps and tables are placed at each end of the sofa. Indirect floor lamps and the other two are blended happily to make a smart, comfortable, livable room of today. Marquisette, overdraped with plain gold satin, makes up the treatment for the windows.

Off the living room at the rear is a studio den, with kneehole desk, wing chair and side table. A bright rug and green traverse draperies give a new and smart feeling to this room.

Sheraton Furniture Used.

The Sheraton dining room group is of ten pieces—buffet, table, server, china, one arm chair and five side chairs. The door and drawer fronts are of beautiful, figured crotch mahogany. There are shield-back chairs with seats upholstered in blue haircloth. There are mirrors and side lights. Linen overdrapes complete this attractive room.

The recreation room has an average sized dance floor. This room, which is so popular today, is furnished with a comfortable sofa, large-size maple table and sufficient comfortable chairs, well placed. Small tables and magazine racks complete this room.

The master bedroom is in maple. In this bedroom of generous dimensions, the twin beds, chest and toilet table are designed to be attractive in the early American style. There are scatter hook rugs and the peach glazed chintz hangings, restful to the eye, though varied enough to dispel any effect of monotony.

The guest room is in colonial mahogany. This bedroom is also generous in dimensions. It has a panel bed, dresser and toilet table. Hook rugs also add to the charm of this room.

The third bedroom is also in mahogany. Poster bed, Salem chest and mirror and colonial rocker make this an ideal room for son or daughter.

BEDROOMS IN HOME ARE COMMODIOUS

Miller Spring Valley House Is Open to Inspection by Visitors.

Features of The Washington Post model home at 3641 Forty-ninth street northwest, being presented by W. C. & A. N. Miller in their Spring Valley subdivision, are its three commodious bedrooms. This house, furnished by the Charles Gallery, Inc., is now open for inspection.

These bedrooms, one of which has a fireplace, and two baths, both with shower, complete the second-floor plan. The largest room, which has a private bath and has been furnished in maple, will serve as a master suite. The two additional rooms have a connecting bath. The principal bedroom has a color scheme of soft green and rose, the tones harmonizing with the maple of the furniture. Net is used for the glass curtains of this room as well as for the other rooms on this floor. Glazed chintz overdraperies in a color resembling ashes of roses are figured in tan and brown and are effective against the plain green with which the room is papered.

A second bedroom has been planned for the young lady of the family, a corner dressing table adding a modern note to the furnishings. The Queen Anne walnut bed has a spread of rose pink poplin with blue cording, the overdraperies being of the same material and color scheme. The color is reversed in the dressing table, blue being used for skirt, with a banding of rose silk poplin. Hooked rugs in corresponding colors are used on the floor.

The third room on this floor has been furnished as an upstairs living room, a large hand-braided circular rug being used on the floor and a down-cushioned club sofa covered in glazed chintz offering a place for restful repose. The visitor will be interested in the unusual pictures which are used to decorate the walls, the beautifully framed prints adding color to the room. The subjects are "Drake's Ship," by Brangwyn; "Katherine of Aragon," by Salisbury, and "The Origin of Parties," by Payne.

All the bedrooms are of exceptional size and have been planned for the comfort of the future owners.

BUILDING PERMITS

The District of Columbia was issued permits by the office of District Building Inspector Oehmann last week to build two school additions. These are a one-story brick assembly hall in connection with the Douglas and Simmons Schools on Pierce street northwest, between First and Second streets, costing $29,500. The other was a one-story masonry gymnasium for the Junior High School on M street, between First and Second streets northwest, costing $43,000.

A permit was issued to J. E. Shortell to build a one-story brick and frame residence at 2506 Naylor road southeast; cost, $5,000.

OPENS HOMES

Underwood & Underwood.

B. H. GRUVER,

one of Washington's outstanding builders, who despite the moratorium on banks and the depression, is today opening for inspection a new group of homes in the 2400 block of Thirty-ninth street northwest, in Glover Park Heights.

Shapiro Concern Forms Brokerage Organization

J. Charles Shapiro, Inc., owners and builders, with offices at 1508 K street northwest, announce the formation of an organization to do a brokerage business in addition to other activities. Edward C. Baker, formerly associated with Cooley Bros. and the Cafritz organization, will be sales manager of the new department.

The corporation is now presenting "the new deal home" at 1741 Uushur street northwest, which had a preshowing last Sunday and will have its formal opening today.

NEW HOMES GROUP OPENED TO PUBLIC

House at Thirty-Ninth and Calvert Streets Called Surpassed by None.

Undaunted by the depression, B. H. Gruver, master builder of years of experience, has placed on the market a new group of homes which marks the crowning success of this builder of thousands of fine dwellings.

The offering is featured by a "new era" exhibit house at 2434 Thirty-ninth street northwest (Thirty-ninth and Calvert streets), which, like the others, has a 20-foot width, and which Mr. Gruver invites comparison with any ever offered to the Washington public at the price.

The homes contain eight rooms, two baths, recreation room and all the modern conveniences and necessities. They are all-brick homes, immaculate from cellar to roof, with a host of innovations and surprise features which await the inspection of prospective home seeks. They represent a "new deal" in values.

To reach the exhibit house which will be open daily and Sunday until 9 p. m., drive out Massachusetts avenue to Wisconsin avenue, south to Calvert street, then west or right to Thirty-ninth street and one and a half squares south to the home.

The group is located in Glover Park Heights adjacent to Massachusetts Avenue Heights, one of the highest elevations in the city. The homes are near a new school and but five minutes' drive from Dupont Circle.

Features of these homes are their terraced yards with brick retaining walls, painted concrete porches, spacious recreation rooms with stippled walls, cedar closets, colored tile baths, copper screening, and excellent weather stripping. Their kitchens are said by officials of the Gruver organization to excel any ever introduced in homes at this price. The interiors are in natural trim throughout. There are storage hot-water heaters in the basement. The houses contain built-in garages and all front and abut paved streets and alleys.

INGRAHAM STREET HOME IS TYPICAL

Dwelling Built by Gruver Has Appealing Values to Purchasers.

People still marvel at the astounding values presented in the B. H. Gruver homes in the 400 block of Ingraham street northwest, among which, The Washington Post Model Home of 1933, at 412 Ingraham street northwest, is a feature. This home is open for inspection daily and Sunday until 9 o'clock in the evening.

This offering is of great significance to the home-buying public. Not only does the house fulfill, and even surpass, the requirements of a Washington Post model home, but the fact that it is "B. H. Gruver Built" commends it to the serious consideration of those who desire all that is good in a home.

Leading Builder.

Mr. Gruver has been a leading builder of quality homes for more than a quarter of a century, and has established entirely new standards of value. Taking advantage of lower buildings costs, he has produced substantial savings to the purchasers in these homes, surpassing the long-established standards of his organization.

Thrifty purchasers will realize that they can not afford not to buy such a house as this when they are such a value on the local market.

The model home and those of the neighboring group are typical of the high quality of every "B. H. Gruver Built" home. They are of solid brick construction, have everything that could be desired in an excellent dwelling, and are built for permanence, convenience, beauty, comfort and the everlasting satisfaction of their purchasers.

Cozy Recreation Room.

The homes contain six and seven rooms, including a cozy recreation room, with stippled walls and special process waterproof floor, two ultra-modern baths, a kitchen as good and complete as in a $20,000 home. They have screened porches and cedar closets, terraced front yards with brick retaining walls. They also are equipped with garages, and are situated on 158-foot lots.

In the selections of the furnishings for the model home Joseph B. McSherry, of 1724-26-28 H street northwest, was mindful of the fact that quality should predominate in this beautiful new home, "B. H. Gruver Built," the name which means quality.

The dining room is furnished with a most interesting group in mahogany—Duncan Phyfe table, Hepplewhite chairs, corner china cabinet, serpentine-front buffet and server. A gold-leaf mirror and hand-carved clock complete the room. The hangings are of marquisette, draped with gold damask.

Breakfast Room.

The breakfast room is furnished in maple and the drapes are in a colorful cretonne, which give a cheery effect.

One of the outstanding features of this delightful home is the spacious recreation room, which is furnished with an oak refrectory table, six leather-seat chairs to match and buffet-type cabinet, which is very useful.

The den, or study, is furnished with a studio sofa, which can be converted into a full-size or twin bed, whichever one may desire. The modernistic ends placed at each end of the couch, with its attractive lamps, make an attractive setting.

The master bedroom is furnished in honey maple. Poster bed, dresser, chest, vanity, bench and night stand make this room, with its green and gold lamps, an attractive boudoir.

The guest room is furnished in colonial mahogany. A full-size bed, large dresser, chest and night stand with an attractive boudoir chair complete this useful room.

600 ATTEND OPENING OF NEW DEAL HOME

Six hundred visitors attended the preshowing of "the New Deal home" at 1741 Upshur street northwest, last Sunday, being presented by J. Charles Shapiro, Inc., owners and builders, which will have its formal opening today. The many visitors proclaimed the dwelling to be an outstanding value in home offerings.

One novel feature of the house is a large, heated clubroom in the basement, in a corner of which is an original brass-railed bar. Besides the bar this clubroom also has an artistic, real fireplace and, apart from the bar and clubroom, the basement also contains a maid's room with built-in shower, a kitchen, furnace room and laundry with built-in ironing board.

The complete dwelling contains nine rooms, three baths, first-floor lavatory, two kitchens, breakfast nook, library, vanity, shower doors and many other latest features. Of all-brick construction, two-story and basement arrangements, and handsome English-type architecture, it is located on a beautifully landscaped lot, 5,000 square feet in area, fronting a shady street and abutting a paved alley. There is also a two-car brick garage. The front of the lot is graced by a beautiful rubble-stone retaining wall and the house has a concrete covered porch.

The house is slate roofed and thoroughly equipped with copper flushing, gutters and downspouting. It is screened with aluminum and entirely weather-stripped and caulked. Outside of the foundation of the house there is constructed drain tile around all the footings to insure an absolutely water-tight cellar. The entire house has double, hardwood, oak floors and recessed radiation throughout, providing the entire use of added wall space for the convenient placement of furniture.

TESTS TO MEASURE LIGHT'S SPEED END

Santa Ana, Calif., March 11 (A.P.).—Measurements of the speed of light have been completed at the mile-long vacuum tube on the Irvine Ranch near here.

"We have collected a great mass of figures," Dr. Francis G. Pease, in charge of the experiment, said. "We found variations which we must account for. It probably will be six months before we are ready to announce our findings."

He said the tube would be dismantled.

Experiments in this area to determine the speed of light were begun about eight years ago by the late Dr. Albert A. Michelson, first American to receive the Nobel Prize for scientific achievement. He flashed light with a revolving mirror from Mount Wilson to another peak nearby and announced in 1927 he found it traveled 186,284 miles per second.

Dr. Pease, of Mount Wilson Observatory, and Fred Pearson, University of Chicago, who were working with him at the time of his death, have completed the experiments. They said their early observations gave results about ten miles a second less than those obtained by Dr. Michelson in his mountain-to-mountain estimate.

At the Chess Table

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER

It is about time that readers may be allowed to catch up on the doings in the "five-man" team tournament sponsored by the District of Columbia Chess League, which event we have shamefully neglected of late weeks. The tourney has been extended to a double-round affair and as the end of the first round neared the Chessnuts were enjoying an almost unbeatable lead as a result of four consecutive match victories. The game scores of the leading aggregation attest to its prowess, for the Chessnuts have garnered 15 wins as against 3 losses. Agriculture and the "mixed" Kings and Queens teams are contesting a neck-and-neck race for second honors. Geological Survey and Model Basin teams had yet to win a match as we go to press, but were scheduled to encounter each other last Thursday. The board-by-board summary of the recent matches is appended:

Capital City Notes.

The handicap tournament at present in progress at the Capital City Chess Club is progressing fairly rapidly. G. E. Bishop, the only entrant listed as scratch player, is occupying second place, with E. J. Simmons in the lead. Simmons, J. Roberts and C. W. Stark receive odds of pawn and move from the scratch player; F. W. F. Gleason and Charles B. Tompkins get a knight; E. F. Hodgdon and J. D. Reardon obtain a rook. The players below scratch, of course, give the odds in the same order, to the players below them.

Simmons attained his wins over Roberts and Bishop, two of the strongest entrants. Bishop has victories to his credit over Tompkins, Roberts, Stark and Reardon. Gleason defeated Roberts and drew with Tompkins. Stark scored over Tompkins. Roberts added to his total at the expense of Tompkins and Reardon. The present standing of the players is appended:

E. J. Simmons	2	0	F. F. Hodgdon	0	0
G. E. Bishop	4	1	J. Roberts	2	3
F. W. F. G'son	1½	½	C. B. T'kins	½	3½
C. W. Stark	1	1	J. D. Reardon	0	2

The annual meeting of the members of the Capital City Club, during which officers for the ensuing year were to be elected, was scheduled to be held at the club's quarters last evening.

Jewish Community Center.

The Jewish Community Center has of late days been stealing the Capital City Club's thunder in the way of holding simultaneous exhibitions. I. S. Turover, A. W. Fox, and G. E. Bishop, all undoubtedly the foremost local players, have recently all staged highly successful exhibitions there. Now comes the word that Carl Anton Hesse, former Capital City champion who is temporarily revisiting his old haunts, is scheduled to perform at the center in the near future. W. K. Wimsatt, a very strong local player of days of yore, has again succumbed to the lure of Caissa and is slated for a lecture to be given at the center. Readers are requested to watch this column for the exact date announcements.

Solutions to Problems.

There was something sadly awry with No. 519, intended three-mover by Dr. A. W. Galitzky, inasmuch as solvers were quick to detect that B-Kt2 permitted of a mate in one move. We personally believe that the bishop on R3 should have been a pawn. The key would then have been R-Rsq. If 1 . . . PxP; 2 K-B5, KxKt; 3 RxP mate. If 1 . . . P-Kt6; 2 Kt-Kt7, P-Kt7; 3 Kt-B5 mate. However, here is what Nathan Nussbaum thinks:

"I find that in problem 519 a mate is available in one move (B-KKt2). It immediately occurred to me that this might have been overlooked, so I continued on with the problem and found that there was a series of a forced mate in three moves, viz.: 1 K-B5; 2 R-KR or BxP; 3 BxP or RxP. Obviously, it becomes apparent to me that the white K should be on either K5 or 4 or 3, thus making the problem workable with the aforementioned series and eliminating the one-move mate. I enjoyed this problem immensely and would like to submit the following problem for publication. This happens to be the first problem I ever undertook to create and submit."

PROBLEM NO. 520.
By Nathan Nussbaum, Washington, D. C.

Playground Activities

Playground night was held in conjunction with the Play Institute at the Roosevelt High School gymnasium last week, when a series of activities were demonstrated. The playground workers who acted as leaders were Mrs. Abbie Flynn, Georgetown playground; Mrs. Evelyn Sheridan, Garfield playground; Mrs. Virginia Nielson, Eckington recreation center; Mr. Joseph Mitchell, Hoover playground; Mr. Ben Kail, Garfield playground; Mr. Arthur Marks, Barnard playground. The demonstration was witnessed and participated in by a large group for a one-hour period.

Aside from quiet, running and free games, organized activities and a general outline of playground work was given. Mr. Kail and Mr. Mitchell, who assisted various organizations in their picnics last year, gave samples of the program they used.

Libraries have played an important part of the fall and winter program on playgrounds. Dr. George F. Bowerman, of the Public Library, thought of the idea some time ago of sending to the playgrounds books that were dog-eared and those that were unfit for rebinding or general use. Each playground has been allotted a supply and the books are checked and loaned on cards.

Books that would bring a storm of protest from the frequenters of the Public Library have brought many hours of joy and stimulating recreation to hundreds of playground children. Some take the books home and others find a quiet nook on the playfields and, strange as it may seem, this is possible, to peruse their subject.

Miss Sibyl Baker, supervisor of playgrounds, addressed the opening exercises of the Foundry Methodist Church playground yesterday. After brief addresses by several others the play space was thrown open for the first period of play. Tomorrow Miss Baker will talk to the P. T. A. of the Edmonds-Maury School group.

Organization meetings of the Capital City League will be held in the offices of the department of playgrounds, room 313 District Building, each night next week except Monday.

Payne playground's nature club for boys take weekly hikes into the country. The boys usually leave the ground about 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

Troop 53 of the Boy Scouts meet Friday nights at the Chevy Chase playground. The scoutmaster is George W. Anderson.

The Hoover Playground Sewing Club had one of its busiest weeks. The girls remodeled three winter coats and made six dresses for some of the children.

Recently the Virginia avenue playground children gave a novel party. Miss Thelma Smith, director, instructed each of the children to bring certain ingredients, some carrots, some potatoes, &c., and when it was all put together the children, fifty-five in number, enjoyed a vegetable soup party.

The "Playground Activities" column in The Post is spreading to the far corners. Recently Miss Elizabeth Jones, director of Thomas playground, received an inquiry from Kentucky asking more information about her Nature Club, which was mentioned in this column.

Plans are being formed to conduct a training class for the men who will handle the boys' work on playgrounds this summer. Regardless of how long the workers have been in the department they will meet in a series of demonstrations of activities. Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds, who will be in charge of the class, states that the object is to get uniform rulings throughout the playground program.

MEN

A LIFE WORK FOR MEN WHO ARE SO AMBITIOUS TO GET AHEAD THAT THEY WILL NOT HESITATE TO FOLLOW SUCCESSFUL EXAMPLE SET BY OTHER MEN HERE TO QUALIFY FOR SUBSTANTIALL INCOMES.

We have men earning cash incomes every week which will surprise you when you see them and our business today is more successful than ever before—1933 will be the fourth successive record sales year for this very unusual Electrolux mechanical specialty (no connection with refrigeration). Many of our men are paying income tax now on their earnings with us and most of these men never paid an income tax in previous occupations, even in boom times.

If you are qualified for this work, analyze our product, methods, earnings, meet our men, see the homes they have bought, their bank books, cars they have bought, with money earned with Electrolux, Inc., a nation-wide business that has opened a new kind of opportunity to thousands of men throughout the U. S. While learning, must be satisfied with $115.00 to $175.00 per month, meanwhile working hard and studying to qualify for the higher incomes.

The qualifications are ability to work individually, without being bossed, following out a method in which you will be thoroughly trained, and applying character, study, and determination to the job every day. If you have the character and adaptability, we will put up the money and give you a very practical training, provide all supplies and equipment, and the facilities of branch offices so you can use every minute of your time to maximum advantage. You will be coached only by men who have actually PROVED the availability of success here. You will be instructed and guided by practical men who are really successful. No investment or cost.

Only men who are interested in a permanent future and willing to work hard at a tested plan, need apply. The way our business is growing we could, right now, put 12 men to work, provided they are qualified as above stated. For personal interview see Mr. Sillings, Monday morning, 9 to 1, at 201 Denrike Bldg., 1010 Vermont ave. nw.

BABSON SAYS CRISIS IS DAWN OF NEW ERA

Noted Finance Expert Points to Banking Emergency as Aid to Recovery.

By ROGER W. BABSON.

Babson Park, Fla., March 11.—Instead of being alarmed over the national banking and currency moratorium every one should be rejoiced that our banking troubles have at last come out into the open, have been courageously met and are well on the way to being conquered.

That means that the one great remaining obstacle to business recovery is receiving its death blow. Out of this final struggle of readjustment will come a new era of business and financial progress, starting on the bedrock of restored confidence—in moral as well as physical values.

Two sentences of President Roosevelt's inaugural address should be engraved over the doors of Congress, of every bank, corporation, store and home: "Confidence thrives only on honesty and honor, on the sacredness of obligations, on faithful protection, on unselfish performance." "These dark days will be worth all they cost if they teach us that our true destiny is not to be ministered unto but to minister, to ourselves and to our fellow men."

Confidence in Currency.

At least four times in the United State's history it has been necessary, as at present, to resort to the use of scrip, or clearing house certificates. They were used in the crises of 1873, 1884, 1893 and 1907.

They enabled business to be carried on during those times and I have confidence that they will be successful now. They are issued against actual deposits in the strong banks and while not redeemable in gold or in currency they are based on tangible wealth and will be accepted at par. After the emergency is over such scrip and certificates will be redeemed for regular money.

We must accept the continued rationing of cash by the reopened banks until confidence is fully reestablished and hoarded currency brought out. The basic wealth of the United States is unimpaired, and the medium of exchange can be regulated to meet every need.

Expense Slash Seen.

One of the good results of this banking crisis is that it will force Congress to reduce expenses, resist all lobbies of selfish interests, whether they be veterans, farmers, bankers, labor, or manufacturers; to seriously try to balance the budget; and maintain confidence in Government credit. All selfish interests must give way to the common good.

Out of the crisis is coming a reformed banking system, purged of all dishonesty and unethical practices, rigidly supervised and safeguarded. Unification of the banks into a single national system appears inevitable and salutary. In the reopening of our banks "the sheep will be separated from the goats." Those banks which have been conservatively managed and are in solvent positions will receive preferential treatment. The others will be gradually merged or liquidated.

The great majority of the country's banks have been honestly managed and deserve public confidence. As Gov. Ely pointed out in a recent address: "Rotten practices by a few men do not make all banks rotten any more than the conviction of one criminal makes all men criminals."

Gold Embargo Meaning.

The embargo on gold exports is a protective measure, not an abandonment of the gold standard. While ultimately some scaling down of the gold value of the dollar may be necessary, our President is committed to a sound currency. The temporary gold embargo is a means to prevent gold losses through speculation in foreign exchanges abroad and to prohibit gold hoarding at home.

It is a measure to preserve the gold standard rather than to abandon it. The recent sharp rise in sterling and other foreign exchanges represents, of course, a devaluation of our currency in terms of theirs. This may be a salutary development rather than a harmful one. It eliminates part of the exchange differential against which our exporters have been competing ever since England suspended gold payments.

Moreover, it partially eliminates, temporarily at least, the advantage which foreign manufacturers have had over our domestic producers. The gold embargo in itself is not inflation, even though some form of inflation here may easily develop.

Implication of Troubles.

The clear implication of these money disturbances is that commodities, goods, services, stocks, and other equities may become more valuable in terms of gold. That is why I have forcefully advised the accumulation of these things at the absurdly low price levels prevailing for the past year.

When this flurry of hoarding is over and currency comes out of hiding, it will go into tangible equities. Prices could easily rise with surprising speed. People have learned that too much reliance on money and credit is less safe than the ownership of tangible goods. I insist that there is plenty of gold and plenty of currency in the country to do the country's business.

What we need is to get this money circulating. Hoarding it is not only unpatriotic, but unprofitable. Certainly if inflation does take place, hoarded dollars will depreciate in value, whereas goods, stocks and other equities will appreciate.

Faith in America.

I recommend that everyone should reread these words of President Roosevelt's inaugural: "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror are paralyzing needed efforts to convert retreat into advance. Our distress comes from no failure of substance—we are not stricken by any plague of locusts.

Our resources are intact. Unlike the great crises of the past, America now faces no scarcity of goods, and no real scarcity of money. Let it not be said we have a scarcity of courage!

Nation's Center of Finance Hails Final Deflation Move

Pick-Up in Earnings Cited as Essential to Sustained Stock Advances in Future; Montreal, Toronto and London Shares Gain During Week.

New York, March 11 (A.P.).—This has been a week of great confusion, but high hopes, in Wall street.

While striving to follow the rapid succession of events in the banking emergency, and to get an inkling as to trends from the action of foreign markets and spot transactions in domestic commodities, the financial community, for the most part, cheerfully adopted the view that after three long years it was at last in the final convulsion of deflation.

The idea that the embargo on gold transactions and the preparation for the issue of an emergency currency marked the beginnings of a controlled inflation was popular in a number of speculative quarters, although most banking authorities seemed to feel that such an analysis was at least premature.

Spot Commodity Trade.

Nevertheless, the sentimental force of the idea was evident in the buying of spot commodities at rising prices. Some of the advance in staples, however, was probably due to curtailed movement resulting from the stoppage of the flow of credit during the banking holiday.

Some banking authorities pointed out that the emergency banking legislation adopted by Congress was probably the least inflationary of the various proposals, and that such additional currency as was issued would only take the place of hoarded money or be used in transactions formerly settled with bank checks, so that as fast as hoarded currency returned and banking functions were restored, the emergency currency would return from circulation. The net effect, therefore, it was argued, would be inflationary only to a slight degree, if at all.

But regardless of whether inflation ensues, it was pointed out that the effect of ending of deflationary pressure from a weakened banking structure, and the consequent restoration of financial confidence, might well be a lifting of prices.

Higher Prices Forecast.

The opinion that reopening of markets would see rising prices in shares and in futures in the principal commodity exchanges, seemed to have taken a firm grip in speculative quarters. This was partly borne out by the action of the London, Liverpool and Winnipeg markets, although in view of the lack of quotations on dollars, it was impossible to relate foreign prices to American prices, even in the case of American securities.

Nevertheless, calculating London prices on the basis of such unofficial quotations on dollars as were available there, substantial gains over Friday's closing prices in New York were indicated.

Conservative quarters pointed out, however, that a sustained rise in share prices would require a pickup in corporate earnings, the trends of which still remained obscure.

Marked strengthening of money rates late last week made the outlook for bonds uncertain. Chief pressure on that market, however, has probably come of late from banks, and pressure from that source may be lifted for a time, although the present program indicates a number of reorganizations.

What the dollar may be expected to do in foreign exchange markets when transactions are resumed remained problematical, although substantial discounts reported in London and Paris early in the week narrowed as the week wore on. A large short interest in the dollar abroad, some exchange experts thought, would be a sustaining factor.

Montreal List Rises.

Montreal, March 11 (A.P.).—Led by Consolidated Smelters Montreal stock listings advanced today. A brief rally which boosted issues up as high as a point occurred in the last few minutes of trading, which was fairly active.

Consolidated Smelters advanced to 67, closing with a gain of 2¼ points. Steel of Canada rose 1¾ at 17½, while Sherwin Williams was up a point at 5. Canadian Pacific gained ⅛ at 11¾ and International Nickel was ¼ higher at 9⅞. Cockshutt Plow rose ½ at 4½, while McColl Frontenac at 8⅛ and Canadian Industrial Alcohol at 1¾ were both up ⅛.

British Columbia Power "A," yesterday's strong performer, lost ¼ at 17. National Steel Car was off ⅛ at 6¾. National Breweries, Shawinigan Power, Asbestos Corporation, Dominion Steel and Montreal Power debentures all held firm.

Toronto Gains Hold.

Toronto, March 11 (A.P.).—The Toronto Stock Exchange's experiment of remaining open with the Wall street market closed, during the present week, worked satisfactorily and the market closed today with a firm and orderly demonstration. Most of the gains acquired were held and in some sections of the board, particularly the base metals, the gains have been substantial.

All interested shares closed higher. Canadian Pacific gained ¼, to 11¾; International Nickel, ⅛, to 9¾; Smelters advanced nearly 1½, to 65⅞, and Ford and Brazilian were firm.

Food shares showed no inclination to recede though the section was not active. Dominion Stores was up a fraction to 15¼ and International Milling and Canadian Canners finished stronger.

More activity developed in the bank shares, but price changes were small. Beverages were quiet and for the most part unchanged.

London Closes Steady.

London, March 11 (A.P.).—The stock exchange closed generally steady today, after a quiet and virtually featureless short session. The undertone, however, was confident.

More interest was shown in the transatlantic shares, which finished firm, with fractional advances in most instances. A number of American issues, such as American Telephone & Telegraph, Atchison, Union Pacific, Southern Railway and several others, were quoted today for the first time since last week, at prices generally higher than those of the previous close.

United States Steel advanced ½, to 41½; General Motors also gained ½, to 16½, and Hydro Electric rose ⅛, to 7.

Banks of New York Ready for Full Activity Tomorrow

New York, March 11 (A.P.).—The country's banking machinery was being oiled up today in preparation for proceeding under a full head of steam Monday when most of the large institutions in all States are expected to open for normal business.

The principal New York banks, in addition to filing reopening applications with the Federal Reserve Bank, were accepting deposits on an "if and when" basis, and several of them were meeting pay rolls in full and cashing all necessary checks.

At the same time hoarders' "gold rush" gained headway, with lines of coin, bullion and certificate changers swamping the tellers at twenty-two windows of the Federal Reserve Bank. The bank opened for the receipt of gold at 8 o'clock this morning and expected to remain open all afternoon. The bank's usual closing hour on Saturday is noon.

Tabulation of yesterday's receipts, principally from penitent and frightened hoarders, disclosed that of the $20,000,000 received at the central bank here, $11,500,000 was in coin and bullion and the remainder in gold certificates. Federal Reserve notes are given in exchange for gold.

Federal Reserve member banks filed their reopening applications with regional central banks and these were transmitted, generally by telegraph, to the Treasury at Washington. Prompt replies to all applications were expected, owing to the fact that the exact condition of member institutions is on file at the headquarters of the Federal Reserve Board. It was not believed the names of those banks permitted to reopen, or whose resumption of business was delayed for one reason or another, would be made public.

The matter of reopening New York State banks, Gov. Lehman said, was in the hands of the State superintendent of banks and the State banking department.

On Monday all banks that reopen will conduct operations as before the holiday with the exception that efforts will be made to prevent hoarding and no gold or gold certificates will be disbursed.

Certain foreign exchange business will be transacted for known commercial purposes and it was even expected the Federal Reserve Bank would be permitted to earmark some gold under special Government license.

GOODS MARKET.

New York, March 11 (A.P.).—Price tension lessened today in primary textile markets due to a belief that banks will soon be open and checking facilities resumed.

On a report of sharp advances in the costs of printing cloths effective March 20, buying of gray cloths was a little more active where converters and others sought to provide cloths for process. Burlaps are firm and quiet. More business was stirring in dress fabrics and coatings, but men's wear goods were quiet.

Restoration of trading silk speculative markets abroad has not yet led to active buying of silks here. Linens have sold more freely on the belief that prices will be higher. Rayon yarns are in demand for April and May delivery with prices firm. In several instances where prices have been advanced trading is still going on at lower figures to clean up stocks and nearby deliveries.

COTTON TRADE SEES INFLATION OF PRICES

Dealers Mark Time During Week for Basis of New Values.

New York, March 11 (A.P.).—With the cotton futures market closed pending the reestablishment of adequate banking facilities, the attention of cotton traders here the past week has been fully occupied with reports from Washington concerning measures for reopening the banks, efforts to form some opinion as to spot cotton values in the South, and conjectures as to the probable value of sterling exchange when business is resumed.

A belief that the measures undertaken to reestablish banking facilities will have a more or less inflationary effect on commodity values has been very generally expressed and has found a reflection in various quarters, including the cotton goods market and reports of an increased inquiry for cotton exchange memberships, with a sale reported today at $12,000, or $1,500 above the last previous price.

A very large business has been reported in cotton goods at substantial advances. The big demand for cloths naturally stimulated an inquiry for spot cotton if only with a view to gaining some rough idea of raw material replacement costs.

Trading Is Difficult.

In the absence of hedging facilities, business in spot cotton is said to have been very difficult and while there has been an active inquiry, actual sales since the close of the futures market last week are said to have been comparatively limited. Most of the business is said to have been on call, leaving the question of prices to be fixed after trading in futures is resumed.

Some sales, generally of small lots, have been reported at widely varying prices, quotations mentioned in this connection ranging from about 7 to 8 cents or even 8½ cents per pound, but no firm or uniform market would appear to have been established.

According to reports from south Georgia late in the week, buyers were bidding 100 to 125 points over last Friday's quotations with holders showing little disposition to part with their cotton.

Liverpool Is Studied.

Liverpool quotations, naturally, have been closely studied, but there has been much uncertainty as to their interpretation in the absence of sterling exchange rates. At the close of business today Liverpool was 39 to 45 English points above the closing quotations of a week ago. Liverpool cable advices to the New York Cotton Exchange Service said the market there seemed inclined to discount an advance of about a cent a pound in America with exchange around $3.75.

Latest Washington advices have encouraged the hope of an early reopening of the banks, and it is expected that the New York Cotton Exchange will reopen for business as soon after the establishment of satisfactory banking facilities as possible.

According to a canvas made of some of the members of the exchange here today, local traders are expecting an advance in the local market when trading is resumed. Individual ideas as to its extent range from a minimum of 25 up to a maximum of 200 points with most traders expressing their ideas in a range which ran from about 50 up to 100 or in some cases 175 points.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

London—Confidence prevailed on the stock exchange today and the closing tone was steady. American Shares were in demand, the leaders showing advances of ½ to 3 points. Bar gold declined 7 pence per ounce and bar silver 1/16 of a penny. Gold amounting to £1,207,600 was purchased by the Bank of England.

Liverpool—Grains improved in tone today, following Friday's strength at Winnipeg, and wheat closed ⅜ of a penny dearer.

Cotton futures declined 11 to 12 points on local and Bombay selling and the market closed barely steady.

Paris—Bourse opened irregular. French stocks were in demand but international shares declined. The market closed heavy.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse were lower due to profit-taking and the market closed weak.

WHEAT VALUES RISE IN WINNIPEG DEALING

Chicago, March 11 (A.P.).—Eagerly awaiting resumption of business, numbers of grain traders got solid comfort today from the adage "its an ill wind that blows nobody good."

An advance of an even 50 per cent almost overnight in the price of memberships on the Chicago Board of Trade was cited. Equal if not greater cheer was found in statements current among traders that right at the outset of administration the national officials who will largely direct the destinies of agriculture the next four years have received from outside interests plentiful convincing testimony as to the economic worth of the exchange system of dealing in commodities.

This testimony has included urgent requests pressed upon Federal authorities by country shippers and by millers and other processors of grain asking special emergency consideration for prompt reopening of all departments of board of trade markets.

No Food Shortage.

One of the points developed is that although there is no fear of food shortage, an almost immediate effect of the bank holidays, closing the Chicago Board of Trade and other commodity exchanges has been paralysis of commerce in grains. Trade authorities were emphatic today in saying reluctance to purchase supplies, either in this country or abroad, has been manifest, especially regarding wheat, the most important of all foodstuffs, and that this development was largely because quotations were not available from the Chicago market.

Grain quotations registered in the futures markets of the Chicago Board of Trade have long been made public almost instantly throughout the entire civilized world. It was these futures markets, founded upon adequate banking facilities, that were the first to be halted. Owing to the close interrelationship of cash and futures markets, however, a shutdown of the cash grain markets was quick to follow.

Results of the complete cessation of commodity exchange business should go far, traders said today, to restore the Chicago Board of Trade and other leading grain exchanges to their proper place in the esteem of the country and the world.

Winnipeg, March 11 (A.P.).—Profit-takers ran rampant in the closing minutes of today's session of the grain market. Declining rapidly from the peaks reached when a sudden influx of Southern buying sent wheat future prices more than a cent above the previous close, values finally ended virtually unchanged.

May wheat futures closed at 52¼ cents; July, 53½ and October 55⅛.

PEOPLES DRUG NET INCOME IS $511,795

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Net earnings of People's Drug Stores, Inc., for the year, were $511,795.10, according to the annual report of President M. G. Gibbs, of this corporation, made public yesterday. This total is after provision for adequate depreciation and all other known charges, including Federal income taxes at the increased rates prescribed by the 1932 Revenue Act.

Of this total, $143,981.50 represents dividends declared and paid on the outstanding preferred stock and $367,813.60 as earnings applicable to the common stock, which is equivalent to $3 a share on 122,737 shares outstanding throughout the year.

President Gibbs reported that during the year seven retail stores were closed as the result of expiring leases which were not renewed due to the fact that the locations were either unprofitable or that satisfactory renewal terms could not be arranged. This reduced the number of stores in operation at the end of the year to 117 as compared with 124 at December 31, 1931, there being no new stores opened during the year.

Sales at retail during the year were $16,180,162.75 compared with $17,439,031.77 in 1931, a decrease of $1,258,869.02, which represents a percentage decrease of 7.22 per cent. After making adjustments for closed stores, the decrease in sales volume was equal to 5.80 per cent.

"The financial position of your company at the end of the year" the report states, "was better than at December 31, 1931, the ratio of current assets to current liabilities being 3.4 to 1 as compared with 3 to 1 at the end of 1931.

"Further progress has been made in the development of quality merchandise produced in our own laboratories with satisfactory results and will be continued conservatively.

"In view of the economic conditions which prevailed throughout the year, it is believed that the results attained speak for themselves. These results have been made possible through the intensive efforts of the loyal and efficient staff of executives and employes.

"Although no prophecy can be made in respect to the future," he concludes, "it is believed that a continuation of the present policies and efforts will produce reasonably satisfactory results."

First Lady's Untiring Activity Amazes Capital

Mrs. Roosevelt Spreads Charm Wherever She Goes; White House Being Rearranged; Bulgarian Needle Show Intriques Society.

By EVELYN PEYTON GORDON.

CAPITAL society, always interested in the First Lady, has been even more intent this week on the activities of a new First Lady, Mrs. Roosevelt, noted for her charm and untiring energy. From early last Saturday morning Mrs. Roosevelt has not spared herself in answering the calls of friends and organizations to attend various functions. Where many women would have saved their energy Mrs. Roosevelt last Saturday night attended the inaugural ball and, with a party of family and close friends, seemed to enjoy the spectacle more than anybody else and, still not tired by the inaugural functions, the First Lady drove to Mount Vernon Sunday afternoon with members of her family.

On Monday she plunged into the routine of the chatelaine of the White House, received the "women of the press" in the morning, and that afternoon, with her daughter, Mrs. Curtis Dall, attended the tea given in her honor by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington, where she still further enchanted her listeners.

Already the White House has begun to assume the impress of the personality of its new mistress. Though the state rooms downstairs look much the same, the upstairs is taking on a new aspect to suit the needs and taste of the present occupants. The charming and homelike oval room on the second floor, which during the Hoover regime was the family gathering place, is to be President Roosevelt's sanctum, his library and work room, in which the Chief Executive will doubtless pass many hours.

Mrs. Roosevelt proposes to use the Monroe parlor, which Mrs. Hoover had restored as far as possible, as the family living room. This has necessitated the moving of the museum pieces to other parts of the White House, and replacing them with familiar and comfortable furniture from the Roosevelt's New York home. Some of the pieces which Mrs. Hoover placed in the room were authentic pieces which had been in the White House since President Monroe's day. The rest are really beautiful copies of pieces in the collection belonging to the descendants of the author of the Monroe Doctrine, which are housed in Monroe's law offices in Fredericksburg, Va. This was all assembled by Mrs. Hoover and placed in the room in which Mrs. Monroe used to entertain her friends at tea.

On Tuesday Mrs. Roosevelt found time to attend the concert of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Arturo Toscannini, and as it was the first concert Mrs. Roosevelt had attended as First Lady, it was most fitting that the concert was given by Mrs. Roosevelt's former home State orchestra. Wednesday, Cabinet day, instead of receiving in their homes, the wives of the members of the new Cabinet, with Mrs. Garner, wife of the Vice President, and Miss Frances Perkins, only women members of the Cabinet, were received by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House, where they had tea informally in one of the upstairs sitting rooms.

Mrs. Roosevelt attended the opening of Congress on Thursday and improved the while she listened by knitting, a useful and interesting occupation of the First Lady. That afternoon, quite unannounced, the First Lady, with a friend, motored in Mrs. Roosevelt's car to Mount Vernon, availing themselves of the beautiful springlike day on the broad new highway to the home of the first President. On Friday Mrs. Roosevelt attended the tea given by the members of the Congressional Club for the wives of the new members of Congress, and charmed the guests by passing herself down the line of new members to greet each one personally.

Last Wednesday evening the Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Radeff were the guests of honor at the reception and preview held in the galleries of the home construction division of the Sears, Roebuck & Co., on Connecticut avenue, at which many prominent guests from diplomatic, official and resident circles were present to view the exhibition of antique Bulgarian folk embroideries collected by Mr. Velko M. Baboff, director of the Bulgarian Art Gallery in Sofia. The exhibition was given under the patroness of Mme. Claudel, Frau von Prittwitz und Gaffron, Mme. Bostrom, Mme. Bachke, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. James Couzens, Mrs. William R. Castle, jr., Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, Mrs. Robert Lansing, Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Meyers, Miss Mabel Boardman and Mrs. Wallace S. Murray.

The exhibit was voted one of the most beautiful and original displays of needlework ever shown in the Capital.

Bulgarian women are said to be second to none in this art, and no visitor to their country can help being impressed with the embroidery which appears on their costumes and in their homes. They have created things that are surpassed in no other land, and their designs are geometrical and natural.

Moving, spiritual histories are contained in these works, which show not only great personal pride in workmanship, but great perseverance on the part of the artists who create them.

Girls work on single garments for years, while their mothers and grandmothers spin the yarn. The cloth is woven on handmade looms before the family fireplaces on winter days, and the roots and herbs for the dye stuffs are grown in the summer. In addition many hours are spent planning designs and color combinations, and though much of the work has been done while the activities of the rest of the family went on around the weavers and embroiderers, the work is perfect.

Many of the designs are obviously symbolic, and can be more or less correctly interpreted; in others the symbolism, whether of the Orient or of the Occident, has so far defied deciphering. The fabrication of the embroideries is no less interesting than the designs. All conceivable stitches have been variously employed, and no element of chance mars the work of the needle which thus forms an inarticulate but imperishable part of the folklore of the Bulgarians.

Unfortunately, these old pieces which have survived time, wars, pillages and fires, which have affected the Balkans during the past five centuries are becoming more and more

Intriguing Literature Under Way in Capital

Mrs. Gann's Book Much Discussed; Young Hostess Completing Novel; Mrs. McMullin to Bring Out Volume on White House Furniture.

WASHINGTON, so long considered a literary vacuum, is about to burst like a cultured bomb on the outlying provinces. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann's book has been widely discussed, resulting in the best sort of publicity that an author-novice can have. It is rumored that a distinguished English visitor, who has spent the best part of the season in Washington, is about to publish a novel under an easily recognized pen name, suggested by one of the State Department young men. "Jay Franklin," magazine writer, and "Diplomat," mystery story author, has turned out to be John Franklin Carter.

One very popular young hostess has completed a novel, but, unlike Mrs. Gann, refuses to discuss it, with a reticence very rare in writers. One of the most valuable books to come "out of Nazareth" will be that recently finished by Mrs. Dare Stark McMullin, Mrs. Hoover's friend, who lived with her at the White House. Like Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. McMullin was deeply interested in the history of the White House, and of the furniture, and this interest is shortly to be given tangible form in a volume. As a historical document, this is of great value, for so many pieces of the White House furniture have associations of the most fascinating sort, associations that went unrecognized in chairs in the attic or beds in the servants' rooms until Mrs. McMullin discovered their origins and stories. Obviously this work required the most persevering research work, for the confusion on the subject seems almost incredible until it is remembered that interest in antiques is a development of fairly recent vintage.

The methods that Mrs. McMullin and Mrs. Hoover used were varied. One example of their scheme of attack is shown in the story of the set of little walnut chairs, made, as the fashion writer says, "on rather Empire lines," which under Mrs. Hoover's regime, were in the Monroe room. There was in the White House an engraving of Lincoln and his Cabinet done on the occasion of "The Great Emancipator" earning his soubriquet—in fact, signing the emancipation proclamation.

Mrs. Hoover noted the striking lines of the little chairs on which the company was pictured and recognized one of the chairs in her bedroom as being one of the originals. The next step was to comb the house for the set and finally fourteen of them were located. This was considered a notable triumph, until the bill of sale, in which they were accurately described, was found, when it turned out that President Monroe had had them made in France and that originally there had been fifty-six, a net loss of forty-two that have apparently vanished into thin air or kindling wood or some other Nirvana.

Former occupants of the White House, learning of this hobby of Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. McMullin, wrote to them telling where certain pieces had been during other regimes and the tales attached to them. The Library of Congress furnished the valuable information that will always accrue to those who have the patience and energy to cope with that monumental institution. All sorts of aid was invoked and the result will undoubtedly be not only interesting but valuable, especially to those whose garbled written descriptions of the White House rooms and furniture serves only to confuse those who know the house and the interior.

Mrs. William La Vare has returned to Washington after spending two months in New York. Her son, Mr. Claude La Vare, who was here for the inauguration, has returned to Washington and Lee University, at Lexington, Va., where he was recently elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Mrs. Lansing P. Reed, of New York City, is at the Carlton over the week-end, accompanied by her two daughters, Miss Haster Reed and Miss J. Mary Reed.

Mrs. Emily Coville, soprano, and Miss Minna Niemann, pianist, will open the Arts Club program for the week. These two musicians will give their recital on Tuesday evening, when Mrs. Katherine Hill Rawls will serve as accompanist for Mrs. Coville. The evening's hostess will be Mrs. Morris Wickersham.

Mr. Clifford K. Berryman will be in charge of Thursday evening's program, when he will give an illustrated talk on "Presidential Candidates Portrayed by Partisan Caricaturists." This will constitute one of Mr. Berryman's "chalk talks." The hosts on Thursday evening will be the Vice President of the Arts Club and Mrs. Charles Bittinger.

Among those who attended the dinner dance at the Army and Navy Country Club last Thursday evening, commemorating the seventy-seventh anniversary of the founding of the national college fraternity of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, were the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Senator and Mrs. Pat Harrison, Senator Richard B. Russell, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harry G. Hamlet, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. James C. Breckenridge, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Felker, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers Fred, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Gourley, Mr. James T. Williams, jr., and Mr. D. Randall Buckingham.

Bridge Bids and Bumps

By FRANK B. LORD

Ah, my belived, deal the Hand that Wins,
Forgive my past Defects and future Sins;
Next Rubber!—Why Next Rubber, it may be
With Yesterday's Ten Thousand Might-have-beens!
RUBAIYAT OF BRIDGE.

DURING the many years that old-fashioned whist was the popular pastime of ladies and gentlemen whose numbers were small when compared with the millions now playing contract, there was developed a code of etiquette, the observance of which added greatly to the pleasure and enjoyment found in the game. It was a game of culture. So, too, is contract, but as yet contract has not evolved a code of ethics that quite conforms to the etiquette of old-fashioned whist. Perhaps the code has been evolved, but it is not as strictly adhered to on the part of many who play the game as was the standard set up for its great grandfather. That will come, however, in the course of time as more and more people of education and refinment take up the game as they are rapidly doing.

If bridge is to survive as a form of entertainment it must be synonymous with sportsmanship, honor and gentility.

"It would not be cricket," is an expression of the English drawn from their great national game. It means that while the doing of a certain thing may not be exactly contrary to the laws of the game, yet it is not regarded as sportsmanlike. With respect to certain conduct at the bridge table it would be appropriate to characterize it with the paraphrase, "it is not bridge." Razzing the pitcher of a visiting team so that he becomes rattled and nervous, or baiting the umpire may sometimes help the home club to win on the baseball field, but after all it is not really good sportsmanship.

The late Wilbur C. Whitehead, past master of bridge and an authority on all phases of the game, once said, "No sharp practice, no devices of low cunning, no dubious intrigues can be developed without vitiating the game; toleration, patience, ethics, fair play and comradeship are essential concomitants of a proper education in the game."

THE special observance of courtesy and cardroom demeanor, when not bred in the bone of the player himself, must be learned, and when learned adhered to with even greater rigidity than the laws, or the rules of sound bidding and play. It is the unwritten law, more inexorable than the written ones, because upon adhering to it depends the continuance of a player in the realm of polite society.

Shepard Barclay, gentleman player par excellence, has suggested a bridge player's pledge, which seems to cover the requirements quite fully. He says:

"I refuse to profit by any irregularities in bidding or playing by our side. Our opponents need not watch us like hawks to catch us in the act. I will not call my partner's attention in bidding or play to the state of the score, nor to the play of any card by myself or any one else, with the intent of helping him to decide upon his own best bid or play in the circumstances. Nor will I, with similar intent, ask for information ostensibly for myself, but actually for the benefit of a partner whom I believe may have been unobservant.

"I will not convey information or misinformation about my hand by passing with undue haste, or by deliberate delay while studying it, nor by any intentional emphasis, facial expression, gesture or mannerism connected with my own bids or plays, nor by manifesting my pleasure or chagrin over the bids or plays of another. I will not when dummy, leave my seat to watch the declarer play, nor try to see his cards or those held by either adversary.

"I will not, when declarer, carry on a line of talk for the purpose of confusing or misleading my adversaries. I will not employ any unusual bidding or playing convention, which by agreement, my partner will understand but my opponents can not, and which would give our side an unfair advantage. I will not adversely criticize my partner's acts, at the risk of upsetting him, boring our opponents and delaying the game.

"If I win, I will not gloat, but will treat the losers as I would wish them to treat me under the circumstances. If I lose I will not make excuses or begrudge them their victory, but will congratulate them as a sportsman should."

Harry Clendening, instructor at the newly formed Takoma Inn Contract Club, and his playing partner, P. J. Wester, were heroes in the daring play of one of the most interesting hands recently dealt to local players. The set-up was as follows:

East and West not vulnerable; North and South vulnerable. West dealer.

North.
S.—x x x x
H.—J x x x
D.—A
C.—A K J x

West
S.—A K Q x x
H.—A K Q x x

H.—x x x
D.—x x x x
C.—x x x

South.
S.—x
H.—J
D.—10 x x x x
C.—Q 10 x x x x

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
2S	Pass	2NT	Pass
3H	Pass	3NT	Pass
4H	Pass	4S	4NT
Dbl	5C	Pass	Pass
Dbl

Mr. Clendening was playing in the south position and from the bidding was skillful enough to note that West had a strong two-suiter and that his partner in the East had a "bust." He reasoned that Wester in the North must have either diamonds or clubs, or perhaps both. With less than half an honor trick he boldly bid four No Trump, knowing that his partner would take him out either in diamonds or clubs, in both of which he (South) was strong. Few players would have the nerve to make the four No Trump bid and few would have been able to read the holding of adversaries so accurately. With the crossruff the five-club contract was easily made for a score of 600.

Had West made an original bid of four spades he would have made game without difficulty. Had North, holding three and one-half honor tricks plus, doubled as he might have done, South would doubtless have regarded it as a business double and with his weak holding allowed it to stand, and the four Spade doubled contract would have been made. The bidding and the play show the futility of always making a forcing bid of two when holding five honor tricks as most players do, in the hope of reaching a slam with partner's aid. With game in hand by making a four-spade bid the greediness of West caused the loss of game and rubber.

Under the management of E. D. Pelot and with Harry Clendening as instructor the Takoma Inn Contract Bridge Club will start tomorrow night with beginners' play each Monday night. Advanced players will have their innings on Friday evenings. The club is located near Walter Reed Hospital and is liberally patronized by Army officers on duty there and their wives. Other games are to be arranged for each night in the week. Mr. Pelot will sponsor one of the Culbertson Olympic units to be held on May 1, with Mr. Clendening as captain of the play.

The Mayfair Club has now moved back into its old quarters at the Hotel Mayflower, which it temporarily surrendered for inauguration week in order to accommodate visitors in Washington. The club's weekly duplicate was held on Monday night instead of Sunday with the following winners: North and South, Mrs. Campbell Turner and Miss Eleanor Wells; East and West, Dr. Dickinson and Miss Vandeventer.

The club's regular duplicate will be played tonight as usual.

Winners in the season duplicate at the LaSalle, conducted by Dixie T. Wright, last week, were Maj. and Mrs. E. B. Gray, with A. P. Stockvis and Vann Clarke as runners-up. Cups were awarded to the former and Keith tickets to the latter. The game was the fourth of the series and entries are still open for the grand trophy of the season.

Announcement is made of a series of handicap duplicate contract games at the Shoreham each Thursday evening for the remainder of the season. Special trophies will be given the winner of each monthly series. For the games this month the handicaps will be allotted roughly on the basis of past performance. In subsequent months these handicaps will be adjusted according to averages made the previous month. Players for whom there are no adequate data will be handicapped arbitrarily by the committee. There will be no restrictions as to partners but in order to qualify for the monthly trophy players must compete in all games during the month. Handicaps will not be considered in awarding the top score goblets for each night's play.

Winners last week in the Carlton duplicate conducted by Wessel Stewart were Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley, U. S. N., and Mrs. J. Merifjeren; second, Miss Rowena Rowe and E. A. Perkins; third, Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Milligan. There were seven tables and the play was under the Howell movement.

Winners at the Westchester duplicate last week were Mrs. M. C. Robinson and Allen R. Foster, first, with Isaac H. York and J. A. Miller as runners-up. Howell movement.

Mrs. Marian Barre will direct a series of Thursday night games for the remainder of the season at the Penn-Daw Hotels near Alexandria. The games are open both to players of Alexandria, where contract is enjoying great popularity, and to transient guests at the hotel.

W. A. Kingsbury was winner in last Wednesday's progressive contract game at the Broadmoor, conducted by Mrs. Barre.

The Bridge Teachers Association met yesterday at luncheon with the president of the organization, Mrs. Charles Keene, at the Highlands. Plans were discussed for a bridge teachers' tournament to be held early this spring.

The March meeting of the Washington Bridge League will be held next Tuesday evening at the Shoreham.

"Two Diamonds"—Tillie says that void suits characterised the playing of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden tournament.

McGoofey's First Reader

By H. I. PHILLIPS

TODAY, children, we will consider government.

Government is the operation of a country, and the operation is often something from which the patient never recovers.

There are many forms of government. Under present conditions you could take your pick and still make a big mistake.

In this country we have democracy. A democracy is a government where the responsibility for a fumbled ball is hard to trace.

Our governing is done through Congress.

It is composed of two branches both of which look badly withered.

One branch is called the Senate. It is also called many other names.

The other branch is called the House.

The difference between the Senate and House is in the distance between the cuspidors. The members of the House have to have theirs closer.

Anybody can get into the House but to be a senator you have to keep the spots off your vest, and press your pants occasionally.

A representative always thinks he is more important than a senator, which is a new all-time low for ambition.

All Government laws have to be considered by both bodies. There is only one way to tell whether a representative is considering or just sleeping. If he snores, he is sleeping.

By the time both bodies have passed a law the need for it has passed and everybody has forgotten what it was all about anyhow.

Both bodies of Congress are wired for sound and are very gassy.

If all the speeches made by a single senator in one year could be placed end to end they would make an earache twenty-eight times as big as a blast from the Leviathan foghorn.

Personally we prefer the foghorn.

OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS.
The Robin.

The robin redbreast is a bird
That loves to eat a worm;
It likes to pull it from a lawn
And watch the darned thing squirm.

It is a harbinger of spring,
Forecasting weather hot—
But I've known lots of seasons when
The little bird was not!

PEOPLE.

Who is this?

This is Otis.

Who is Otis?

Otis is a recent university graduate.

Why does Otis look so sad?

If you were in Otis' shoes you would look sad. Otis is a bond salesman.

Do all bond salesmen look sad?

In times like these, they do.

Why did Otis become a bond salesman?

Oh, a few years ago it was great stuff for a young man with personality and a college degree. If he could play golf, so much the better.

How long since Otis has sold a bond?

About three years and six months.

What's the matter?

That's what's troubling Otis.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THESE SENTENCES?

1. President Hoover said, "I've had a bully time in the White House and shall always look back on those four happy years with great joy."

2. The Florida hotel man admitted that California had a nice climate, too.

3. Chancellor Adolf Hitler refused to talk about himself or pose for the newsreels.

4. The golfer who had missed seven putts on one green laughed and said, "I always like to prolong this part of the game. It's heaps of fun."

5. The lady turned the corner with her umbrella without poking it into a pedestrian's eye.

6. "You drive any way you like," said the wife in the back seat of the car. "Don't expect any suggestions from me."

7. The motorist slowed down when he came to a mud puddle so as not to bespatter pedestrians.

8. The French cabinet opened its meeting by singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and giving three cheers for the United States.

9. The restaurant apple pie had no seeds in it.

10. The movie press agent said, "Let's show this picture on its merits and not make any extravagant claims."

ALPHABETICAL LESSONS.

A is for arches—
It is known to all
That sooner or later
They're bound to fall.

B is for biceps,
Which people get,
Who don't have time to
Neck and pet.

C is for cosmos
Which (says the story)
Covers a lot of Territory.

D is for dollar
And if you'll sit
And think quite hard
You'll remember it.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE movie box offices were reported to be off $1,000,000 a day during the past week's crisis. There was a silver lining to the cloud for the radio people. Those ordinarily at the movies or at other places of entertainment, such as billiard parlors, bowling alleys, or elsewhere where money had to be spent were for the first time in many a moon at home looking for something to do which didn't cost any money.

The result was that hundreds of thousands of listeners were clustered around the radio sets, and are still these nights, when the coin of the realm is scarce, who heretofore scorned the radio, or had grown tired of it, as a source of an evening's entertainment.

Likewise the depression has apparently dealt kindly with some of the radio stars. One practical example is Jack Pearl. He's playing the Capitol, New York, this week and getting $8,500 for the date. There wasn't that much money for Pearl for a week's work in '29. Nor did Ed Wynn figure on getting a $20,000 salary, of which he personally drew about $15,000, in the predepression days; but he got it, and also at the Capitol, a couple of weeks ago, on top of the $5,000 he's grabbing weekly for one night's performance on the radio.

When U. S. Steel was 265, Burns and Allen were a nice little mixed comedy team in vaudeville at $460 a week, Variety tells us. Now that Steel is down to 27, Burns and Allen as ether names are drawing $1,250 a week on the air and $2,000 for stage appearances whenever they feel like making one.

AMOS 'N' ANDY, who were with us at the Fox in Washington last week, were a moderate salaried and strictly local radio team around Chicago in the good ol' days. Since the depresh started they've become millionaires.

Kate Smith was around the vaudetheaters and musicals at $500 or thereabouts in '29. In these times, besides her regular radio work and a picture or two on the side, she rates up to $6,500 a week in the picture and vaude houses.

Ruth Etting had just about arrived from Chicago for a Ziegfeld show when prosperity was prosperity, as a Middle Western presentation single at $400. Two weeks ago she turned down an offer from Loew of $6,000 for a week on the stage, stating she didn't care to double.

Rudy Vallee was just a crooner and the crooner vogue hadn't started in the 5,000,000-share exchange days, but since then he's graduated to a $200,000-a-year man.

Dave Rubinoff now grosses about $1,200 a week between his radio and picture house engagements. In 1929 he was a $225 single, in the same picture houses.

Besides these, the list of those who are now enjoying prosperous times is lengthy. Among these in radio are Arthur Tracy, Tony Wons, Reds and Dunn, Ben Alley, Singin' Sam, Goodman Ace, Russ Columbo, Bing Crosby, Mills Bros., Boswell Sisters, Gene and Glenn, East and Dumke, Phillips Lord and many others. All were little known or not known at all back in 1929.

THE Chinese consul in San Francisco has been getting after local broadcasting stations for calling Chinamen "Chinks" over the air. The consul even went further. Through his attorney he has requested both the national networks to ban the singing of certain songs detrimental to the Chinese, such as "Minnie the Moocher" and "Limehouse Blues."

Broadcasts of the inaugural exercises were sent to Africa for the first time. The hook-up was with the African Broadcasting Co., operated by the Schlesingers. Over the A. B. C. chain the speech of President Roosevelt was sent to Johannesburg, Capetown, Durban and Pretoria.

The March of Time goes off the air March 17 . . . Phillips Lord is said to be contemplating giving up the "Country Doctor" series for a trip around the world and a good rest . . . George M. Cohan, whose press agent announced that he would appear as a guest star of Tom Noonan's Chinatown Mission radio program has declined because too much "ballyhoo" was attached to the event . . . Jerome Kern, composer of "Showboat" and many other hits has restricted all the music from being played on the air. The architects will have their inning when, beginning March 15 over WABC and possibly the Columbia network, they will start a course of lectures, "Architecture and the Allied Arts." Joseph Urban, architect and creator of bizarre backgrounds in theaters, will be the first speaker, with "Modern Architecture" as his subject.

BISHOP FREEMAN recently paid the following tribute to Edgar Priest, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral, so well known to the radio audience:

"Some time ago a visitor from England, studying the choirs in this country, said concerning the Washington Cathedral Choir that it was one of the most notable boy choirs he had heard on this continent. The credit for this accomplishment must be given to Edgar Priest, who for more than a quarter of a century has served as cathedral organist and choirmaster.

"Mr. Priest has a distinct genius for training the boy voice. He is a splendid organist and a composer of exceptionally fine church music. We believe that he has set a norm or standard for church choirs that is worthy of high praise.

"He has the faculty of winning the confidence of his boys. They love him and respect his every wish. To observe their behavior in the choir witnesses to the kindly discipline he exercises over them.

"Mr. Priest has always stood ready to counsel and advise any of his fellow organists and choirmasters whenever an opportunity is afforded to do so. He is a reverent, devoted, highly trained musician, respected and honored by all who know him, and particularly by the bishop and clergy of the cathedral staff."

Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll average three hours a day writing and rehearsing their "Amos 'n' Andy" scripts . . . Ed Wynn spends 30 to 40 hours a week preparing his single half-hour broadcast . . . Jack Fulton is an expert lip reader . . . Emily Post begins her day's chores at 5 a. m. . . . Annette Hanshaw, blues singer on Capt. Henry's Showboat, started as a song demonstrator in a Mount Kisco N. Y. music store . . . Phil Spitalny musical director, was a child prodigy and at the age of 9 was giving violin concerts in his native Odessa, Russia.

ARTURO TOSCANINI will direct the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra in the broadcast direct from the Metropolitan Opera House over WJSV from 3 to 5 p. m. today.

Toscanini, who gave Ravel's "Bolero" its American premiere on November 14, 1929, in New York, will present it again today. Other numbers on the program will be Cesar Franck's Symphony in D minor and Respighi's symphonic poem, "The Pines of Rome." The latter selection is divided into four sections: The Pines of the Villa Borghese, the Pines Near a Catacomb, the Pines of the Janiculum and the Pines of the Appian Way.

Dave Rubinoff and his bandsmen have spent the week planning to get even with Eddie Cantor for his merciless ribbing of last Sunday. On the Chase & Sanborn program Sunday, March 12, Rubinoff will give his answers to Cantor during the comedy and music broadcast over WRC at 8 p. m. The Cantor broadcast will originate from the studios of WRC, Washington.

JOHN McCORMACK will replace Rosa Ponselle as the soloist on the General Electric Sunday concert over WRC at 9 p. m. Illness prevents Miss Ponselle from filling the engagement.

Selections for which the tenor received the greatest number of requests include "Rose of Tralee," "Mother Machree," "I Hear You Calling Me," "Just For Today," "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen" and "My Wild Irish Rose."

The stirring days when the fathers of the country were drafting the Declaration of Independence will live again when the "Great Moments in History" program presents "The Continental Congress and Independence" on the broadcast at 7:30 p. m. over WMAL.

The action will be laid in June, 1776, and distinguished dramatic players will be heard in the roles of Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Hancock, John Adams and other members of the Congress. The play will show how these four worked to get the unanimously approval of all the thirteen colonies to the proposed declaration.

"PISCES."

IF March 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:50 a. m. to 12 noon, from 5:30 p. m. to 6:45 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. and from 7 a. m. to 8 a. m.

It would appear that inharmonies of a petty and trying nature may creep into the home on this day. Servants will seem to be lax in carrying out their duties. Children will be up to tricks more than is usually the case, and these tricks or pranks may well be of a practical nature. If you have been contemplating "popping the question" to the fair one, your chances for a favorable answer would seem good.

The child born on this March 12 will not be possessed of a great deal of "get up and go;" he will have to be led along and pushed through his early years of play and in school. Later in life he will probably take his place among those who put their shoulders to the wheel and plug along unimaginatively but steadily through this earthly existence.

If March 12 is the date of your birth, you will most probably never experience a dull moment in your life. You are too much alive and too much interested in all that goes on about you to suffer a moment of boredom. You are excessively curious, though not in a meddlesome or prying way; you simply want to know what is going on and why. If you are a business man, you are probably not directing your efforts in only one direction. Undoubtedly you have many interests, and being the executive that you are, you are more than likely directing them all. You have an alert and keen mind, a memory that is most retentive, and the ability to recall facts from this memory when you want them. You are not a person for detail; you can study a problem or situation, visualize the complete picture, and then lay down broad principles or policies to meet the conditions. You know how to handle people and where to place them in your employ so as to get the most and best work out of them.

Born on March 12, you are a very romantic person, and not a little sentimental. You will probably marry young, and your married life should prove a comparatively happy one. The women born on this date are very fond of children and enjoy having large families.

Successful people born on March 12:

Thomas Buchanan Read, artist and poet.

Louis Prang, art lithographer.

Ludwig S. Filbert, physician and inventor.

Clement Studebaker, wagon manufacturer.

Hilary A. Herbert, lawyer.

Simon Newcomb, astronomer and mathematician.

THE EFFECTS OF OPENING PSYCHICS.

OPENING psychics in the first seat are usually absurd bids which result only in undermining partner's confidence. Like all bad bids, however, they occasionally accomplish rather extraordinary things, particularly when the opponents are not sufficiently wide-awake to apply the Rule of Eight.

Mr. Joseph E. Cain, of Indianapolis, won the American Whist League pair championship in Cleveland last June. In that event he was paired with Mr. Walter J. Pray, a player with a decided aversion to unsound bids, and Mr. Cain, a distinctly imaginative player, was obliged to play throughout the entire tournament without using a single psychic. It is possible that the strain was too much for him, as shortly afterwards he turned into one of the most frequent bidders of every known form of psychic, and, when not playing with Mr. Pray, obtained a reputation for bizarre results.

On a recent visit to New York Mr. Cain found himself in a rubber game at Crockford's. He began experiencing a run of adverse cards, and, growing tired of continually passing, he finally decided in favor of an aggressive campaign of psychics, which resulted in a saving of several thousand points. The following is an example, which, strange as it may seem, was not even one of his best results:

North, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1NT	Dbl.	Pass	2♡
Pass	3♡	Pass	4♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding does not call for much comment, the only feature being the opening notrump bid by North. The play, however, was quite interesting. Mr. Cain, pursuing his policy of the unusual, opened the spade Queen. Declarer allowed this card to hold, South making the encouraging play of the 9-spot. The suit was continued and the second round won with the Ace. The Declarer now led the heart Knave and, without an instant's hesitation, finessed. South, of course, won with the singleton Queen and returned a spade, which Mr. Cain ruffed. Afterwards the Declarer was unable to avoid the loss of a club trick, and a vulnerable game was saved through this astonishing bidding and defense.

Actually, if Declarer had stopped to think, the opening psychic would not have proved effective. The East-West hands, between them, held 6½ honor-tricks, which made it almost impossible for North to have an opening bid. Even if the notrump had been a legitimate bid, one round of hearts should have been taken first in order to provide for the singleton Queen. However, since the Declarer did none of these things, Mr. Cain is to be congratulated on the result—particularly as shortly afterwards he was able to bid and make an apparently unmakable Small Slam.

A Question of Ethics.

I am in receipt of a letter from a newspaper in Abilene, Tex. This letter takes up the question of passing or bidding in accordance with the ethics of the game, and asks which of the following two procedures is the better from the standpoint of bridge etiquette: The first procedure is to carefully peruse the hand before passing the bidding, and the second is to glance at the hand and immediately say, "bidding" (if one intends to make some call other than a pass) or "no bid" (if one sees that the hand is not strong enough for a bid), afterward weighing the possibilities of the hand and calling whatever bid one desires to make.

Naturally both of the above suggestions were made with the idea of eliminating the inferences which are available when players take longer to make some bid than they do usually. Unquestionably this is a very important point as there are many players who take advantage of the fact that they can convey a certain amount of information to partner. Other players do this more or less subconsciously, but the evil is there just the same.

Personally, I think the second method entirely too drastic. The first method would unquestionably be the correct solution if it were possible to regulate the time limit. However, the adoption of any law to this effect is quite impossible, and as the matter stands now, it must be left a question of the average person's honesty. An attempt to enforce penalties for such violations would not meet with success.

A Dangerous Double.

The following hand, which was played by Mr. J. A. Taylor, of Youngstown, Ohio, is an example of the inadvisability of a penalty double of seven, even when 1 trick seems certain. Without the double South's line of play would not have been at all clearly marked, and he probably would have been set 1 trick.

North, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

1—The honor strength in the hand more than makes up for the weakness of the suit.

2—Wishing to show not only a preference, but a good hand as well.

3—The new Four-Five Notrump Convention.

4—The conventional response, showing the other two aces.

5—Something of a "sign-off."

6—In spite of the "Sign-off," North decides to go further on the strength of his heart Queen, which he feels is worth a trick and has not been taken into account in the bidding.

7—Why?

In the play the diamond ten was opened and the knave held the trick. Only 11 top tricks were in sight, and the question immediately arose as to whether to play for the spade finesse or a possible squeeze. The double gave the clue to the situation and the king of spades was almost certainly marked with West. For the squeeze to be effective it was imperative to drop the knave of hearts and use the fourth heart as the squeezing card. Declarer, therefore, played for this hope, and, when it succeeded, was able to successfully make his contract. West was helpless throughout and finally resorted to blinking his king of spades. This stood a vague chance of succeeding had he not doubled, but as it was, Declarer had no difficulty in counting the hand and proceeded to make seven very easily.

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S PROBLEM.

You hold:

Spades	A 10 4
Hearts	J 3
Diamonds	K J 4
Clubs	K J 8 7 5

You are not vulnerable. Your partner deals and bids one notrump. Second hand passes. What do you bid?

Answer: Three notrump. Although the hand contains 3 honor-tricks, it is a little too weak to force, as you are not at all interested in a Slam. A bid of three clubs only gives the defense information which may help them in their opening lead. The hand is obviously too strong to bid only two notrump.

THIS WEEK'S PROBLEM.

Each Sunday I am giving a problem in bidding. This is No. 10 of the series. The answer to today's problem will be given next Sunday.

IN WHICH THE EVIDENCE IS ALL ON ACTOR'S SIDE

By NELSON B. BELL

AN astute and perceptive juvenile, endowed by a benign Providence with the viewpoint and discernment of a leading man, once remarked that he enjoyed being on the stage because he had learned from pleasant association that "actors are swell people."

The truth of this modest appraisal was once more conclusively demonstrated to this department upon the recent occasion of the visit to Washington of that flaming fulfillment of a scene painter's dream of perambulating luxury, the Warner Brothers' "42nd Street Special," bearing a precious cargo of priceless personalities, a baffling equipment of electrical doodads and Tom Mix's horse!

Protracted travel on this blazing messenger of optimism and good cheer, "dragging its way across the continent like a golden ribbon of happiness," as Mr. Leo Carillo poetically phrases it, is closely akin to perpetual coasting about a summer park on a scenic railway, or taking up one's permanent residence in the toy section of a large department store at Christmas time.

Persisted in over a sufficient period of time—and a round trip from Los Angeles to Boston would seem to be all of that—it would, I am sure, drive one stark, staring mad, like gazing too long from a sick bed at the fantastic design of a bizarre and rococo wall paper.

After two weeks of the train's inescapable "Hollywood atmosphere," the wear and tear was already beginning to make itself felt upon jangled nerves by the time the Special backed into its parking space at Fourteenth and Water streets as one of the inauguration's gaudier sideshows.

Several of the stars had not been sleeping too well, the incessant clatter of those toy pianos, the pandemonia of scattered radio sets and the sputter of the broadcasting equipment were leaving their marks on dispositions habitually sunny.

Yet, save for surreptitious private confessions, there was no indication of all this to the casual outside observer. All was merry and bright. Enthusiasm and a vast spirit of camaraderie were in evidence on all sides—not for a fleeting moment or two, but for the entire length of the arduous, uncomfortable, disrupting trip did this heroic attitude seem to be the players' instinctive notion of what their deportment should be on this exhausting junket.

Not once, during three hours of intensive observation, was there the slightest deviation from this spirit of contagious good nature on the part of Mr. Carillo, Joe E. Brown, Tom Mix, Bette Davis, Glenda Farrell, Eleanor Holm, Lyle Talbot, Preston Foster, Laura La Plante, Claire Dodd or any of the others of the extensive entourage.

It was all acutely reminiscent of Benny Davis' lilting roundelay, "Make Believe," for in the secret thoughts of all of them what must have been uppermost was not the spangled luxury of the "42nd Street Special," but an enormous yearning for the soothing solace and solid comfort of a life-size bed that didn't eternally shiver and shake in its sleep!

IF further evidence on the side of the Thespian were needed, it might have been adduced with a minimum of difficulty and a slight choking in the throat from the characteristic display of faith in their profession and reverence for its great revealed by the group of notables who participated in the Actors' Fund Benefit in the briefly reopened Belasco Theater a week ago tonight.

Here one listened to artists in the twilights of their careers recount earlier triumphs, trials and tribulations that to the seasoned theater-goer revived memories of a day when the playhouse was a shrine and not a shambles; when the glory of the drama was at its zenith and the human throat was deemed a more miraculous bit of mechanism than a phonograph needle rasping across a rubber disc.

As the breaking voice of William Faversham, grown old in the service of the theater and its people, intoned a eulogy to the dean of the American theater, seated in an adjacent box, memory brought back the virile achievements of this same sterling actor on those same hallowed boards.

One hung on Robert Emmett Keane's words of announcement, expecting "The Squaw Man" to step forth from the wings. Instead, came an "Old English."

Cecilia Loftus, her hair pure white, and Fanny Ward, thoroughly belying her years, brought back shining recollections of a brilliant past, crowded with honorable accomplishments and loud with the applause of admiring multitudes.

And to lend the occasion something of the flavor of an older era in the theater, Daniel Frohman himself, a septuagenarian with the fire of youth still coursing through his veins when the stage is concerned, recalling that these helpful associates in an enterprise of mercy only a few years ago were his "kids!"

Here was epitomized the very heart and soul of a profession dedicated to the inspiration and happiness of others, seeking succor, not in a spirit of mendicancy, but in a fair exchange of incomparable talents and gorgeous entertainment for such dollars as might filter through the box-office into the till of a charity that is perhaps more economically and more efficiently administered than any other in the whole United States.

It was, in the face of all this, one of those inexplicable omissions that sometimes occur in moments of high tension and concentrated effort that in all that was said concerning the invaluable services of Mr. Frohman in actively sponsoring the Actors' Fund of America, of the great good the Fund is able to render members of the profession who have fallen upon evil days or been overtaken by the inexorable encroachments of age, or illness, or both, that nothing definite and concrete was said concerning the actual purpose of the benefit—to reimburse the treasury of the Actors' Fund Home, maintained in a beautiful pastoral setting adjacent to New York City by the Actors' Fund of America.

The disbursements of this Fund, including maintenance of the

A Mystery Picture On Strong Program With Eddie Cantor

An event of transcendent theatrical importance is heralded in the announcement that William Morris, internationally renowned producer, is presenting the irrepressibly funny man of the stage, radio and screen, Eddie Cantor, U. S. A., in person, in a new vaudeville revue at Loew's Fox Theater this week.

Direct from Broadway, where their comicalities convulsed playgoers with uncontrollable laughter, Cantor is bringing with him the original stars of his New York presentation. Eddie Cantor has starred in "The Kid From Spain," Ziegfeld's "Whoopee," "Palmy Days" and Ziegfeld's "Kid Boots." On the air, he has been voted the most popular radio entertainer by the radio editors of the Nation. He is heard every Sunday evening on a famous coffee hour.

Featured in the Cantor show are Benny Meroff and his orchestra, a group of gifted musicians which encompasses in its personnel singers, dancers and comedy men, Holland and Knight, the Four Abbottiers and Bobby Bixley.

This remarkable vaudeville show, which has been touring the country and getting a $2.50 price scale, is now coming to Washington at regular Fox prices.

"The Crime of the Century" is the feature film attraction on the same program. This mystery drama, done in reverse order, with the crime confessed before its actual commission, has in the cast Jean Hersholt, Wynne Gibson, Stuart Erwin and Frances Dee in the leading roles. Gordon Westcott and David Landau appear in principal supporting roles.

The story revolves around Hersholt, an alienist who walks into a police station one night and begs the detective on duty to lock him up. He has planned a perfect crime for that evening, he explains, and if the officers won't take him into custody, he'll commit it. The policemen, impressed, accompany him to his home and there, while they look on, not only the murder he has planned, but a second one, takes place. A few unimportant-looking clews offer the only solution to the mystery. Stuart Erwin, as a police reporter, and Miss Dee, as the alienist's daughter, combine to solve it.

A unique feature is introduced in the film. Halfway through, there is a 60-second intermission, during which the various clews are briefly reviewed, and the audience is offered an opportunity to solve the crime.

While most of Our Gang kids are enjoying a vacation away from the cameras, Dickie Moore is going to work. Dickie has been loaned by the Hal Roach studios to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for "Gabriel Over the White House."

A THRILLING CIRCUS STORY FEATURES ANIMAL TRAINER

FORTY lions and tigers, fierce and roaring, held within a circus cage under the snapping whip of a daring trainer—here is a bit of "The Big Cage," Universal's new animal epic, which is playing at the Rialto Theater.

Anita Page, of "Broadway Melody" fame, enacts the leading role under the direction of Kurt Neumann, and in the supporting cast are Clyde Beatty, Andy Devine, Vince Barnet, Wallace Ford, Raymond Hatton, Reginald Barlow, Wilfred Lucas, Robert McWade and James Durkin.

"The Big Cage" has really startled Hollywood critics. They viewed it right after it came from the editing rooms and rushed into print to declare that it was "the greatest animal picture ever made, the swellest circus film to talk its way from the Coast, the most exciting production of the season."

The animals, stars of "The Big Cage" in their own jungle right, are real circus performers; they all came from the Hagenback-Wallace outfit and the Hagenback-Wallace officials worked with Universal to establish an authentic background for the picture.

To complete its new program, the Rialto offers Graham McNamee as the Talking Reporter in connection with the showing of the new Universal News.

Clyde Beatty's life was once saved by a lion which afterward almost killed him. Which demonstrates again that one can never tell what a wild animal will do.

In 1930, during the progress of his performance, a new tigress knocked over her pedestal, and became so frightened that she charged at Beatty, knocking him down and clawing him. Nero, a huge Sumatra lion weighing more than 600 pounds, leaped across the arena at the tigress, and in the ensuing melee the trainer escaped.

But in 1932, just before the opening of the circus season, a lioness jumped down from her pedestal behind Beatty, and the same Nero, incensed, leaped 20 feet through the air from his own pedestal. He struck Beatty, knocking him to the ground underneath the lioness. A terrific fight ensued, with Nero clawing both the lioness and Beatty, and finally sinking his teeth into the bone of the trainer's leg.

Beatty was finally dragged from the arena by attendants with great iron rakes, and went to the hospital for twelve weeks.

That Old Maestro And All the Lads Wow 'Em at Earle

Yow-Zah! It's Washington's favorite radio personality, Ben Bernie, with "All the Lads," who headlines the Earle stage bill this week. "The Old Maestro" and his boys are heard in thirty minutes of fast, snappy syncopated tunes, incomparable wit and comedy, and clever dancing. On the screen is Paramount's newest drama, "From Hell to Heaven," with Carole Lombard, Jack Oakie, David Manners and Adrienne Ames in the featured roles.

Bernie, most famous of radio personalities, and "All the Lads," are making the popular Thirteenth street playhouse resound with Brother Bernie's infectious "yow-zah!" carried on the strains of the latest popular tunes. "All the Lads" also supply hot rhythms, fetching songs, and that ever-explosive humor that Ben alone seems to get away with. This is Ben Bernie's first visit to Washington in recent years, but from the reception he is receiving at all appearances, it will be only a short time before his fans demand his return.

"From Hell to Heaven" is a screen drama which peers into the intimate thoughts and secret lives of a group of people who make up one small section of a crowd of thousands. Eleven characters move through the action of "From Hell to Heaven," each gambling for a lucky break to win honor, life, love or freedom. The lives, the hopes, and the thoughts of these eleven are curiously tangled as the time for the winner to be announced draws near.

Other acts on the stage bill are Violet Carlson, the famous caricature prima-donna star of "Student Prince," "Sweet Adeline," and "The Red Robe;" the three Victor Girls, a novelty aerial dance act, and Maxine Doyle, mistress of ceremonies.

Ben Bernie, who rose from a blacksmith shop in Brooklyn to the top ranks of the orchestra world, has the highest salaried band in America today, and his engagement here is part of a whirlwind tour of the Middle West before returning to the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman in Chicago, where he is under contract for next season.

Unlike most famous baton-wielders, Bernie has a background of twenty years in the theater. He started out as a "boy prodigy" with a violin and a huge mane of hair on the Loew's circuit, billed as "Bernie, the Boy Wonder." Humor finally got the better of art and Bernie abandoned serious fiddling for the witty banter that has made him the outstanding band leader on the air today.

Pat Kennedy, "The Old Maestro's" famous Irish tenor; the German quartet, and Frank Prince, the Bernie crooner, will also be among those present.

Two More.

Purchase of "Stairs of Sand" and "Sunset Pass," two Zane Grey Western romances, is announced by Paramount. "Sunset Pass" will be the next Zane Grey special to go before the cameras, with Randolph Scott and Kent Taylor featured.

Wynne Gibson in "Crime of the Century"—Loew's Fox.

SENSATIONAL MUSICAL HIT SHIFTED TO METROPOLITAN

DUE to a last minute change in bookings, Warner Bros.' musical spectacle, "42nd Street," which has just enjoyed seven days of capacity business at the Earle Theater, has been moved to Warner Bros.' Metropolitan Theater, where it will be shown until Thursday night, in order to give everyone an opportunity to see this 1933 entertainment sensation.

In "42nd Street," Warner Bros. have assembled for a tale of the Rialto's backstage, an ace cast to interpret a gripping, dramatic story of the theater of today, of the problems, heartaches and tears, the good times, lighthearted camaraderie and carefree days, when there's money in the pocket, 40 more weeks of work ahead, and nothing to worry about, all of which make up stage existence.

Gorgeous girls—to the number of about 200—stars, directors, singers, song writers, hoofers, crooners, comics, heavies, juveniles and ingenues—they're all there. And Warner Baxter, Bebe Daniels, George Brent, Una Merkel, Ruby Keeler (Mrs. Al Jolson), Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks, Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Allen Jenkins, Henry B. Walthall, Edward J. Nugent, Harry Akst—a dozen others—also appear advantageously.

There are four song hits by Al Dubin and Harry Warren, who, between them, have been responsible for such popular knockouts as "You're My Everything," "Too Many Tears," "Carolina Moon," "I Found a Million Dollar Baby in a Five and Ten Cent Store" and dozens of others.

But, as with any picture worth its salt, "42nd Street" doesn't depend on any one thing or player. It has a story that takes its place among the best stories of the stage. More than that, it has a story within that story—a play within a play. Deftly and expertly, it mingles these elements into a spectacular and vastly entertaining whole—a picture that takes rank with the best of this or any year.

Special short reel subjects and the Paramount Sound News complete the program.

Bold Sexplorers Put Africa Back In Proper Place

Patrons of RKO-Keith's are touring in Africa this week, with none other than Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler directing this imaginative journey in a picture called "So This Is Africa!" Whereas, pictures dealing with Africa have usually caused chills and thrills to run up and down one's spine, in this particular instance everything that shouldn't happen in Africa does happen, with consequent gales of laughter rather than aforementioned thrills.

What happens to Wheeler and Woolsey on this journey of "sexploration" is actually nobody's business. They find whole tribes of wild women, led by a Tarzana played by Raquel Torres. They find that Mrs. Johnson-Martini, engaged as a wild animal expert, is actually frightened every time a lion a mile away roars. These are but two of the things that happen, and Wheeler and Woolsey fans, numbering legion, won't need any further information on the picture.

That dark and mysterious continent, Africa, has been a lodestone to hundreds of explorers, fortune-hunters eager for gold and diamonds, often a refuge for men of the world down on their luck, and many times in the past few years the fascinating subject for many adventurous and melodramatic motion pictures.

Wheeler and Woolsey took careful estimate of the emphasis that film producers and the public had placed upon the African lure. Wheeler and Woolsey then saw "Tarzan" and again took appraisal of the situation. Then they decided that much too much emphasis had been placed upon Africa, elephants, wild animals, wild men, wild life and calls of the wild. Result, "So This Is Africa!"

"So This Is Africa!" produced by Columbia Studios under the direction of Eddie Cline, boldly puts Africa in its proper place. It reveals for the first time on the talking screen a secret of that wild and strange continent that has never been known before (the wildest thing in Africa is not the animals, not the men, not the life and not the calls of the Tarzan—but the women!)

Together with Raquel Torres and Esther Muir, Wheeler and Woolsey assembled a courageous safari to explore the deepest interior of Africa, armed to the hilt to fight off elephants, water buffalo, hippopotami, rhinoceroses, lions, tigers and other wild animals. They forgot all about locusts and left their flitguns at home!

'Little Caesar' to Assume New Alias, 'The Little Giant'

Edward G. Robinson, star of "Silver Dollar," who has been spending a vacation in New York City, some of it in reading manuscripts submitted as possible starring vehicles for him, personally chose "The Little Giant" as his next picture for First National. Mr. Robinson has read and studied no less than twelve stories and plays submitted to him within the past few weeks and has come to the conclusion that "The Little Giant," which was written by Robert Lord and called "Tin Gods" originally, offers him the best opportunity to present a new and sensational characterization.

Roy Del Ruth has been assigned to direct "The Little Giant" from the author's own adaptation for the screen.

A Transatlantic Crossing Aboard Ship Play Theme

Sally Eilers and Ralph Bellamy are carrying the leading roles in the Fox Film production, "Second-Hand Wife," which ends its engagement at Loew's Columbia Theater this evening.

"Luxury Liner," a film which visualizes the drama in the lives of the passengers aboard a magnificent ocean liner during the six days of its voyage from Europe to America, will open tomorrow.

George Brent, Zita Johann, Vivienne Osborne, Alice White, Verre Teasdale, C. Aubrey Smith and Frank Morgan head the "passenger list" in the film. Brent is cast as a physician who secures himself the position of ship's doctor for a voyage so that he may attempt to effect a reconciliation with his wife, Miss Osborne, who has eloped aboard it with another man. Miss Johann plays the role of a nurse, his assistant, whose kindness helps him forget his own troubles when he is called, time after time, to administer to ailing patients.

So frequent are the calls that he is unable to catch more than an occasional glimpse of his wife. Those glimpses, however, are enough to make him doubt the soundness of his former grief, and to drive her to desperate measures which vitally affect the lives of everyone on the vessel. Her ultimate step is one which leaves the doctor and the nurse free to straighten out their own tangled lives together.

A world-famous financier, a successful opera singer, a girl traveling in steerage, but using her charms to get herself up to first cabin; an elevator operator, who poses as an officer before gaping girl passengers, and a dying mother, traveling to New York for one last reunion with her son, are among the other important characters.

Tangled Lives Is Subject of Drama Starring Gilbert

"Fast Workers," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, starring John Gilbert, with Mae Clark, Robert Armstrong, Muriel Kirkland and Virginia Carroll, is a romantic comedy of two tough guys who believe themselves to be love proof.

Mae Clark, an old girl friend of Gilbert, meets Armstrong, and, knowing that he is making a good weekly salary, is determined to marry him. Gilbert finds this out and tries to tell his pal just what she is, but Armstrong is sure she is a good girl and marries her.

Armstrong tries to kill Gilbert, but is unsuccessful. Later he finds out the truth, but almost loses his best friend as a result of strange and unusual circumstances.

John Gilbert has appeared in many successful screen plays—"The Big Parade," "Flesh and the Devil," "Way for a Sailor," and his latest, "Downstairs."

Robert Armstrong won fame in "Leatherneck" and "Big News." His most recent pictures are "The Lost Squadron" and "The Billion Dollar Scandal."

Mae Clark has appeared in "The Front Page," "Waterloo Bridge," and many others.

Fox Picturizes Mr. Coward's Most Pretentious Play

Screen Version of Coward's Greatest Work at National

Noel Coward's "Cavalcade," the talking picture which is claimed by the motion picture industry to be one of the most important contributions to popular entertainment to come out of Hollywood in seven years, will have its first showing in Washington at the National Theatre on Monday evening, March 13—tomorrow.

Fox Films, producers of "Cavalcade," seems to have forgotten the depression while preparing this pretentious drama for the screen. The cost, effort and the number of people (some thirty-five hundred), which were summonded to make it, caused Hollywood to raise its eyebrows during the long period of its production.

While the rest of the industry looked upon it as a "long shot" that was much too much for these times, Fox officials went confidently ahead without curtailment of their plans in any respect.

It was not until its premiere on Broadway that motion picture people dropped their skepticism. The unusual business it has been doing as a "twice-a-day" attraction has frankly left the wiseacres flabbergasted.

The climax came when newspaper critics applied laundatory adjectives to it that not even the Fox press agents dared to couple with it.

In "Cavalcade" Noel Coward has contributed his most serious work to the stage and screen. The story traces the history of a British family through a third of a century of national life—from 1900 to 1932—showing in striking relief the effect of each epochal national event upon the lives of the members of that family.

The greatest character in the play, needless to say, is that of the mother, played by Diana Wynyard, the brilliant young English actress seen on the National stage last season in "The Devil Passes," and on the screen more recently with Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore in "Rasputin and the Empress," one of the season's most impressive films. Clive Brook is cast in the opposite role.

These two distinguished British players are supported by a cast itself almost exclusively British, prominent among them being John Warburton, the popular young juvenile of the National Theater Players season before last; Ursula Ifan, Frank Lawton, Margaret Lindsay and scores more.

Bureau Announces Notable Concerts For End of Month

Three concerts of the first importance—two in the afternoon and one at night—are announced by the Wilson-Greene Concert Bureau for the latter part of the current month.

The first of these will be that of Paderewski, the great Polish pianist, who will be heard at Constitution Hall on Wednesday afternoon, March 22, at 4:30 o'clock, as the closing attraction of the Philharmonic series.

The second will be the concert of Yehudi Menuhin, boy genius of the violin, who will be heard at Constitution Hall on Saturday evening, March 25, at 8:30 o'clock, as the final attraction of the Saturday evening series.

The third concert will be that of Lily Pons, world's greatest coloratura and outstanding prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera, at Constitution Hall on Friday afternoon, March 31, at 4:30 o'clock, the final attraction of the artists' series.

These three concerts will close the Wilson-Greene season of 1932-33, although an announcement concerning the attractions of that bureau for 1933-34 is expected shortly from Dorothy Hodgkin Worsey, who has assumed charge of all Wilson-Greene concert activities in Washington and Baltimore since the recent death of Mrs. Wilson-Greene.

Paderewski, whose rank as an interpreter of that other great Pole, Chopin, is unchallenged in the entire international field of music, has promised an all-Chopin program that will include the Fantasia, Op. 49; two nocturnes, Op. 27; four preludes, Nos. 17, 16, 21 and 24; the B flat minor sonata, Op. 35 (grave-doppio movemento—Scherzo—funeral marche and presto finale); Ballade F minor, Op. 52; three etudes, Nos. 6, 8 and 12, Op. 25; Scherzo, C sharp minor, Op. 39; Polonaise, E flat minor, Op. 26, two mazurkas: B flat minor, Op. 24, and D major, Op. 33, and the grande valse brilliante, Op. 18.

Yehudi Menuhin, the youthful prodigy of the violin, who has not been heard in the Capital since season before last, has not yet announced the program he will play here on March 25, but Lily Pons has announced that she will sing, among other selections, the mad scene from "Lucia," one of her greatest vocal demonstrations, as well as the aria from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro,"

AT THE PLAY IN NEW YORK

By MARK BARRON.

NEW YORK, March 11 (A.P.).—Producers have joined the actors now in upholding the theater's oldest tradition, that the show must go on despite storm or sleet or bank holidays.

Softly humming "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" while they hung out offers to trade their wares for I. O. U.'s or "frozen" checks, the canny gentlemen who gamble on the public's taste in amusements have gone steadily forward ringing up the curtain on new productions representing investments of thousands of dollars.

On the Saturday which saw New York's banks tied up under edict, Lew Brown and Ray Henderson offered a costly new musical show called "Strike Me Pink." Two nights later the Theater Guild presented Maxwell Anderson's latest work, "Both Your Houses," while Eva Le Gallienne and her civic repertory company offered a noteworthy revival of Anton Chekov's "The Cherry Orchard." The next night brought an effort by Saxon Kling entitled "The Lady Refuses."

THE first three of these, together with "Run Little Chillun," a Negro pageant, which edged quietly into town just ahead of the bank holiday, seem to have justified their producers' hopes. Business with them, as with the other better shows, was reported "fairly good—considering."

"Run, Little Chillun" took Broadway by surprise. With little advance notice, this musical drama, by Hall Johnson, Negro composer, diffidently opened on the same evening with a more widely ballyhooed entertainment and won a clamorous burst of applause from the critics.

The author of the piece directed the spirituals of "The Green Pastures," and the two plays have much in common. Nor does "Run Little Chillun" suffer by comparison. As a spectacle, the new production at times is even more impressive than its predecessor.

THE author explains that he is attempting to picture the background of the Negro spirituals. To do this he has taken a slender thread of plot concerning a young Negro preacher torn between the love of his God and the love of a godless young woman, and on this thread has hung two major scenes as memorable as anything the playgoer is likely to find.

The first is an open-air meeting of a Negro cult of moon worshipers, hymning weird praises to their goddess and losing themselves, as the moon rises above the forest, in a religious frenzy which culminates in a barbaric African dance to the goddess of love.

The second is a revival meeting in an Orthodox church, where the more respectable elements of the same community seek salvation through song and wrestlings with the devil. The gradually rising note of ecstacy as prayers and confessions swing into robust song, growing in strength until the whole congregation is beside itself with the joy salvation, makes a scene that is not soon to be forgotten.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, in "Both Your Houses," launches a bitter attack upon the venality of a certain type of lawmaker. Yielding nothing to the popular taste for hokum, he sets his scene in the committee room of the House Committee on Appropriations, and shows what happens to an honest young congressman who attempts to block a bill carrying $200,000,000 of "pork" for the committeemen's home districts.

Of Chekov's "The Cherry Orchard" not much need be said, beyond confirming the expectation that Eva Le Gallienne's company would do full justice by the revival. With Alla Nazimova in the role of Mme. Ranevsky, these expectations were amply fulfilled.

"Strike Me Pink" abounds in performers who can assure the success of almost any piece—Lupe Velez, Jimmy Durante, Hope Williams and Hal Le Roy among others. With such songs as "Let's Call It a Day," "Memories" and "Restless," in addition, it made the audience—if not the producers—forget that times were said to be parlous.

Loved Marionette Will Delight His Friends Saturday

The Children's Theater of New York, which will present "Pinocchio" at the National on Saturday morning, March 18, is bringing a company of 32 to Washington for the single performance.

As children who know and love the story will remember, the marionette, Pinocchio, meets almost innumerable characters in his travels. None of them could be omitted without doing damage to the children's conception of the story, and so members of this adult, professional company will be playing roles with such bizarre names as "Fire Eater," "Black Rabbit," "Blue Fairy," "Dormouse" and "Lampwick," to say nothing of "Punch," "Harlequin" and animals such as the parrot, the cat and half a dozen others.

The principal roles in "Pinocchio" will be filled by the Children's Theater actors who pleased young Washingtonians in "Huckleberry Finn" last December. Robert Josselyn will be Gepetto, Pinocchio's foster-father; Philippa Bevans will play the Blue Fairy; Josie Heather has the role of Cricket, and Allen Mathes is Antonio.

Bobbie Heather, who gives such a whimsical portrayal of Pinocchio himself, is, however, a newcomer to Washington. Bobbie was literally born in the theater, and made an initial appearance on the English stage in a perambulator, followed a few years later by the role of Cupid in pantomime, and finally by adult parts in England and New York.

Touring Burlesque Troupes Once More Booked for Gayety

Entertainment seekers in the field of burlesque today are not restrained from patronizing the show they want to see by reason of high prices of admission. All theaters playing Empire Burlesque attractions have reverted to prewar scale to meet the trend of the times. But the quality of the shows is still up to the standard long ago established by the Empire Circuit.

This week, starting with the regular matinee today, the "Powder Puff Revue" will amuse patrons of the Gayety Theater in the customary enjoyable manner.

Principal performers in the "Powder Puff Revue" include Eddie Kaplin, tramp comedian; Harry Arnie, eccentric, and Eddie Dale, Dutch funster. They have charge of the comic job. Their combined antics are said to cause gales of laughter. Hazel Miller is said to be a beautiful and accomplished singer, and Johanna Slade, ingenue; Bob Burch and Bert Grant, straight character actors; Mae Baxter and Joan Dare, soubrettes, in a series of tantalizing specialties; Fred Bishop, loose-limbed juvenile; Mlle. Marie, French chansonette, and Ray, Realy and Roy, contribute highly meritorious interludes.

Matinees will be given daily as usual, and smoking is allowed in all parts of the house.

Home for the aged and infirm of the profession, amount in round numbers to a quarter of a million dollars a year. It was in the interest of this Fund and this Home that Mr. Frohman and his associated artists labored so diligently and so delightfully in the Belasco a week ago—that their fellows in distress might not suffer the penalties of a too-great, lifelong generosity. Somebody should have said so.

* * * *

WITH two of the stage's and radio's most engaging minstrels currently competing for the plaudits of the tuner-inners, as well as those who seek their refreshment of the spirit in the flesh, Mr. Eddie Cantor and Mr. Bennie Bernie, further testimony in behalf of thespianism's inherent swellness is not far to seek.

These gifted gentlemen arrive simultaneously in the National Capital, intent upon furthering the welfare of the Federal establishment by strangely divergent means and methods.

Mr. Cantor for many months has been an eager, if not wholly authentic, adviser of the Government, whose quaintly original devices for the enhancement of our prestige in the Concert of Nations have, at least, been strikingly individualistic.

It is inconceivable that now that he has reached the seat of government he should abandon his attempt to patch things up. If there is any patching up to be done, the seat of government is obviously the place to begin, so Mr. Cantor may be presumed to be panting to get started!

Mr. Bernie, on the other hand, arrives belatedly. His original purpose, and the plans of those in active charge of the event, contemplated a timely and tuneful presence at the Inaugural Ball, but circumstances intervened and Maestro Bernie and all the lads only now reach their coveted destination, too late to be of service in doing full and repetitive justice to that hardy, chromatic proclamation that "Happy Days Are Here Again."

As a balm to the old maestro in his bitter disappointment, his close friends, Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, Mr. Eddie Dowling, Democracy's most assiduous advocate and actor, and even President Roosevelt himself—or so vagrant reports would have it—assured the Bernie that when he did arrive in Washington he need but nod his head or wink an eye and the privileges of the favored would be his.

But Mr. Bernie, in addition to being a melodious and witty one, is a bright young man. Arriving in the Capital at a time when the best minds are grappling with a crisis such as the country has scarcely seen since the days of the War Between the States, Mr. Bernie has reached a sage and sound conclusion that it might be the part of wisdom not to intrude the comparatively minor concerns of show business upon a harried White House and a tantalized Treasury. If he picks on anyone, it will probably be the vocal but largely invisible Mr. Dowling.

And so it turns out that in the view of those in high places, actors ARE swell people!

ABOUT A YOUTHFUL GENIUS AND HIS BRILLIANT WORKS

NOEL COWARD started his story of "Cavalcade," the Fox film version of the play which opens at the National Theater on Monday evening, from the day he was born. And strangely enough the historical sequences he wrote with such accuracy of knowledge and instinctive feeling for atmosphere were all happening when he was in his cradle.

At the age of 32 Coward is declared by producers and playwrights, whose authority and experience must carry weight, to be one of the few real geniuses of the theater. And recently, following the screening of "Private Lives" and "Cavalcade," Winfield Sheehan, vice president in charge of production for Fox, added a sprig or two to his laurel by saying as much for Coward in the field of talking pictures.

If this is surprising in one so young, let it be remembered that although Coward has only lived 32 years, he has spent more than 21 of them on the stage or in intimate contact with the theater. Since the age of 12, he has earned his living by it and for about the last four years, at any rate, he has laid the foundations of a small fortune which nobody grudges to one who has worked so hard and so brilliantly through hardship and failure to his present phenomenal success.

About ten years ago plays and revue lyrics and sketches began to pour from the young man's pen. With an indefatigable zest for work, a burning desire to express himself and a swift facility for doing so, he wrote in three years a total of twelve plays, including "Hay Fever," "Easy Virtue," Fallen Angels," and others.

Not all the plays were of equal merit and Coward began to suffer. He was the subject of bitter attacks. He became disheartened and discouraged. The first night of "Sirocco" was enlivened by fierce storms of booing. Coward himself was spat upon when leaving the stage door by some stern guardian of public morality.

He was going to "chuck the whole thing and go abroad" when Charles Cochran commissioned him to write a revue. He wrote "This Year of Grace," which made revue history.

But it remained for his "Cavalcade," which Fox made into a film following its year's run at the Drury Lane in London, to combine his talents in a single play. It contains lyrics, music, tableaux—the whole gamut of showmanship. It is accredited as Coward's chef d'oeuvre, by which he hopes to be remembered for posterity.

COMING TO LOCAL STAGES

FOLLOWING the engagement of Fox's film version of Noel Coward's historical pageant, "Cavalcade," the National Theater will present as its distinguished early spring attraction George M. Cohan's whimsical comedy-drama, "Pigeons and People," in which the author himself appears in the stellar role.

This play is unique among the great number Mr. Cohan's America's foremost man of the theater, has written, in that it indulges in a considerable philosophical flight, contrasting men and women of his acquaintance with the pigeons an eccentric, but kindly, gentleman has cultivated as friends in one of a great city's parks.

Mr. Cohan is reputed to be on the stage for the greater part of the play's total running time and to assume a character unlike anything in which he has heretofore been seen.

Although at time of writing definite decision to that effect has not been arrived at, it is deemed probable that "Pigeons and People" will be offered as an attraction in the season's list of worthy plays sponsored by the American Theater Society.

CONTINUING its newly resumed policy of presenting a touring burlesque company each week, the Gayety Theater announces as its offering for the week beginning next Sunday afternoon, March 19, a new Empire Burlesque attraction bearing the title of "Jingle-Jingle."

Like all of the traveling unit shows that will be presented at the Gayety throughout the remainder of the current season, "Jingle-Jingle" will boast a cast of 12 principals—singers, dancers, comedians and professional beauties—and a carefully selected chorus of 18 agile and attractive young women, experienced in the seductive arts of their profession.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

THROUGH the penitential psalms of Lent one may catch the echoes of Easter anthems, and Washington choirs are reporting festival programs for this first of days, musically speaking, in the Christian year.

The fact that Easter is later than usual this year will see more visitors in the city than is customary at Easter, which represents the height of the tourist activity in the National Capital.

This has the effect of arousing still more interest in the Easter musical programs. The leading churches here are thronged with a cross section of America on such a festal day.

The program at Friendship House, 324 Virginia avenue southeast, this afternoon at 5 o'cock, is to be of especial interest to young people and children.

Walter Swank, a pupil of Frances Gutelius, will play several groups of piano numbers. Harry Klee will play saxophone solos, accompanied by his sister, Helen Klee. A vesper hymn will be sung by members of the Sing Song Glee Club of Friendship House, accompanied by their director, Jessie M. Olin.

The Arts Club will give a joint recital on Tuesday evening by Emily Coville, soprano, and Minna Niemann, pianist. Mrs. Katherine Hill Rawls will serve as accompanist for Mrs. Coville.

The program for the Hour of Music today at 5 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets, will be given by the following students of Flora McGill Keefer: Ione Hoffman, Frederick Denmiston, Norma Simonson, James De Valse Mann, Anna Davis Straub, Harry Edward Schonrank, Lucille Peadicord, Velma Snow, Rawley Donohue. Dorothy Radde Emery will be at the piano. The program for the Music Lovers Hour tomorrow at 5 p. m. will be given by Helen Le Fevre Lyon. She will have as her subject, "Music That Has Lived," and appropriate music will illustrate the talk.

The U. S. Navy Band Orchestra, under the leadership of Lieut. Charles Benter, will play at the auditorium in the Navy Yard Wednesday night. The program opens with Mendelssohn's overture, "Fingal's Cave," and includes three numbers by William H. Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury.

The second in a series of Bach programs will be played at All Souls' Church (Unitarian), Sixteenth and Harvard streets, this afternoon at 5 o'clock by Lewis Corning Atwater, organist.

The Washington Choral Society began rehearsals last Tuesday evening on "The Four Seasons," a cantata arrangement of Bach's composition in celebration of the birthday of King Augustus in 1734.

Originally written as "Schleicht, Spieldende Wellen," "The Four Seasons" has been recently arranged in this form by J. Michael Diack, and was found by Louis Potter in the music department of the Library of Congress while he was searching for music for the spring concert of the Choral Society, of which he is director.

Singers desiring to join the chorus will be welcome and may report for audition at 7:30 p. m.

Miksa Merson, popular Hungarian pianist who has made his home in Washington for several years, and Stephen Deak, a young Hungarian violoncellist who is on the faculty of both Curtis and Peabody Institutes of Music, will present a sonata program at the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K streets northwest, Tuesday at 8:30 p. m.

This is the third in the series of six programs sponsored by the Ten o'Clock Club for the benefit of local musicians who are in need. The artists on this program, as in the other cases, are giving their services. Program notes will be given informally by Helen Fetter Cook.

On Wednesday Dr. Albert W. Harned, organist and choir director at the Universalist National Memorial Church, will give the third of his Lenten organ recitals. The program begins at 5 o'clock. His numbers will be:

"Sonata No. 2," by Josef Rheinberger; "Berceuse," by Walter Spinney; "Traumerei," by Robert Schumann; "Will o' the Wisp," by George B. Nevin; larghetto from third sonata, by Filippo Capocci.

Miss Frances Gutelius will present Charlton and Karlian Meyer in a recital Friday at the New Hampshire Studios. Charlton, 7 years old, has given three radio programs, and Karlian, 4, and each has an extensive repertoire. Charlton's consists of pieces by Bach, Mozart, Grieg, Schubert, Poldini, MacDowell and Gretchaninoff, and Karlian has numbers from Scarlotti, Bach, Paradisi, Beethoven, Chopin, Brahms Reinhold Rachmaninoff and Debussey.

On Wednesday evening members of the Mme. Zalipsky's Music Club will sing a program of Russian folk music over Station WRC. This program is one of a series given by the Federation of Music Clubs.

On Friday evening Mme. Zalipsky will present Sola Holmen, mezzo-soprano, and Marjorie Isaacs, lyric soprano, in recital at the Sears-Roebuck Art Galleries. Friends and all interested are invited to this program.

The concert, which was to have been given by the glee clubs of George Washington University on Wednesday evening in Pierce Hall, All Souls Unitarian Church, has been canceled.

This morning the A Capella Choir of the First Congregational Church will sing "There Was a Knight of Bethlehem," by Boernschein and the quartet will sing "Rock of Ages."

Soroptimist Club

The Washington Soroptimist Club met at the club's new headquarters in the Willard Hotel on Wednesday. The president, Nora B. Huffman, presided. The following new members were admitted into the club: Marie Tedrow, Loretta Murphy, Elizabeth Coleman and Claudia Brown.

A letter was read from Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hysong thanking the members of the club for the solid silver tray and coffee set given them on their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

On Wednesday Mrs. Katherine O'Laughlin McCarthy, Representative from Kansas, will be the honor guest and speaker at the luncheon to be given at the Willard Hotel at 1 p. m.

On March 24 the Soroptimist Club will join other civic clubs of Washington in giving a surprise dinner at the Mayflower Hotel.

On March 29 the Soroptimist Club will entertain the "Globe-Trotter" at a dinner to be given at the Italian Village.

History Club

The Capitol Hill History Club met on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. M. D. Granger with Mrs. J. A. Moyer and Mrs. J. P. Hunnicutt, assisting hostess. Two interesting papers were read. "Early Explorers of the Pacific Coast" was read by Mrs. Charles Fisher, and "The Conquest of California" was given by Mrs. E. F. Stearns.

ART AND ARTISTS IN WASHINGTON

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

WASHINGTON'S happy-go-lucky art colonists are leaders in the hilarious philosophy with which the Washington public has greeted the bank holiday. The conversation in the studios is over the possibility of following the Paris artists' example and bartering their wares for food and other necessities. Not that there seems any lack of food for teas, and little suppers have been the order of each week at private exhibitions at many studios and artistic homes for the benefit of those who came to Washington for the inauguration week and lingered here with us for a time.

Because of the many requests the Indian Tribal Art exhibition is again continued and will be open all day today at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. Interest in the exhibition of the Washington Water Color Club has brought many of the local art colony and art lovers to the gallery this week. This is the work of eight artists and includes 150 water colors of all types.

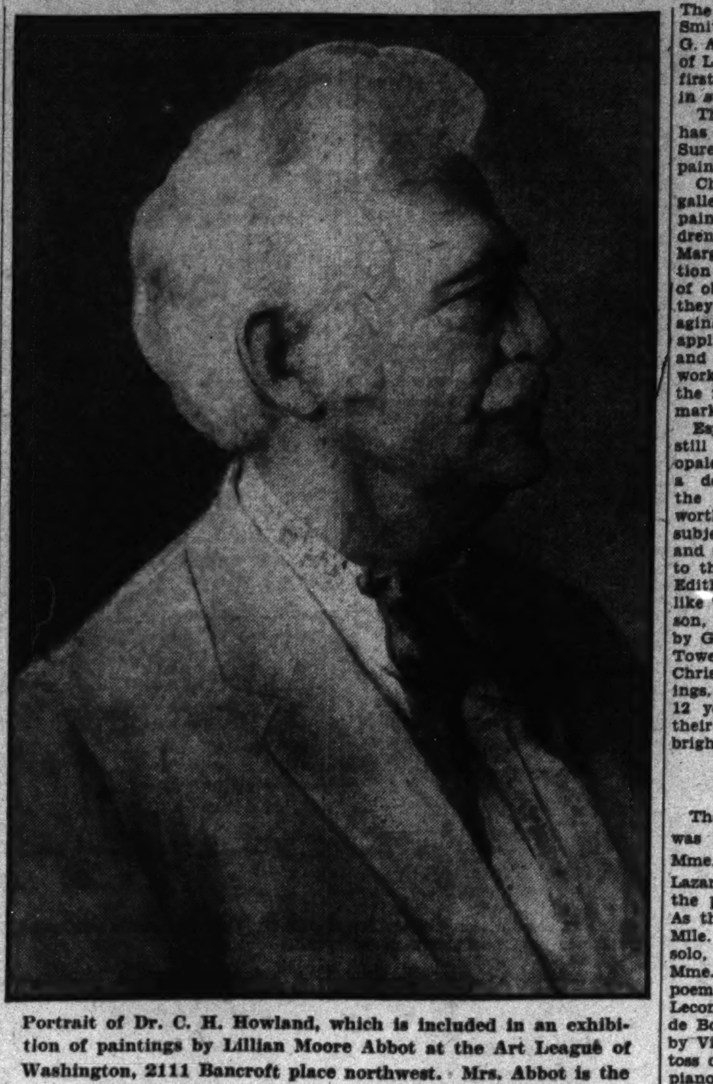
The Arts Club is showing this week a dual exhibition of unusual interest and value. The artists are Anthony Thieme, of, Holland, New York and Rockport, Mass., and Miss Sarah Baker, of Washington.

Miss Baker is a member of the Fellowship of the Pennsylvania Academy, and also of the Society of Washington Artists. The twelve water colors she shows here are charming in composition, tone and technique, and include flowers and fruit studies, portraits and still lifes. These Arts Club exhibitions are open to the public from 9 to 5 daily.

Mr. Thieme's work includes scenes of city and country, fishing craft at sea and in port.

The delicate beauty of the Currier and Ives Prints now on exhibition at 1223 Connecticut avenue have won much admiration from the discriminating who visited the exhibition. Among the subjects are Famous American Clipper Ships and Yachts, American Naval Victories and Other Historical Events, Charming American Rural Scenes, Views of American Cities, American Pioneer and Frontier Life, Early American Railroad Scenes, American Hunting, Fishing and Turf Scenes. Collectors of Americana and those who seek perfect attributes of decoration for the house will find the exhibition of definite importance.

The first important exhibition to be held in some time in the northeast section of the city is continuing to attract a large attendance. The exhibition of work by Washington artists sponsored by the Art League of Washington, and held currently at the Northeastern Branch of the Public Library, at Seventh street and Maryland avenue northeast, includes work by about twenty artists, in oil, water color, pastel and sculpture. A catalogue of the show, with descriptive notes by the director of the league, notes that the oil paintings are shown in the main reading room, while the water color group and pastels are shown in the children's room on the second floor. Landscapes by Benson Moore, Russell Parr, Alice Ferguson and Eunice Clay Pritchett are all competently painted. A portrait by Gladys Nelson Smith has the place of honor at the library and is described as "the tradition of Hals and Rembrandt made use of in a richly painted human portrait of a kindly old woman." A marine by E. E. Siebenthal is said to be "reminiscent of the nocturnes of Whistler, yet more plastically and more completely painted. Silhouetting wharfs and boats are largely obscured by soft, enveloping, silvery fogs."



Portrait of Dr. C. H. Howland, which is included in an exhibition of paintings by Lillian Moore Abbot at the Art League of Washington, 2111 Bancroft place northwest. Mrs. Abbot is the wife of the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and her paintings are on view until Thursday.

The water colors are a beautifully grouped selection of varied interest and styles. Angela Hurd again shows a melancholy view of Virginia with patterns of quiet, undulating fields and hills, with the starkness of simple hill life suggested in a group of bare houses. The consistent quality of her work, beginning to be frequently noticed in local exhibitions, denotes a new personality in depicting Washington views.

Children's paintings in the north gallery at the league now show paintings by the league's own children students, under the direction of Margaret Casey Gates. A consideration beyond amusement is demanded of observers by the paintings because they reveal not only delightful imaginative quality, but also consistent application of principles of design and color and paint quality. The work is entirely in oil, and some of the results in clarity of color are remarkable.

Especially in Robert Kling's large still life is this seen. A large opalescent green jar is placed against a deep dark red background and the study in forma and detail is worthy of a more mature artist. The subject matter ranges from "Hansel and Gretel" walking through a forest to the gingerbread house, painted by Edith Christensen, through a Matisse-like "Enchanted River" by Peggy Wilson, to "Ben Gunn's Treasure Cove," by Grant Code, jr. "Rapunsel in the Tower," and a still life by Hilda Christensen are powerful little paintings. None of the children are over 12 years of age, and in the whole, their work is refreshingly clean and bright.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

HIS EARS BURN.

M. G. writes: My 10-year-old son has trouble on cool days with one ear getting red. This lasts for about two hours and irritates him. He never has the trouble in summer-time.

REPLY.

The boy has some disorder of the vasomotor nervous system.

SHINGLES.

T. J. R. writes: Kindly publish cause, preventive and remedy, and average duration of shingles.

REPLY.

Shingles is herpes, a kind of fever blister. It is caused by an infection of the nerve roots by a virus or some microbe. As a rule, the pain leaves in a week or two and the eruption is healed by another week. Soothing salves are applied locally. The various salicylic preparations internally ease the pain. Physicians are trying out some newer methods, some of which promise to be better than the old ones.

BLOOD PRESSURE.

L. F. D. writes: Which is more dangerous to health—high or low blood pressure?

REPLY.

High blood pressure is much more liable to cause or to be asociated with organic diseases and to cause death. Low blood pressure is more likely to cause symptoms and some functional disorders.

RINGWORM.

Mrs. C. E. D. writes:

1. What is ringworm eczema?
2. Is it hereditary?

REPLY.

1. An eruption caused by ringworm.
2. No.

The location of the infection is a matter of great importance. If in a hairy area one treatment succeeds; if in a smooth area another is called for.

Cercle

The Cercle des Precieuses Ridicules was received Wednesday evening by Mme. Ross Johnson and M. Henri Lazard. The meeting was opened by the president, M. William J. Wallis. As the first number on the program Mlle. Laurette Martin gave a piano solo, "Chant d'amout," by Liszt. Mme. Manuel Cambouri recited a poem, "Le soir d'une bataille," by Leconte de Lisle, and Mme. Gaston de Bouy followed with "Les Djinns," by Victor Hugo. M. Elwood Backentoss continued the program with two piano solos—"Etude de Concert in D major," by Rubinstein, and "Pierrette," by Chaminade.

Mme. Camille Hindmarsh followed with a reading, "Un cas d'amnesie," by Miguel Zamacois. Five vocal solos were then given by Mlle. Lavinia Darve: "Revenez, Amour," by Lully; C'est l'extase," by Dubussy; "Ariette," by Vidal, and "Gavotte de Manon" and "Je t'aime," by Massenet. The piano accompaniment was played by M. Elwood Backentoss. M. Henri Lazard closed the program with two recitations—"La petite chose," by Revel, and "Les ecrevisses," by Jacques Normand.

G. A. R. Ladies.

Two card parties are being planned Wednesday for the benefit of the William E. Beck Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R. They will be held at the home of Mrs. Frank Armstrong, 3721 Livingston street, Chevy Chase, one in the afternoon and one at night. At the regular meeting Wednesday at the home of the president, Mrs. H. H. McKee, fifteen new members were voted into the circle. They will be initiated at the meeting, March 22.

Medical Society

Dr. Lucile Dooley presented a paper on her work in the clinics in Vienna, Austria, at the last meeting of the Women's Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

Dr. May D. Baker presided at the meeting, which was held Tuesday at the Ambassador Hotel. Dr. Katherine G. Symmonds was hostess.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

THERE is hope for the poets in the news that some of the broadcasting companies are going to experiment in radio readings of famous poems following the good example of the British companies which have found this procedure very popular.

One of the poems which have received wide acclaim after its reading was Browning's "Andrea del Sarto." Such poems, more or less conversational in type, lend themselves very well to the radio as a medium.

Of course, there is a type of poetry which might be considered as being almost exclusively for the eye-minded and the reading of which would probably not be very successful over the radio.

Yet the publicity given to our poets, no matter, what may be its nature, is of real value for these step-children of literature, always the Lazarus at the gate of well-being begging for the crumbs from the tables of the successful timely topics writers whose works hardly last the lifetime of the rag paper on which they are printed.

Wilfred Gibson, himself a contemporary poet of parts, recently declared that poetry in the modern world is a prime necessity because the poet crytsallizes his own and other people's experiences and thus gives form and definition to life.

One can not but marvel at the foresight of the British in things literary as in other regards. Instead of letting the manuscripts of their men of letters creep into private hands and collections they early become tucked away in the British Museum to be preserved for future generations and for all the people.

For example, the British Museum has recently placed on display one of its recent acquisitions, a selection from the original manuscript of the "Forsyte Saga."

The death of George Moore, following so closely upon that of John Galsworthy, saddens all who are interested in modern literature. One by one the elder statesmen, so to speak, of letters are leaving us for Valhalla.

Glancing over the field of those who are left we find but three really outstanding names in Britain, Wells, Kipling and Barrie, and they are not novelists per se, their activities taking in an even wider scope.

Galsworthy's death marks the ending of a period that while not so brilliant as that of the Victorian school of fiction, still had much to commend it.

Moore lived entirely for his art and therefore he had to face much hostile criticism, the universal lot of those who dare to be a trifle different from their fellows. Yet there is a wealth of good material from his pen which will secure his fame and already the posthumous applause is arising from many anvils whereon hammers of dislike had been evident during his lifetime.

Minute Reviews.

Fraught with youthful enthusiasm and the power to induce high adventure, Elliot Merrick has given us an unusual book in "True North" (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York). Through the pages of this book we are taken to the wilderness of Labrador.

There, with a song in his heart and a real appreciation of the human things of life, which he evidently experienced far from the maddening crowds, then in the humanity-thronged cities, this writer has given us a rare insight into that far northland.

The life of trapper as Mr. Merrick saw it is vividly outlined and would appeal to only those who really have a call for far places.

Fifty years of life in Madrid carries us through romance and exciting experience and picturesque manners and customs in "Life and Manners in Madrid," by Charles E. Kany (University of California Press).

Life under the Bourbon kings and the perpetual study between ardent nationalists and Francophile Spaniards has been chosen for the purpose of study by the author of this book.

We are struck by the fact that the author has applied himself less to the artistic and literary originality of that time than to the criticism and human trends.

This is a most painstaking and serious work, and the author only touches a lighter vein when he injects into some incidents of the guild system with its factors contributing to the decadence of Spanish industry.

E. F. Henson gives us an intimate view of ourselves today which may please or displease us, depending on the attitude of mind with which we peruse "As We Are; A Modern Revue," just off the press of Longmans, Green & Co., New York.

In this attempt, more or less successful, to hold the mirror of ourselves before our eyes, he has combined a humorous appreciation of our failings but has rather glossed over our virtues.

The arrangement of this book is original, for it begins with a novel and ends with what might be termed a treatise. It opens with the parable of an English landowner's house and a London flat. He is fair to both and fair to occupants and frequenters of both. Of course he writes only for the thinking who can themselves draw the lessons from the parable and does not mean to draw a diagram of what he is trying to convey, at all.

A book in the modern vein, with all the vagueness of sequence and the subtle emotion places the "Brass Cannon," by Charles Allen Smart (W. W. Norton & Co., Inc., New York), in the list of current fiction of the month. The story is centered about two modern young New Yorkers who have a most casual manner of arranging their lives. This prevails in their relations to their friends and an intenseness of not being intent on getting anywhere in particular which pervades all books of this kind. It is not an easy book to read despite the curiosity which it excites in the reade'r mind how the author will end it all.

P. E. O. Sisterhood

The committee for the month, with Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham, chairman, Mrs. F. B. Curtis, Mrs. Percy Gibbon, Mrs. H. H. McKeever, Mrs. Caroline B. Stephens and Mrs. E. E. Siggers, received the members and guests in the Calvary Methodist Church, on Columbia road, on Tuesday. After a two-course luncheon served in the dining hall, all assembled in one of the parlors for the business session, with Mrs. Edward T. Lomas presiding, in which the usual course was followed.

The subject for the study hour was "Maryland," with Mrs. Cunningham in charge. Mrs. Stephens introduced the guest speaker, Miss Alice Heaven, whose subject was the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal with its history. Mrs. Gibbon told of the land grant by Maryland to the District of Columbia, and Mrs. Siggers spoke of the earliest settlers of the State.

The Maryland State flag was exhibited and Mrs. Robert Young, 1826 Newton street northwest, was the only member present who was born under that flag. With Mrs. Cunningham at the piano, the meeting was closed with the singing "Maryland, My Maryland."

Guests from other States were: Mrs. Edward Conger, Chapter D. R. Adel, Iowa; Mrs. Learoux, Chapter T. Hoquiam, Washington State, and Mrs. Grace Kies Swiggert, Chapter H, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mrs. Harmon explained the summer round-up with physical examinations for prekindergarten children, which will follow the examinations of kindergarten and first grade children, and which will occur probably in May. Announcement was made of a series of lectures in sociological economic problems—an adult education series—being given under the auspices of the District schools. These classes meet two and three evenings a week at the McKinley High School, Second and T streets northeast. The various lectures are given by outstanding men and women, and are free.

ELIOT.

NATIVITY.

The list of patrons and patronesses for the Parent-Teacher Association's annual St. Patrick's Day card party is ready for publication. Because of the very active interest of parents in the success of projects promoted by the association for the entertainment and development of the children, the card party committee has been fortunate in enlisting the aid of 50 per cent of parents. These volunteers will assure those attending the party of attention to every minute detail for their entertainment and pleasure.

"Our Report Card," a play given by pupils of Miss Grace Curl's fifth grade on Friday at assembly was well attended by members of the association. Under Miss Curl's supervision, the children wrote and directed the play.

Thirty-five parents attended the Wheatley study group Wednesday when Mrs. Edna Rawlings led the discussion on "Dawdling" and "Repeating Commands."

Christmas greetings from China arrived at the school Monday from Mme. Y. C. Mie, a teacher and wife of the president of Tsing Hera College at Pieping, who visited Wheatley last year with her three children.

Twenty Wheatley teachers, with other association members, met in the school library Thursday, when Miss Julia Williamson, Girl Scout field director, gave a lecture on the "Art of Story Telling," illustrating her talk with fairy stories which demonstrated that ages, types and literature must be considered according to groups concerned.

Miss Florence C. Mortimer, principal, who has recently assumed the directorship of Girl Scout activities in District No. 1, announced that a tea would be held Tuesday at 3:45 at the school, where Mesdames Franklin, Horsford and Sturdevant will speak on "Badges and Merit Awards." SPRING COATS OF MANY VARIETIES CHALLENGE WOMEN IN CAPITAL STORES

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Attractive in Tailored Suit

Real Clothes Acumen Also Is Discerned in Mrs. Dall, Her Daughter.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE regime of the tailored suit is upon us. Even the shirtwaist and skirt, which seems so important a part of a tailored suit era is evidenced in the clothes of the women of the new democracy. But, of course, with the sense of the eternal fitness of things of the American women tailored suits are kept strictly in their places by the women who have put their stamp of approval on them and formal costumes for formal functions are the order of the day.

Led by Mrs. Roosevelt, many of the women who have come to Washington to be among us for four yeras or more, have chosen the chic strictly tailored suit as their everyday costume, always presenting that well-groomed aspect by which the American woman has set the informal daytime fashion for the rest of the world.

Just as there is a predominance of tailored clothes among the women of the new official circles, so is there thus far a lack of the sport effect in clothes, except for the younger members of the clans that have gathered here. As spring advances, however, the tailored suit will, without doubt, give place to the sport suit which seems so appropriate for daytime wear in the first warm days at our National Capital.

Worn by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived in Washington in a very well tailored black cloth suit, with which she wears soft white blouses, and a smart tailored straw hat and silver fox fur and has worn this costume on all occasions except for functions and the inaugural ceremony.

She found precedence for this type of everyday costume in Washington. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House and before and since has been noted for the smartness of her strictly tailored costumes and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge had a decided penchant for them.

Mrs. Robert Lansing, widow of the Secretary of State in the Wilson administration; Mrs. Joseph Davies, wife of a State Department official of the Wilson administration, and many other women of the "old Democracy" who will be prominent socially in this era, have a reputation for the style of their tailored clothes. When the strictly tailored coats are removed the short waist and skirt costume of the turn of the century appears. Mrs. Roosevelt is so slender that she can wear this combination without the tied in the middle effect so many women fear in this type of clothes combination.

Of course, as soon as the word has gone out that waists and skirts are in the fashion sun, young America immediately adopts them, to the despair of the plump girl and woman. One debutante has gone so far in the new fad that she had a skirt of black taffeta with which she wears an alluring tailored rose-colored taffeta shirtwaist, with a neat black man's string tie. To carry out the effect of the girls of the 1900s she wears on her waved hair a small black taffeta sailor perched quite high up on her head.

Daughter "Divinely Fair."

One is reminded of the old quotation, "a daughter of the gods, divinely tall and most divinely fair," when Mrs. Curtis Dall, the daughter of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt comes into a room. She has real clothes acumen and no doubt the jaunty Eleanor blue-striped tweed costume made in coat effect with bright buttons and long sleeves and scarf collar and a saucy cap-like hat to match, which she has been wearing for some of the daytime events will be hastily copied. On Inauguration Day Mrs. Dall attracted much attention by the lovely double silver foxes she wore on her black coat and the up to dateness of her soft hat with a shallow crown and soft brim.

Washington society rubs their eyes twice but are fast learning to know Mrs. Dall from her sister-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt. They look enough alike to be really sisters, both being of the tall, blonde type. Mrs. Roosevelt had on at one of the recent evening parties a dress of white grained silk with a bolero-like metal cloth jacket with wide sleeves.

Mrs. David Houston, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury in the Wilson administration, seemed to have a little court of her own no matter where she went during the past week. Mrs. Houston was one of the outstanding popular hostesses of the recent social history of Washington. She has her hair arranged in a modern manner, low and broad in the back and little curls about her face and wears a smartly up-to-date hat of black straw, with a dress of sheer black crepe with a vestee of lovely lace.

Costumed in Brown.

Mrs. Leigh C. Palmer, always handsome, looks particularly so in a costume of brown sheer crepe with a lighter colored chiffon scarf and modish brown straw hat, with which she wears a mink coat. Mrs. Howard Tucker, Mrs. Palmer's daughter, is also wearing a brown suit cut in sport effect, with a brown fur coat and shallow-brimmed brown straw hat.

Mrs. George Barnett was seen at the inaugural concert in a dress of shell pink chiffon embroidered in silver and made on long, graceful lines. With this she wore a white ermine coat.

Many of the governors and their wives took a second look at former Gov. Nellie Tayloe Ross of Wyoming, the petite blue-eyed vice chairman of the Democratic national committee, at the luncheon for the governors at the White House. Gov. Ross had on a costume of two shades of blue, the darker tone rather lighter than the popular Anna Blue and the lighter tone with more blue in it than Eleanor Blue. This costume is made with a cape, as so many of the costumes are, this spring.

Attention has also been directed at recent parties to the costume worn by Mrs. Norman Davis, who renewed old acquaintances in Washington this week. Mrs. Davis wore an ensemble of black velvet and a small black straw hat with a narrow brim.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who seems to be just as much at home in the White House in this administration as she was in the last one, is wearing a tailored costume of black cloth with a small black straw hat with a magenta bow on it.

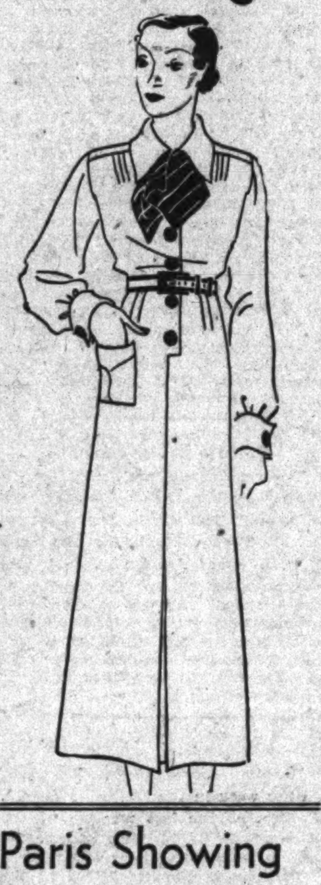
The straight tailored knitted tweed suit in black-and-white mixture, first on the left, is completed with a cotton striped seersucker mannish shirtwaist.

Next, a knitted diagonal in three-piece costume features a three-quarter cape with tucks to insure smooth shoulders and a scarf tie for convenience in removing the capelet.

Brown and beige broken-check tweed makes the sport suit with box jacket in the third figure. The pocket trim repeats the detail on the neckline closing.

The fine French rep suit in beige tone, shown at the extreme right, has this season's 35-inch jacket, made with dropped shoulder yoke and narrow shawl collar. The skirt is a slim, straight model. Bright colors are introduced in the scarf of beige, green and orange.



Men's Styles For Spring Dazzle Eyes

London, March 11 (U.P.).—Put on your smoked glasses, men, lest the colors dazzle you, and take a look at what you are expected to wear this spring.

The immortal George Bryan Brummell and his predecessor, Beau Nash, would have been put to shame by the riotous sartorial concoctions London's fine tailors are about to offer an unsuspecting world.

For three years now we have been told that the man of today is a drab, unattractive fellow, and that it was high time he began to adorn himself in the manner of his ancestors.

Well, the tailors of Savile Row have done their best—or worst. If women thought they were clever by exhuming their grandmothers' frills and furbelows, let them watch for the blossoming forth this spring of a new race of men—bedecked with a splendor borrowed from the Italian Renaissance, the courts of the Louis and a Colorado sunset.

Sports wear has perhaps the greatest spectroscopic range. Tennis flannels, first of all, will be in pastel green. Sweaters, sport shirts, golf suits and the like have a new range of colors called, in the faminine manner, coral, flame, wine, pompadour, aloma and old rose.

The biggest job in the world of men's fashions is to revolutionize hats. Too long, say the hatters, have men been clinging to the commonplace gray snap-brim model.

The new model looks like it might succeed. It is turned up all around, has a brim that curls slightly more on the sides than in front, and is somewhat long in shape. Its color will be green; at least, it will be most fashionable in that color.

The design of the new hat has taken six months to evolve, and embodies the idea of Bond street's best hatters. The Prince of Wales is expected to sponsor its introduction.

But look at some of the other things in the new collection of masculine finery—somewhat of the dress-gown creations in particular. Land of the Rising Sun and Rainbow Glory would be weak descriptions for them if they could be given names like the evening gowns of celebrated couturiers.

And to get down to fundamentals, shorts and other underthings will have a range limited only by the rainbow. The designers have been told to stop at nothing. They haven't. One pajama creation challenges the eye in a shade to be known as lipstick red.

Women Voters

A study group on the international legal status of women was announced by Mrs. Elizabeth Smith Friedman, chairman of the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters' committee on this matter. Mrs. Friedman said that all countries would be touched upon with special reference to Mexico, Central and South America.

Many league members functioned on the committee for Federal suffrage and national recognition of the District in National Government during the inaugural week-end.

Excelsior Club

A program of recitations by Mrs. Mattie Queen Ewing and poems read by Mrs. Henry F. Sawtelle were the highlights of the meeting of the Excelsior Literary Club Tuesday at the home of Mrs. E. V. Carr, 923 Decatur street northwest. Refreshments and a social hour completed the program.

The next meeting will be held March 21 at the home of the president, Mrs. Alice V. Creque, 1735 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Paris Showing Gay Flowered Printed Gowns

Paris, March 11.—"Spell your springtime chic with prints" is the rule around which Lyolene builds her 1933 styles.

Daytime frocks of gay flowered prints, evening gowns of printed crepe, scarfs and coat linings of flowered crepe or plaid cotton are featured in her display.

Ensembles combine a printed frock with a wool coat lined in the same gayly patterned crepe and shown in a dozen different color combinations. A frock of flowered crepe in tones of rose, gray and green appears with a gray wool coat lined with print; a smoke blue wool coat covers a dress of Pervenche blue crepe, sprinkled with white flowers, and a wrap of wood-brown wool accompanies a crepe dress flecked with yellow, orange and brown blossoms.

The coats of these ensembles follow simple lines, an almost straight silhouette being designed with a hemline about nine inches from the floor. They are generally unfurred, using small collars or scarfs as finish for their necklines. The frocks show many a frivolous quirk in their design, short cape sleeves, draped scarf necklines and accordion pleated frills being used to give a feminine touch.

Cotton, an outstanding fabric in the collection, is utilized for every hour of the day. Cotton coats and suits in heavy weaves of beige and gray, which resemble wool closely, white crepe cotton afternoon frocks and cotton evening gowns are all displayed.

Beige cotton coat, designed along straight lines and finished with a simple collar, lined with green and copper plaid taffeta and worn with a dress trimmed in the same plaid, while another cotton coat of black and white pebbled weave has a matching frock trimmed with bright red touches.

Cotton organdies and plaid ginghams are widely used for both frock trimmings and coat linings. A red wool coat lined with red, white and black plaid gingham is worn with a matching skirt topped by a blouse of the same gingham. Neutral-toned lightweight wool frocks have scarfs lined with bright-hued gingham and black crepe frocks have bodices touched with white organdy frills. A cotton evening gown of white Swiss eyelet embroidery designed with puffed shoulder sleeves and a full skirt is among outstanding gowns in the spring style display.

Woman's Clinic

The treasurer, Mrs. Edgar T. Brown, reported funds received from a recent benefit card party given at the clinic as helpful in "balancing the budget" of the clinic.

Smart Sports Wear Shown In Bright Blue

By DARE.

Let's just be very concise about this, to be real helpful to you, and not express much opinion one way or the other, shall we? By dividing the new spring materials into groups, putting cotton and linen in one, silk in another and wool in a third, I think I can be the most helpful.

In this group there is plenty doing. Let's see, shall we start with pique? Yes, because it fashions dresses, blouses, separate skirts, hats, collars, gloves and belts, and all very smartly, this season. A good material to look at for summer, too, having a body that launders well, does not shrink nor crush a lot and is modish.

Not only in white, but there is evidence of much interest in colored pique for blouses and for trimming on white. And the smartest color in this seems to be Copenhagen blue—although there is a lot of discussion on just what Copenhagen blue is—it being shown differently on every official color card! Anyhow, it's a bright blue, and smart for sports wear, especially in pique.

Linen in combination with lightweight pique is likewise smart and effective. In plain colors or in stripe or in dot motif. Especially nice, this, for beach dresses! And the striped pique that was so fashionable for winter cruising shows every evidence of being extremely popular for this summer. These stripes seem to be in every width and in every color—and remember that they give slenderness when worn up and down, and make one seem heavier when worn from left to right—either way being quite, quite smart.

Then we have broadcloth in this cotton group, both printed and plain. Even a shantung-effect broadcloth is popular, as it has been subjected to shrinking and, presumably, won't do what shantung does. Still this doesn't seem to make shantung any the less popular, particularly in the monotone colors. Just shrink it before you make it up; that's all. Shantung is about the only really smart cotton fabric that can be worn for city summer wear, and in gray and grege and beige, not to mention navy blue and darker shades of brown and coffee, it is excellent for just this.

Gingham tissues are following close upon the success of ginghams and are indeed girlish and delightful. A printed broadcloth with a surface decoration of embroidery is interesting, too. And speaking of embroidery, embroidered batiste is very popular for trimming, for summer dresses and for lingerie. It is embroidered all over in the weave and charming indeed.

Now let's look at wool, especially for spring, though many a lightweight wool will wear the summer long. The weave seems to be the important thing, and there is such a variety of woolen weaves that one can't even begin to enumerate them. See them for yourself and know that in wools, checks, plaids and knitted effects, the latter especially in jersey, are good. These checks are in every imaginable size, from pin checks to 3-inch ones (for trimming only).

The soft-haired wools are especially chic now, and lovely for spring. They are in spring shades of off yellow, or natural; in fact, pastel colors in general. Navy, gray and beige are perhaps the most popular. Gray is combined in all sorts of ways with white in the weave. Checks present unusual color contrasts, leaving the black and white to former glory. And a new wool with a crepey surface is expected to wear well into summer, as the wool georgettes did last season.

To digress, let me warn you that the woolen weaves are so delightful and so lovely in themselves, that they are adaptable only to the simplest tailoring—and seldom lend themselves to trimming. For this reason the home dressmaker does well to thoroughly investigate woolen weaves, patterns, weights and designs, before she buys—and then to buy and make herself many chic outfits of them!

And here I am almost at the end of this—in fact, I think I am at the end—and will have to continue this next week with the silk story! The cottons and linens and wools are enough for today, if you study them. So watch next week's fashion letter for spring silks.

Marietta Park

The March meeting of the Marietta Park Women's Club was held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Horning, 439 Oneida place northwest, and was presided over by Mrs. Stanley D. Reed. The assisting hostesses were Mrs. Thomas Murphy, Mrs. Conrad Nix and Mrs. William Shea.

The speaker was Gen. Amos A. Fries. He gave some interesting information on the war debt situation.

The literary chairman, Mrs. I. L. Stormont, has arranged a visit to the Folger Shakespeare Library for Tuesday. Mrs. J. Raymond Miller was appointed chairman of the entertainment committee and chose as her assistant Mrs. Lawrence Gross.

Tiny Dinner Hats Create Paris Furore

Paris, March 11 (A.P.).—A little evening hat to wear with cocktail or dinner costumes has taken the smart world by storm.

Parisians apply the rule to all except the most formal evening array, even though the chapeaux worn may be so small they reveal more than half the coiffure.

Paillette berets, horsehair turbans and velvet circlets are chosen to harmonize with the rest of the costume and worn aslant on a perfectly coiffed head in a manner designed to display much of the coiffure.

Veils appear almost universally with these new evening hats. Lacy horsehair films which stand away from the face in a pert circlet, and soft black nets which shadow the eyes are often used as the formal finishing touch.

With it she wears a black velvet dinner gown with the long, tight sleeves slashed several times and the neckline threaded into a red coral necklace. Her black gloves are cuffed with deep puffs of coral-red chenille.

Another smart continental wears with a black lace dinner gown a tiny black horsehair beret topped with two turquoise-blue aigrets, and a third chooses as accent for a black and white satin frock a little white straw toque finished with a filmy black nose veil.

The "velvet circle hat" is one of the outstanding contributions to the evening chapeau mode. It is made of three velvet circles of three harmonizing shades of the same color worn about the head like a halo and leaving the top of the head bare. Three shades of red, three shades of blue or black and white combinations are the models most often chosen.

Cotton Much Used For Evening Wear

Cottons attain increased prominence, particularly for evening. Linens are equivalently important for daytime. Cotton blouses are an expression of the trend.

In silks classic weaves reclaim their prestige. Satin stages a conspicuous comeback. Prints are universally favored both for day and evening. Synthetic yarn weaves have new promotions.

Casaquin Blouse Meeting With Favor

The casaquin type of blouse receives greater attention. Separate swagger coats in fancy fabrics are strongly indorsed. Gloves in novelty fabrics, are the leading accessory. Costume jewelry makes a new bid for attention. Dresses with related long coats, jackets or capelets—often contrasting in fabric and color, are extensively shown.

Navy Is Leading Daytime Color

Embroideries are introduced in many varied fashion types.

In woolens two types are cited as new—fancies and smooth monotones. Navy is the leading daytime color, often, as with black, adding white. Misty blues are first for evening wear.

Light Tones Popular for Spring Coats

New York, March 11.—Let the feeling of spring get into your veins and a hatred for even your very best winter costumes stirs you to action and sends you scurrying out on a window shopping expedition, at least.

There is something about spring—as the poets attest—but they are by no means the only ones who can express it. What about those lovely rhapsodies in blue the shop windows offer—and those hats—spring songs without words?

Naturally clothes are going to reflect the natural gayety which comes with the assurances of dark days behind us. There is something about spring that clamors for a navy blue—something, too, that draws one's attention to gray and to beige and all the shades between. String and twine and cord are attractive colors, and you discover in your morning oatmeal, taken with or without cream, just the color scheme you have been striving for.

There are scores of very elegant-looking coats in these light tones, some with and some without capes. There are just as many more utilitarian blue ones which like the neutrals, may be worn with colored accessories. You will probably prefer a hat that contrasts rather than one that repeats the color of your costume, although you may find it better to have the costume color introduced for or on the hat.

One of the nice details of many of the most attractive coats is that they have unexpected treatment about the wrist section, dressmaker details such as shirring, cording or fine pleats. It is also a relief to know that many coats and some dresses have a bloused line—a more kindly line, unless one is built like a sapling.

The dramatic entrance of red deserves a line. It contributes mightily to the chic of the spring ensemble and may be introduced as a monotone or in one of the prints which leave no one in doubt as to their being a 1933 edition.

Women Are More Foot-Conscious

Now that the open-cut-out sandals have had their innings, shoe-minded authorities contend that the most important thing accomplished by them was to make women more foot-conscious, as all too few feet were sufficiently good looking to stand extreme exposure.

Now, after the several seasons of sandals, the average smart woman takes just as good care of her feet as she does of her hands, keeping them well pedicured and the nails properly lacquered.

Telephone Wires On Spring Clothes

Belts and necklaces of twisted flat coils of the copper toned wire appear as ornaments for spring clothes. Most of them are worn with brown or dark blue costumes.

Lengths Unchanged In Daytime Skirts

Daytime skirt lengths are generally unchanged, averaging 10 or 11 inches from the floor. Sometimes slightly longer.

Necklines remain high cut, but emphasize draped bateau effects.

Philo Classics

Mrs. H. J. Harris received the members of the club in her home, 1857 Lamont street northwest, on March 3. Luncheon was served and after the social hour the business meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. George Lewis Peckham. The president extended greetings from the club to Mrs. Harry E. Ammerman, a new member.

The paper for the afternoon was prepared by Mrs. Milton H. Fohrman. The subject was "Hermione and Her Companions." The leader for the play assigned characters and Act 2 of "Winter's Tale" was presented.

Tweeds in New Weaves Have Rag Rug Effects

By THE MEANDERER.

SPRING coats have patiently waited for the consideration they deserve, while spring suits have been absorbing the larger share of attention. Coats may well have been patient, for a coat in the wardrobe is inevitable, and a suit may be optional.

Coats for the festive hours, coats for workaday wear and coats acceptable anywhere are finding enthusiastic buyers. Selection may be made from an extensive variety, light or dark, be-furred or plain.

Newer in fashion than any the Meanderer found was a coat made in beige or gray with fur trimming only on the sleeves. Its novelty lies in the use of blends of two fox furs in the sleeve bands. On the gray coat blue and gray fox are used and on the beige, well-shaded beige and cream-colored fox make agreeable harmony.

Tweed coats in new weaves, resembling nothing so much as the old hit and miss rag rug weaving effects, have Chanel fabric labels. Colorings in these new tweed coats are more appealing than in any tweeds the Meanderer has found. In one pattern brown, chartreuse and beige make the pattern, and another is of blue and gray shadings. Clever things may be done with these coats in the choice of harmonizing one-color dresses and accessories.

Dustproof, wrinkle-proof, moisture-proof are some all-wool coats selling for $17.50 in a department store on Seventh street. Lines are modish in these coats, so that with their durable materials and practicability their price is decidedly reasonable.

Chalky softness in their colors, although the colors are bright, recommends several coats in spring displays by a Fourteenth street third-floor style salon. This softening of bright colors is managed by the use of woolly, loosely woven tweed. The yellow, blue or green coat in this material is not difficult to wear, and is indubitably smart. Striped or plaid contrasting scarfs contribute also to the charm of these coats.

Blue and white tweed in rather dashing pattern and style, with printed gay blue and white lining and scarf in the same material, make a coat with great appeal and low cost of $16.50. This may be found in an F street ready-to-wear shop.

The dolman sleeve is revived after years of extinction. This wide-sleeve effect is achieved by making the armhole waist deep and the sleeve usually is cut in one with the upper part of the coat. The wide, full line of the dolman may be preferred by women who would not choose the cape fashions.

A coat for those who want touches of grey but not a whole grey garment, is showing in a popular F street ready-to-wear shop. The coat has a round, grey yoke and scarf above a dark blue coat body. The price of this interesting coat, with smart practical lines is just $15.

Beware small hats; larger hats are here. In a new hat shop on an F street corner, the Meanderer spotted these larger hats, with graceful wide brims. These daring larger hats, using their temerity to appear among the diminutive millinery, are of hand-ironed Ballibuntl, and are priced from $5.00 up. They are black, navy, red, beige, brown or grey.

Horsehair veils encircle or sometimes only partly surround, many of the spring hats. This stiff little hair veil usually is narrow, having the effect of extending brims in shadowy fashion. Hair veils have the advantage of durability and of creating definite line.

Capes may be bought separately. The Meanderer learned that a plain or tweed cape may be chosen apart from a suit or dress and in combination with something already in the wardrobe may contribute to a modish spring costume.

Envelope bags in a new leather known as alligator calf, are blue, gray and red. They are among the most popular bag types the Meanderer examined this week. Bags of crepe silks to match almost any costume may be chosen from among the display I found. The silk bags are in pouch shape, with gold frames and chain handles.

Organdy bows trim some lacy straw hats of black, to complement the many black frocks that have organdy trimmings. These perky straws are showing in a Connecticut avenue shop.

Edinburgh brown suede, and a brilliant turquoise blue suede make some sport hats with strong style appeal, also showing in the Connecticut avenue hat shop.

New, crisp ribbons, known as Palm Beach ribbons are in red and white, green and white and black and white stripes.

"Angel skin" ribbons are something I learned about from a most attractive white-haired woman shopper at a big department store's ribbon counter. She was hunting a bit of ribbon to replace an ermine ornament on a hat. She chose "angel skin" ribbon in white, about 2 inches wide. This ribbon cuts without fraying and holds shape most satisfactorily when fashioned into ornaments or bows.

Much Lending To Borrowers Is Being Done

Girl Scouts Are Delighted in Mrs. Roosevelt's Interest in Organization.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE spirit of courage and service which has animated the women of all the historic periods of the history of this Nation prevails among the women of the City of Washington during the stressful times of the bank holidays. This spirit is evidenced by the manner and eagerness with which the women formed in line to do their best to make the trying time as easy as possible and to lead in turning a cheerful face to the world. Many of the women's organizations who have been doing their part for the unemployed and the needy within their midst made these charges their first concern. Most of these organizations are looking after families in a quiet manner without even announcing the names of the people they are benefiting to the general club membership. Sometimes it is one of their own number they have found it necessary to aid, or some neighbor.

It has been learned that many of the organizations have formed special committees to see that their own members have funds with which to provide themselves or their family with the necessities of life, and there is much lending and borrowing on the part of these women.

There was real delight expressed in Girl Scout circles last week when Mrs. Roosevelt showed her interest in the local and national movement by attending the meeting held yesterday by the Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia in celebration of the twenty-first birthday of the National Girl Scouts, at Pierce Hall.

The huge birthday cake, of which Mrs. Roosevelt partook, was furnished by the Scouts of Troop 42-B and the 21 candles were lighted in memory of Mrs. Juliette Low, who organized the Girl Scouts 21 years ago.

When Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and, like all other official women interested in war service work and in encouraging young and old alike in doing their bit, she often met Mrs. Juliette Low, who came to Washington on Girl Scout business in those days. Mrs. Roosevelt was one of the group of official women who sometimes visited the National Service School for Girls, which inaugurated a special training course for national service for Girl Scout leaders and had one company composed entirely of these progressive American girls of war time days.

There is no party line in the interest being taken in the news that Ruth Hanna Simms, formerly Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick, of Illinois, has again entered politics as a member of a State-wide speaking campaign in the interest of the Republican candidate in her new home State, New Mexico. As a member of the House of Representative in her years as a leader in women's political and suffrage movements, Mrs. Simms has won the respect of the women of the Nation, all of whom like to know that the women who have gained a foothold in national affairs are keeping it.

Take-Offs and Landings

By HARRIS B. HULL

William W. Howes.

A CONSERVATIVE Democratic attorney pledged to a program of economy, with no connections whatsoever in aviation today, and yet professing an absolute belief and confidence in the industry, will for the next four years, at least, be the principal administrator of the Nation's much-argued and investgated air mail system.

Such is William Washington Howes, of Huron, S. Dak., new Second Assistant Postmaster General, who, with the passing of power to the Democratic administration, succeeds Warren Irving Glover and becomes almost overnight a key man in today's aviation picture.

Appreciating the troubled situation which now surrounds the administration of air mail and the award of new contracts and urged on all sides to appoint this or that man with a wealth of background in aviation, the Democratic powers decided to select for this important post a man with only a proven record as an administrator and with no interest or prejudice in the industry. Mr. Roosevelt's appointment of Mr. Howes followed.

William Washington Howes was born at Tomah, Wis., February 16, 1887. He was educated at the University of Minnesota and the University of South Dakota. He is married to the former Hazel Donna Gordon, of Winterset, Iowa. They have one daughter, Mary Senate, who attends National Seminary Park here.

Mr. Howes was Democratic State senator in South Dakota in 1916. He was Democratic candidate for governor of his State in 1920. In 1922 he became State chairman for his party. He was elected State's attorney in 1926 and 1928. He is Democratic committeeman for South Dakota and is vice chairman of the Democratic national campaign committee. A delegate to the Democratic national conventions of 1924 and 1932, he spent seven months at New York Democratic headquarters before coming here and took an active part in the speaking work in the campaign, having been one of the Roosevelt floor leaders at the Chicago convention.

With only three days' experience in his new work Mr. Howes last week emphasized that he is engaged at the present time in studying air mail law and acquiring background.

At the same time his conversation leads even the most casual observer to conclude that he has already spent some time in flying over domestic air lines, that he has acquired a good working knowledge of the flying business from a number of different angles, that he has more than a passing knowledge of the reports and investigations that have been made on air mail in the past year, in short, that he fully appreciates the job that is his for some time to come.

Said Mr. Howes in his first press conference last week:

"As far as the $4,000,000 cut in the domestic air mail appropriation is concerned I believe that every Government agency must retrench and practice economy, and this cut is only in general line with the general Democratic policy.

"I have talked with the chairman of the House Postoffice Committee, Representative James M. Mead (Democrat), of Buffalo, N. Y., and I feel sure that this office will be able to effectively cooperate with Congress.

"As I study the air mail map I see what apparently are several inconsistencies. Further study will determine if this is the case. Once I am more familiar with the workings of the department here I will go over the domestic lines in an effort to see that the best functioning air mail system is made available, giving adequate service to the greatest number of people.

"I am a great believer in competition. The more reputable bidders we have on whatever contracts we have to let, the better I will like it.

"I enter this work with no prejudices, or bias, of any sort. I appreciate the position of aviation in the scheme of national defense and will do my best to maintain that position."

Dobson, Mrs. Julia Wheelock, commander of the American Legion Department of Italy; Mrs. Janet English, of Virginia, and other guests. Representative and Mrs. Houston, of Honolulu, Hawaii, kindly invited the salon to visit his country.

Stag Dinner Saturday By Second Division Post

Post Commander Thomas Mason, jr., of Second Division post of the American Legion, has extended an invitation to the entire membership of the post to attend the annual stag dinner and entertainment of the Second Division Association to be held Saturday at the Cairo Hotel. The membership drive of the post has resulted in the receipt of over a hundred applications for membership to date. All new members accepted will be obligated at the next meeting and receive the degree from the post degree team, composed of Comrades C. I. Dawson, M. Folsom, T. Mason and E. F. Vallin.

Essayists to Get Medals From Jacob Jones Post

U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post advisory council met at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets, last Wednesday, with Comrades Kate K. Briggs, Mary Tatspaugh and Nelia Eichhorn as cohostesses.

The monthly meeting of the post will be held tomorrow evening at Thomas Circle Club. At this meeting the winners of the essay contest on George Washington, Fanye Kressin, of the Macfarland Junior High School, and Clifton B. Cates, jr., of the Powell Junior High School, will be awarded American Legion medals.

"Race Prejudice" Topic Of Talk This Afternoon

Dr. Charles Edward Russell will be presented by the Columbia National Forum at the Whitelaw Hotel Auditorium, Thirteenth and T streets northwest, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Internationally known as a journalist and an author, he is one of the founders and directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He will speak on "Race Prejudice," his world tours and long study of the various races of mankind fitting him especially for discussion of this subject.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE PLANNED BY D. A. V.

Mass Meeting Will Be Held Next Month in Interest of Campaign.

At the semimonthly meeting of the executive department of the Disabled American Veterans last Wednesday night, Department Junior Vice Commander Kehoe, chairman of the membership committee, submitted plans of his committee for a membership drive during the next 60 days. He announced that two cups will be awarded to the chapters showing the greatest gains in membership—the Commander Joseph Ashi Cup and another cup presented by Comrade B. C. McNeil.

The plans of Kehoe's committee embrace one appeal by letter to eligibles, two personal solicitation visits and a mass meeting, to be given under the auspices of the committee in April. At this meeting, the date of which will be announced later, there will be speakers who can present to the interested disabled veterans authentic information concerning all matters of interest to them.

Proposes Legislation.

The speakers will include members of Congress who will discuss the proposed legislation during the coming session which will affect disabled veterans; national legislative chairman, Capt. Thomas Kirby, who will also discuss the legislative situation; national rehabilitation chairman, Ralph Chambers, who will discuss rehabilitation, and such other speakers as may have information of interest to disabled veterans. Commander Ashi, in accepting the report of the committee, commended the excellent work thus far accomplished by Chairman Kehoe and his committee, and stated that during these trying times it was his sincere belief that all eligible disabled veterans should be members of one of the local chapters.

National Commander William Conley, who was in Washington for the inaugural ceremonies, left last Wednesday for a trip that will carry him through the various sections of New York and New England, visiting D. A. V. chapters and inspecting hospitals. Commander Conley will visit Buffalo, Syracuse, Saranac Lake, Albany, Boston, Providence, Hartford, New York, Newark, Philadelphia and Baltimore before returning to Washington on March 25.

Will Meet Wednesday.

Federal Chapter, No. 6, will hold its next regular meeting Wednesday night in the art galleries of the Sears-Roebuck Co., 1106 Connecticut avenue northwest, at which time 65 new members will receive the obligations. Federal Chapter now points to the admirable record of having obtained more than 100 new members since the first of the year, and to the additional honor of already having 45 members above the quota set for it by national headquarters. As several matters of utmost importance are to come before the meeting, Commander Jones requests all members to be present.

Department Commander Joseph Ashi urges all former servicemen and others having work to be done, or knowing where there exists an opportunity for a disabled veteran to find employment, such as repairing, cleaning and painting jobs about the home, of which there should be many during the coming spring months, to call Department Employment Officer John Arthur Shaw, at National 8472, Branch 141.

Commander Herbert Church of Ace-Rasmussen Chapter has announced the resignation of Earl G. Hendricks as adjutant of the chapter.

Chapter Is Organized.

Fourth District executive committeeman, Lee T. Turner, last week announced the completion of the organization of a D. A. V. chapter in Hagerstown. This makes four chapters now organized in Maryland, and Committeeman Turner hopes soon to be able to organize a State department. Baltimore, Cumberland and Annapolis now have organized chapters.

A meeting of the newly organized Falls Church chapter, George Washington, No. 20, will be held tomorrow night. Anthony M. Bellony is the acting commander. Election of officers will take place.

A meeting of the executive committee of the newly formed State Department of Virginia will be held next Saturday at Petersburg, Va.

Col. Charles Young Chapter will meet next Thursday in the Twelfth street branch of the Y. M. C. A.

Veteran Leaders Present at Supper

Louis A. Johnson Among Costello Post Guests at Inaugural.

Among veteran leaders who attended the Inaugural supper dance sponsored by Vincent B. Costello Post, No 15, of the American Legion, were National Commander Louis A. Johnson, former National Commander Henry L. Stevens, National Legislative Officer Col. John Charles Taylor, Department Commander Norman R. Landreau, of District of Columbia, and their wives. National Commander Johnson spoke briefly and complimented Post Commander Norman R. Grant on past achievements of Costello Post.

The burro, or "Democratic mule," which attracted considerable attention along the line of march with Costello Post inauguration day, was loaned to the post by C. M. Dunbar, a patient at Naval Hospital.

The post welfare officer has a limited amount of surplus clothing on hand, and any former service man in need of wearing apparel should get in touch with Comrade Pistorio at room 15, District Building.

McGroartyPost to Honor L. H. Guenther With Pin

Stephen P. McGroarty Post, of the American Legion, had its colors displayed at the military mass on Washington's birthday and in the inaugural parade. The regular color-bears, Comrades Anderson and Bissell participated in both "turn-outs," in their service uniforms as they are still in the regular Army and attached to the Washington arsenal detachment.

The next meeting of the post will be held at the Sears Roebuck Art Gallery Friday at 8 o'clock. At this meeting a past commander's badge will be presented to the junior past commander, Lewis H. Guenther.

2 CAPITAL GROUPS SELECTED TO TRAIN

62d Signal Troop and 80th Signal Company on Program for C. M. T. C.

By STAFF SERGT. A. S. De AGRO.

In a training program published by the Headquarters Third Corps Area, only two Washington organizations are designated to train C. M. T. C. this summer, the 62d Signal Troop and the 80th Signal Company. The training of Washington's young men of the infantry and field artillery will be conducted by units of the 79th Division, located in Eastern Pennsylvania. The cavalry at Fort Myer, Va., by the 308th Cavalry of Maryland and the coast artillery at Fort Monroe, Va., by the 510th Coast Artillery of Pennsylvania.

Training of organized reserve units with the citizens' military training camps imposes a twofold responsibility upon post and camp commanders and other Regular Army officers. First, to insure that the training given the C. M. T. C. is up to standard; and, second, that the organized reserve units receive every possible advantage to be derived from this form of training.

The inactive duty training of the units designated for training C. M. T. C. during the coming summer is being devoted to instruction which should enable the organizations to function as units in the actual command and training of the C. M. T. C. With this in mind, the Corps Area commander, Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, has directed that all positions from regimental to platoon commanders be filled by reserve officers and that all orders and all instructions of general application be transmitted through the proper chain of command of the reserve unit.

The Regular Army post commander retains, of course, his responsibilities as camp commander of both the components and details Regular Army officers in the usual number to act as supervisors and instructors. The regular officers permit and encourage the Reserve officers to exercise full responsibility and command, and will intervene as little as possible, consistent with proper training of both components. C. M. T. C. certificates of discharges will in all cases be signed by the camp commander. Camp administrative duties, such as adjutant, supply officer, &c., will be performed by regular officers.

The following new assignments effecting Washington Reserve officers are announced by local headquarters: Capt. Charles M. Neff, of 1812 Kearney street northwest, is assigned to the judge advocate general's section of the Eightieth Division Headquarters. Capt. Frederick S. Lee, of 2610 Upton street northwest, to the 313th Field Artillery, First Lieut. Sterling P. Eagleton, of 3625 S street northwest, to the Headquarters Company 160th Infantry Brigade, Second Lieut. Maurice C. Wilver, of 914 K street northwest, to the Eightieth Division Service Co., and Second Lieut. George C. Vaughn, of 3118 Eighteenth street northwest to the 320th Infantry. Lieut. Col. Frederick W. Franke, recently transferred to Washington, has been assigned to the 315th Field Artillery.

Victory Unit Dance Saturday.

Victory Unit, of the American Legion auxiliary, took part in the inaugural parade with their colors, a number of members marching. The unit's colors were carried by Miss Ella Mae Doleman and Mrs. Catherine Mills. The unit's St. Patrick's dance will be held Saturday at the Masonic Hall, Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast.

Centers Making Ready For Children's Festival

All community centers in divisions 1 to 9 throughout the city are engaged in preparations for the annual children's festival in May, at Central Community Center, in which 500 boys and girls are expected to participate, as is the custom of the department, under the direction of children's dance and drama group leaders. This year, prior to the city-wide festival, each center will stage its own community festival, presenting a different fairy tale, and in the festival at Central Center, each center will present its own fairy tale in abbreviated form, making a complete "fairy tale festival."

Dramatic activities in the centers in divisions 10 to 13 are developing rapidly among the adult groups, many of the drama leaders holding weekly forums with Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest at Franklin School Building. The D. C. Recreation Institute, at Garnet-Patterson Center, which holds regular Tuesday evening sessions this month, devoted largely to the interests of drama, will be addressed Tuesday at 8 o'clock by Denis E. Connell, speaking on "Amateur Play Production."

Leading events this week in the centers in divisions 1 to 9 are the week-end community program at East Washington Center, Seventeenth and East Capitol streets, Saturday night at 8 o'clock, featuring moving pictures, music and dancing, under the supervision of Mrs. L. W. Hardy, general secretary of the Community Center Department for these divisions.

Southeast Center, under the direction of Mrs. M. W. Davis, will feature this week a basket ball tournament under the direction of Jack Haas, between teams playing at Hine Building, Seventh and C streets southeast, and also on Friday at 9:30 p. m. there will be old-fashioned dancing in the Hine gymnasium, with banjo and violin music as accompaniment and a "caller-out" for the square dances, a popular custom of long ago.

Also on Wednesday evening at this center (Hine Junior High) at 7:30, citizens of the southeast section of the city are invited to rehearse with the Southeast Glee Club, under the leadership of Mrs. A. H. Bryde, the "sing" to be followed by a social evening of cards and games. At Buchanan Auditorium, Thirteenth and D streets southeast, which is included in Southeast Community Center, a young people's dance will be held Thursday at 9 p. m.

Thomson Center, Twelfth and L streets northwest, directed by Mrs. A. C. Driscoll, features Gaelic study groups on Thursday evening this week, the beginners at 7:30 under the direction of Miss Mary O'Sullivan, and the advanced group at 8 o'clock, directed by the Rev. James A. Geary, Ph. D. On Friday at 9 o'clock, a social dance for adults will be held under the instruction of Mrs. Jeannette P. Tolford.

Burroughs Center, Eighteenth and Monroe streets northeast, under the direction of Mrs. D. E. Middleton, will hold a dance and card party Saturday night at 8:30, for the young people and adults of the community, with music by the Vagabonds, and cards under the leadership of Mrs. Mirabel Lindsay.

At Langley Center, Second and T streets northeast, Mrs. Middleton announces a new group in contract bridge instruction, beginning Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

McKinley Center, Second and T streets northeast, directed by Mrs. A. L. Irving, announces a series of A. A. U. games this week, on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at 7 p. m.

All other centers operating under the direction of the Community Center Department will be open at their usual hours throughout the week, featuring the regular weekly activities, under experienced direction.

INAUGURAL PRAISE GIVEN TO VETER[illegible]

Led by Department Commander Oscar W. Hollingsworth and his official staff, the 15 posts of the District of Columbia were very well represented in the inaugural parade. The Overseas Band, Drum and Bugle Corps received very favorable comment from high ranking officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps for their fine military appearance and in the rendition of superb music. The Ladies Auxiliary of National Capital Post are receiving very commendatory remarks on their fine appearance in the parade.

During inauguration week over 300 members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars visited the department information booth maintained by the District of Columbia Department in Union Station. Many of these members were guests of the department at luncheons and dinners sponsored by the department. Comrade George Cummings, chairman of the reception committee, made special arrangements for the housing of several of the visiting comrades.

The department commander held a meeting composed of all post commanders in the department headquarters on Friday night to make plans for the coming Buddy Poppy Drive. Ways and means were discussed whereby the annual Buddy Poppy Drive will be a departmental affair in the future rather than a post project.

National Capital Post.

National Capital Post, No. 127, held an open house in Pythian Temple on March 4 to entertain the visiting comrades from the several States. Over a thousand people were present. The main hall was given over for a ball while in the lower hall refreshments were served.

Equality Walter Reed.

The entire membership is urged to be present at the next meeting on Thursday evening as the delegates for the next department encampment will be elected.

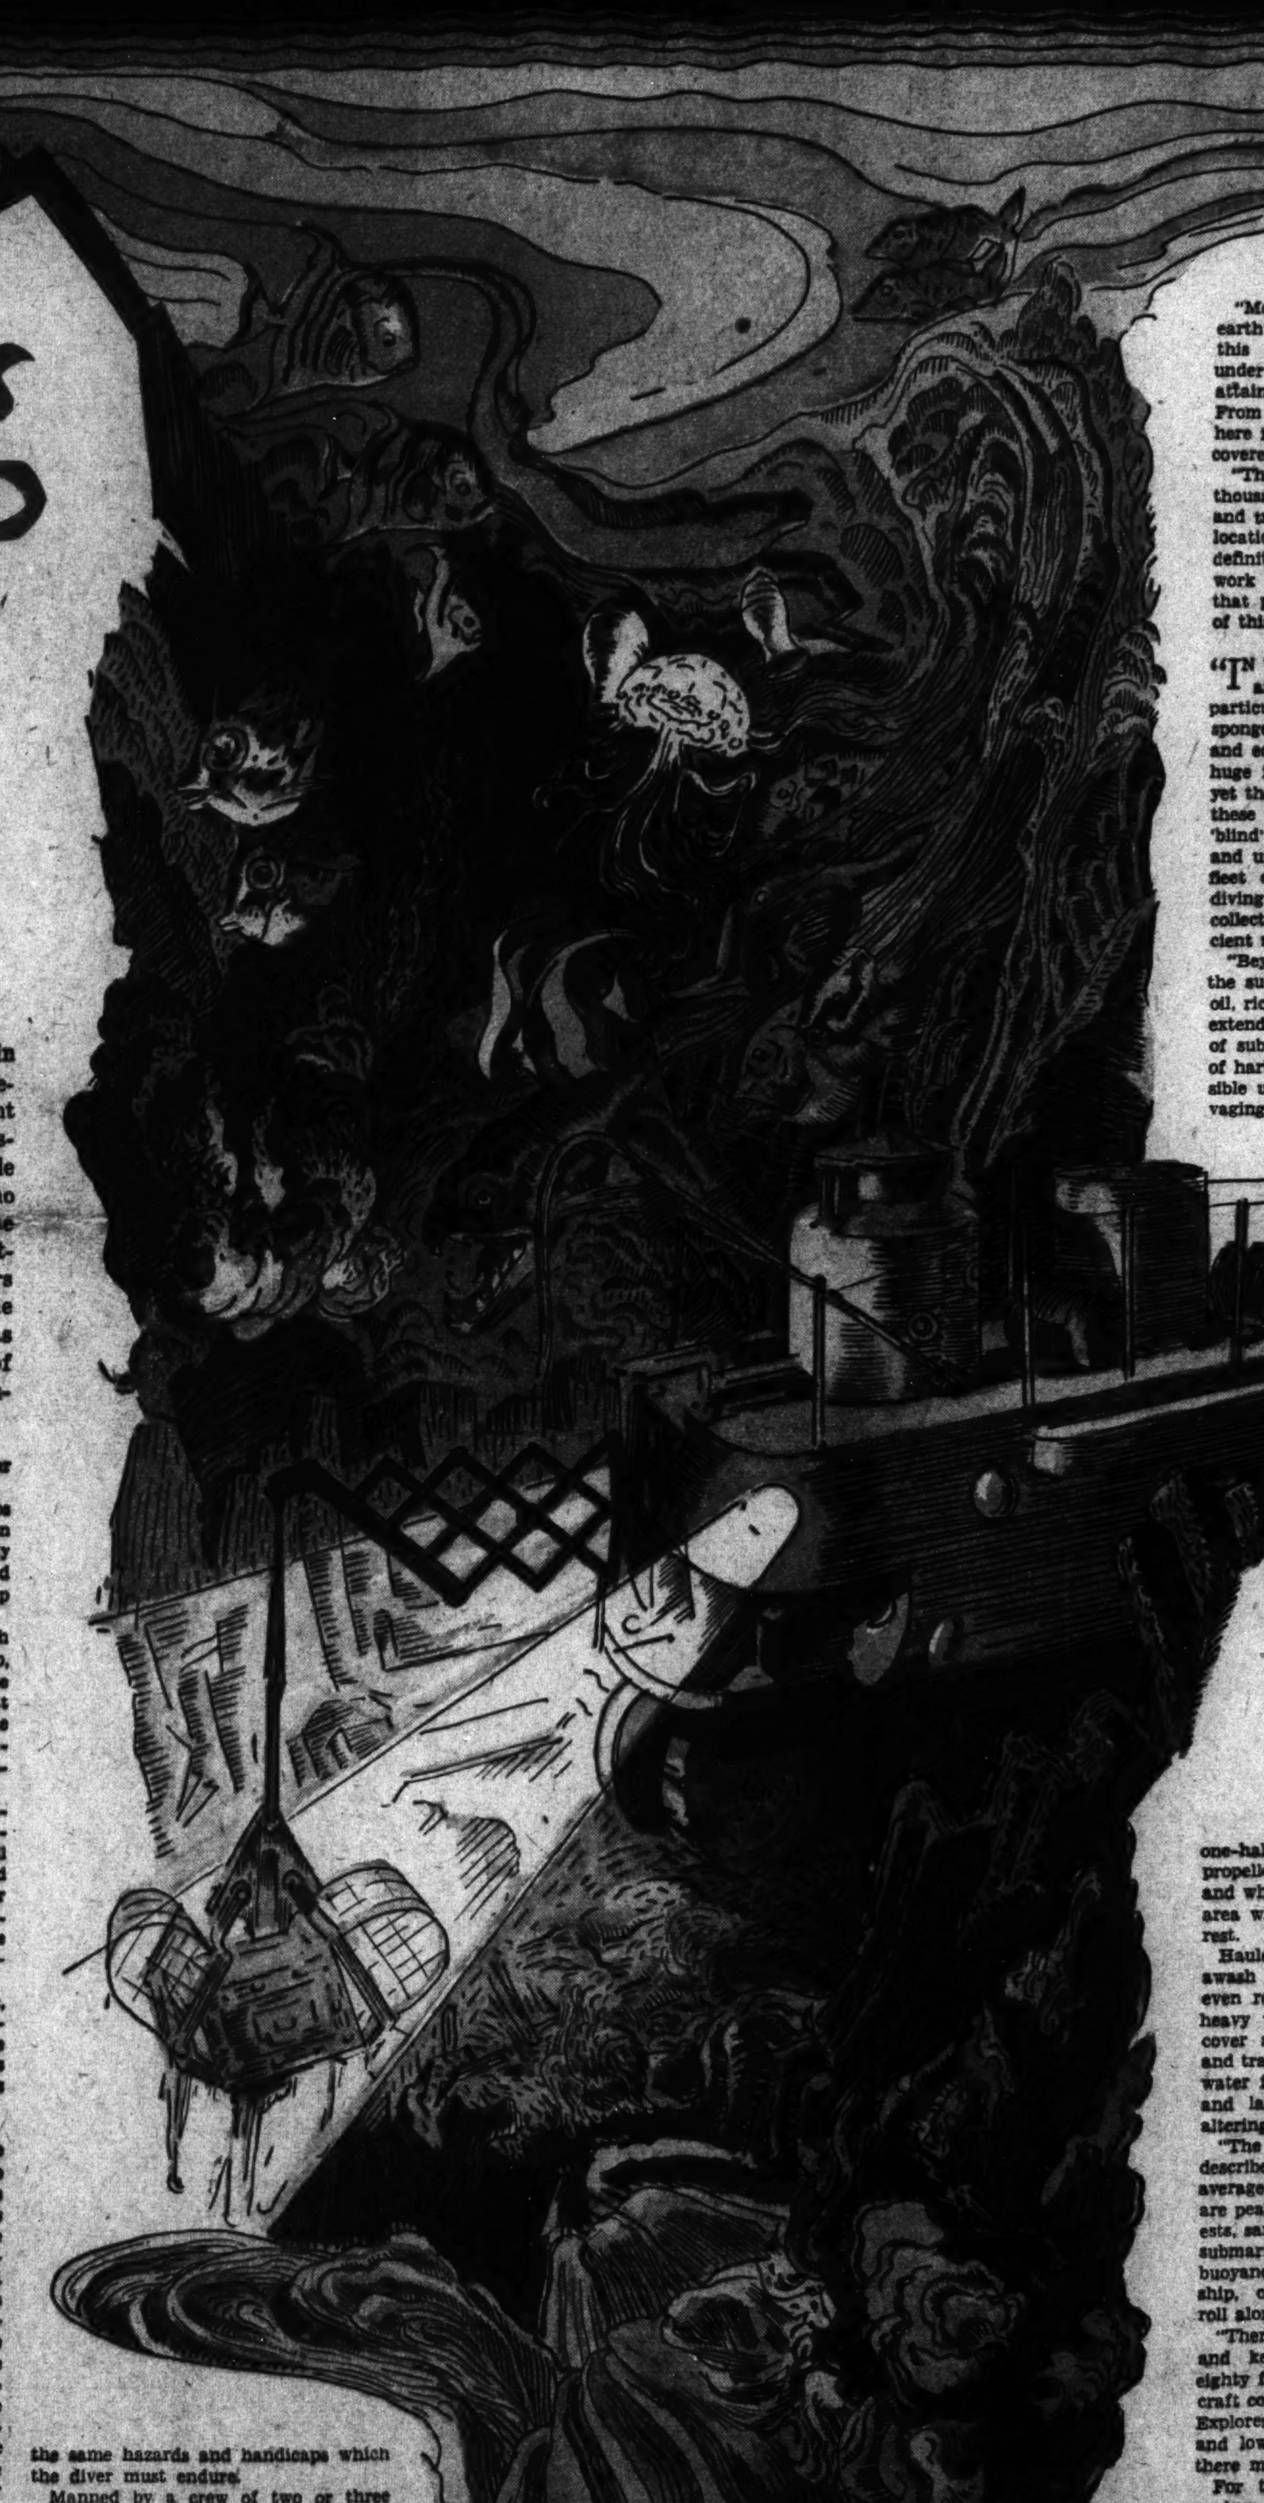
SECRETS of OCEAN DEPTHS REVEALED

New Submarine Invention Will Soon Make Passenger Excursions Into King Neptune's Domain a Possibility

By George Beck



WHEN Jules Verne wrote "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," in which men walked and worked on the bottom of the ocean beside a submarine they had left through a trapdoor, he little thought the day would soon follow when his dream actually would be translated into iron and steel. Jules Verne had never heard of a little boy 12 years old living along the oceanfront in Connecticut who read such inspiring yarns as "20,000 Leagues—" and waded into the water up to his waist to peer beneath the waves through a glass-bottom bucket of his own making. Simon Lake saw then the wonders of the world beneath the sea, and he turned his back to the sunshine and green grass of the upper world which his mother had said was far better for small boys, and has since given his life to a variety of methods to contact that deep, magic splendor of the submarine continent we ordinary people know so little about.

BUT that which was little more than a dream alike between Jules Verne and the youth, Simon Lake, yesterday, is a real fact today and promises deep-sea exploring of a thoroughly practical and efficient character on a vast scale.

The reality opens up entirely new possibilities for sub-sea survey, for salvaging and engineering operations, for locating sunken wrecks, for the harvesting of shellfish, pearl oysters, sponges and for the recovery of coal sunk in barges in channels and lakes.

Along the avenues of science, sub-sea studies will be given entirely new aids to cope with the dangerous depths, for actual observations of submarine life, photography, deep-sea shooting, the gathering of specimens and so on.

Holding a back-and-forth conversation over a telephone line with Dr. William Beebe, noted sub-sea explorer and scientist, who was at the moment wandering far below the waves of Long Island Sound, Simon Lake, aboard a mother ship on the surface, demonstrated for the first time to the public the revolutionary submarine which can plunge to a depth of 300 feet, then throw open a door into the bottom of the ocean bed, allowing divers to escape with ease.

Dr. Beebe peered through some of the twenty-two windows constructed with heavy glass in the main hull and conning towers of the submarine, which is appropriately named the Explorer, and found he was provided with ample vision due to powerful searchlights which flood the darkest waters with intense illumination.

THE high mark of efficiency, if not magic, was demonstrated in the baby submarine—only twenty-two feet long and six feet wide—when the bottom hatch in the steel hull was pushed open, permitting the large opening directly into the water. The water did not gush in to sink the craft and drown the crew as it would if a hole were chopped through the hull of a regular vessel. Instead, it remained right at the edge of the opening as calm as a mere puddle. The explanation of this unique performance is simple enough, according to Mr. Lake.

"Take a glass and submerge it in a basin," he related, "with the open end toward the water and the glass cannot fill; water cannot go up inside. A natural pressure of air within the tumbler holds the water out. Tilt the open end to one side under water and immediately the glass fills; the air pressure within the glass is allowed to escape the equal pressure of water against its mouth and, consequently, the water flows in as the air bubbles to the top.

"In the Explorer the same trick keeps the water out of the submarine when the bottom hatch is thrown open, only a far greater pressure of air is required to hold against the power of the deep sea."

Before Dr. Beebe opened the hatch he communicated with the surface ship, always connected with the submarine by cables and airlines, and asked that the air pumps be speeded up. He watched a gauge until the correct calculated pressure within the entire submarine had been reached.

Not satisfied with that alone, however, he opened the valve of a pipe extending from the bottom of the hull into the water. No water spouted through, as would happen if the air pressure had been miscalculated and insufficient—a mistake which could have been utterly fatal to Beebe and his companions had the hatch been opened.

In Long Island Sound, Dr. Beebe, cruising about on the flat, smooth bottom, was able to reach out through the opened hatch and collect numerous specimens, getting no more than his arm wet.

THE advantages of the submarine Explorer over the ordinary diver who plunges with heavy equipment on his shoulders and back are many. Besides eliminating a vast percentage of the dangers which face the diver, the efficiency of the craft is infinitely greater.

As an illustration, Mr. Lake points out the terrific handicaps the diver encounters in attempting to arrive at the spot where his work is to be done. While such a spot has been charted beforehand and the diver submerges from the surface at the correct point, he is nevertheless practically powerless to battle the undercurrents which ninety-nine times out of a hundred carry him far from his destination.

The pressure of water is too great at such depths as 300 feet and the diver is overcome with fatigue after a very short time. Then it takes several hours to bring the diver to the surface again in order that the intense air pressure pumped into his equipment may be lessened gradually on his physical system—a matter which, if ignored, could mean the death of the diver.

Cruising at the same depths at which the diver's efficiency is reduced to a minimum, the Explorer may work with normal air pressure within its steel hull, unless, of course, the water hatch is opened. Even then, however, the increased pressure does not offer the same hazards and handicaps which the diver must endure.

Manned by a crew of two or three men, the Explorer may nose its way down to a designated spot, keeping to its charted course like a dart, and figuratively pick up a needle from the ocean floor. The submarine's mother ship supplies air, electricity and a complete signaling system including a telephone which Dr. Beebe used in Long Island Sound. The last, however, is not new. In 1898 Mr. Lake navigated along the bottom of New York Harbor in a diminutive craft and telephoned his experiences by a special hook-up to Washington, D. C., thereby creating a sensation which firmly established the feasibility of under-water travel and led to the use of the submarine for war purposes.

But the peacetime craft of the type of the Explorer will offer a greater service to humanity, in the opinion of Mr. Lake, whose wartime submarine designs were used by Germany and the Allies alike, than the U-boats which sank helpless passenger liners and ships of the merchant marine.

"We believe," says Mr. Lake, "that we are officiating at the birth of an entirely new industry to furnish employment for thousands of men, produce millions of dollars' worth of commodities and contribute materially to the advancement of science and the increase of human knowledge.

"More than three-quarters of the earth's surface lies under water and of this about 9,000,000 square miles are under less than 300 feet—a depth easily attainable with our present equipment. From the scientific standpoint alone, here is an entirely new world to be discovered and explored.

"Then, too, within those waters lie thousands of sunken ships with cargoes and treasures worth fabulous sums. The locations of many of these wrecks are definitely known, and from experimental work already done we are confident that profitable recovery of considerable of this treasure can be accomplished.

"IN THE field of pure commerce there are several major sea industries, particularly those engaged in fishing for sponge, coral, pearl, mother-of-pearl and edible shellfish. Each of these is a huge industry on its own account, and yet the methods used in the recovery of these products by individual divers or 'blind' trawling seem antiquated, slow and uncertain. I can easily visualize a fleet of submarines like the Explorer diving down in the bays and inlets to collect our oysters in a much more efficient manner.

"Beyond this there are possibilities for the submarine in recovery of gold, and oil, rich deposits of which are known to extend beyond the shoreline; the laying of submarine pipes and cables; surveys of harbors and coastal waters; and possible use for naval life-saving and salvaging operations.

"While some of these latter projects are only in the theoretical stage at present, they seem to us no more impossible of accomplishment than some of the dreams of Jules Verne which have already become realities."

Long air lines and cables permit the "baby submarine" wide freedom of action. Driven by its own seven and one-half horsepower electric motor and propeller and steered by its own rudder and wheels, it can navigate over a large area while the surface ship remains at rest.

Hauled by the mother ship, it can ride awash or submerge at any depth or even roll along the ocean floor on its heavy wheels. The Explorer crew can cover any portion of the ocean floor and travel at any depth, clearing under-water forests and jungles when desired and landing at any spot selected by altering the buoyancy of the craft.

"The bottom of any body of water," described the inventor, "is not unlike the average landscape on surface. There are peaks, plateaus, valleys, chasms, forests, sandy wastes and so on. The baby submarine, due to its readily adjustable buoyancy, can be navigated, like an airship, over the underwater scenery or roll along on the floor.

"There are submarine forests of coral and kelp, anywhere from thirty to eighty feet high, some so dense that no craft could pass through them. Yet the Explorer can travel over them safely and lower itself at any time whenever there might be a clearance."

For the purposes of dismantling a sunken wreck or the handling of cargo or the scooping up of any objects from the bed of the sea, the submarine's derrick is another unique feature which adds to the efficiency of the craft. With only the effort required to push buttons, the so-called lazy-tonged derrick with a powerful grab bucket may be set to work by the crew.

Another fond dream of Mr. Lake's will be realized when he builds a large craft along the lines of a Pullman car equipped with comfortable seats and powerful searchlights, to carry passengers along the ocean beds to witness the "sights" only a few thus far have been able to appreciate.

BLONDES an eternal ?

Boots Mallory, charming blonde beauty and a favorite in the social activity of the movie capital

Directors find little difficulty in looking at the winsome Mary Carlisle, who may be one reason why gentlemen prefer blondes

Jean Harlow's screen fame has influenced the abundance of platinum blondes who believe they look best with her type of hair

By Alice L. Tildesley

HOLLYWOOD blondes outnumber brunettes two to one. This statement is based on a count of girls under contract to the various studios, a check of recently released pictures and an estimate of girl free lances in the business.

The list of Wampas baby stars recently chosen carries out the tally, for of the fifteen girls picked for the publicity men's yearly honor, ten are blonde.

"It's because Americans are essentially idealists," replied Howard Green, who adapts stories for the screen. "A fair girl suggests a fragility and delicacy that needs protection from the dangers and vicissitudes of life. Men have a protective complex and very little scope for it in real life, hence they like the illusion of it on the screen.

"I think it's true that gentlemen prefer blondes, so it is natural to present my heroines as having golden hair."

"IF YOU know your history," said Hamilton MacFadden, director, "you will remember that the most villainous women of every age have been brunettes—with the possible exception of Lilith of the Garden of Eden. Angels and very virtuous women, on the other hand, have always been depicted as blondes.

"Since admiration naturally went to the gilt-haired damsels on account of their presumed beauty-under-the-skin, brunettes had a strong incentive to change their classification. Self-elected blondes have never been more numerous than they are today.

"Several girls on our lot, who had won their contracts with dark tresses, have changed the color of their hair and done very much better. Marian Nixon is one of these, also Sally Ellers. The golden-haired contingent lend a light and translucent quality to the screen that seems to enhance personality."

"Contrast is the underlying reason for the predominance of blondes," asserted Charles Reisner, veteran director. "If you will check over the male stars in the industry, you will realize that most of them have dark hair. Feminine players know that light locks will show up better by contrast—and there you are."

"That is very true," commented Samuel Goldwyn, producer. "Motion pictures are made primarily for women. American women, at any rate, prefer dark men, which fact is testified to by the number of brunette leading men. Except for Leslie Howard, I can think of no major male star in Hollywood.

"Blondes are cast with them as foils. I know that Ronald Colman has worked with blondes in every picture he has made except those with Kay Francis. When I signed Joan Bennett for 'Bulldog Drummond' I had her changed to a blonde, and she liked her new self so much that she has never gone back to dark hair since that picture.

"If women proceed to fall for fair men, perhaps we shall have a rise in brunette quotations.

"I believe that men prefer blondes because all blondes seem romantic, whether they are or not. We usually marry brunettes, but even when a man is married to a brunette, when he dreams of romance or steps out to play he usually pictures a blonde as his companion.

"They tell us that fairy tales absorbed in childhood leave an ineradicable impression—and most fairy tales stress the golden hair of the beautiful Princess. Still, a great many men were children who weren't allowed to read fairy stories. Well, I can't answer that one.

"There's another thing that may give the real point to all this excitement about peroxide:

"Fair girls usually look younger than dark ones on the screen. White hair also gives a youthful effect. How's that for a clue?"

SAMUEL BISCHOFF declared that personally he prefers blondes for beauty. They dress up a set and add glamour to romantic scenes, according to this authority, but——

"I always engage brunettes when I have dramatic or emotional roles to be filled."

Which is one up for the brunettes.

"Women always do the things which permit them to show themselves to their best advantage," contributed Edgar Selwyn, director, after reflection on the weighty subject.

"They have come to the conclusion that blonde hair makes them more striking—why, otherwise, would natural blondes make their locks still lighter and dark-haired girls go in for beauty shop fairness?

"In spite of all this, I don't believe that the director is the least bit affected by the color of hair. He looks for character and acting ability more than for mere pictorial value.

"Yes, there are any number of beautiful women who have become blonde; there are any number of beautiful women who are blonde or brunette, but the list of really fine actresses is not so long.

"If there are two feminine roles to be filled in my picture, I like one to be blonde and the other brunette, but this factor has nothing to do with my choice if acting talents vary."

Cameramen admit a preference for blondes as subjects.

John Arnold stated that blondes are easier to photograph and are at the same time more vivid on the screen.

"The lighting of their hair gives sharper contrast to their features. Very often in becoming a blonde a brunette acquires more vivacity in her screen personality.

"There have been players who were difficult to photograph as brunettes, but on becoming blondes these same girls took on a new quality and became delightful on the screen.

"But the real answer to the question, I should say, is that 'gentlemen prefer blondes.' Change that fact and the statistics will change, too."

J. Walter Ruben admitted that he preferred lighter-haired actresses, "especially those bordering on Titian shades.

"But this is only because I have found the type more capable of imparting verve to the pictures I have directed."

Nancy Lyon, Los Angeles society girl, who has entered upon a movie career with the assistance of her light locks and winning smile

Jeanette MacDonald, whose blonde tresses are further accentuated by her beautiful eyes and teeth

"When blonde hair is waved," explained Mr. Holland, "you get both light and shadow, the highlights of which have somewhat the effect of a halo. For this reason the blonde woman has a photographic advantage over her brunette sister."

Which is enough to make any ambitious brunette resort to peroxide.

"Dark hair won't pick up detail," complained Arthur Edeson, another ace cameraman. "You can highlight and backlight a blonde head and get gorgeous results, where a dark head appears dull.

"However, to my mind this does not mean that blondes are the best subjects—simply that it takes imagination to photograph a brunette."

John Leroy Johnston, former president of the Wampas organization, believes that the meteoric rise of Jean Harlow is responsible for the abundance of blondes, especially those self-made.

"It's a case of 'Monkey see, monkey do!'" is Mr. Johnston's conclusion, "and as soon as a striking brunette or a startling redhead crashes through with a similar sensation, the girls will follow her head and forsake the ranks of the blonde.

"I do not believe that blondes are the best photographic subjects, for brunettes offer a finer study in black-and-white, which is after all the screen medium. Actually, redheads hold the palm for gorgeous photography, and one of these days, when a new redhead reigns, we will hear testimony on this fact."

"When directors ask for extras to dress a set, calling for the smartest appearing girls," says Mr. Brown, "I find the ones answering this description usually have platinum blonde hair. Girls think they look best with this shade of hair.

"Many girls believe they have dead personalities with their natural equipment, and think that bleaching their hair will help them stand out. Natural blondes are also bleaching their hair lighter in order to attract attention.

"Then, too, there are girls who have a scattering of gray hair. If they bleach it the gray hairs don't show and they feel they look younger.

"Bear in mind the fact that every girl who has made a real success on the screen has been either a striking brunette or a real blonde. No mouse-colored heads gain stardom, so the girls with indefinite locks are wise in dyeing them.

"I suppose a girl thinks she may as well begin by going very blonde, for if she does not screen well with light hair it is easy to dye it darker, whereas there will be much grief for her in trying to get dyed dark hair a lighter shade.

"Girls with blonde hair look more feminine, according to themselves, but I imagine that vanity has a great deal to do with it."

MR. GOLDWYN is at present searching for seventy beautiful maidens to become the "Glorious Girls of 1933." Eighty gorgeous lassies were discovered last year and allowed to appear in an Eddie Cantor picture, and lesser numbers have been chosen in other years for the Goldwyn musical spectacles.

Looking over the girls who have lasted beyond the brief period of the Cantor vehicles, we find that blondes again have the best of it.

Marilyn Morgan danced from her small role in "Whoopee" to a straight dramatic role opposite John Barrymore and a contract with a major studio under her new name of Marian Marsh.

Virginia Bruce stepped from showgirl for Goldwyn to the stock company of a major studio, thence to the altar with John Gilbert, one-time great lover of Hollywood.

Any of these girls were selected partly for the beauty of their golden locks, but Paulette has disproved the adage about what gentlemen prefer by letting hers go back to their original brown "at the request of Mr. Chaplin."

All of which shoud serve as a tip for girls considering entry into a beauty contest for 1933.

The "LITTLE WHITE HOUSE" DREAM COMES TRUE

President Roosevelt Had a Premonition Seven Years Ago When He Built His Vacation Home in the Georgia Mountains

By Robert H. Wilson

SIX years ago Franklin D. Roosevelt was riding in an automobile along the tree-lined red-clay roads of Pine Mountain, in the western section of Central Georgia. The machine stopped on a knoll overlooking the half-dozen stores and twoscore small houses that are the village of Warm Springs.

Mr. Roosevelt looked back at the gentle slope of the hill behind him and out over the southern reaches of the Appalachian chain. Then he turned to his friend, the portly, mustachioed Sheriff Jacob Jarrell, of Warm Springs, who was riding with him.

"Jake," he said in the friendly way he has with his Southern friends, "I'm going to build a home down here. I'm going to move into your county. We'll have a little White House right down here." That was in 1926.

Months went by. The house was built and later a newer one took its place. As Governor of New York, Mr. Roosevelt went there frequently to rest and build himself up physically.

Sheriff Jacob Jarrell, to whom President Roosevelt predicted the building of a "Little White House" at Warm Springs

Simple in construction and arrangement is the President's bedroom in the little cottage at Warm Springs

THEN on last Thanksgiving Day Franklin D. Roosevelt returned to Warm Springs as President-elect of the United States. Huge throngs followed him on his Southern trip to what had become in actuality "The Little White House." He also spent part of February there. Countless thousands throughout the Nation read with eagerness the news dispatches which poured out of Warm Springs.

A drowsy little village had waked up to find itself the second capital of the United States. Like other little "home towns"—Marion, O., and Plymouth, Vt., in recent years—it had been pushed into world prominence to share the glare of the presidential limelight.

Mr. Roosevelt previously, however, had brought fame of another type to Warm Springs, for during the years since 1926 he has led the development there of the most advanced center in the world for the after-treatment of infantile paralysis.

Naturally flowing springs running from far beneath Pine Mountain at a year-round temperature of 90 degrees made the development of the paralysis center possible. But Mr. Roosevelt's interest and his organization of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation were responsible for the work now going on there.

The little village is now famous both in its own right and as the Southern home of the new President, for it is almost certain that he will find time to visit it often during the next four years. But it was not always so.

Mr. Roosevelt first went there in 1924. He found the unpaved streets and the framework homes of the 300 residents of Warm Springs stretching lazily beneath a warm Georgia sun. A daily train and a daily mail came to it along the single-track railway from the busier world miles away. But Warm Springs' only greatness, then, lay in its memories of the days when a cavalier social life centered about its springs and about the summer cottages on the mountain.

Since the days of the war between the States—and earlier—Warm Springs had been a gathering place in summer for a gay group of vacationists. They built their summer houses a short distance from the village on Pine Mountain, reveled in a huge and rambling old wooden inn, and swam in the pools filled with spring water at the base of the mountain.

Year after year they returned, driving handsome teams to the resort or riding in the Warm Springs stagecoach which is still housed behind the old inn. Then came automobiles and fast train service connecting Georgia's large cities with other vacation spots.

The summer colonists deserted Warm Springs and the place grew silent. The inn was boarded up. Empty cottages fell slowly into ruin, and, except for an occasional swimming party, the gayety of Warm Springs passed away.

Only the steady flow of the warm mineral waters, pouring at the rate of 1800 gallons every minute of the day and night, remained to make the place different from scores of other ancient landmarks of the pleasures and society of the past.

It was those springs that Mr. Roosevelt heard about in 1924, three years after he had been stricken by an attack of poliomyelitis which left him paralyzed from the waist down. Friends carried to him the story of a Georgia boy, also paralyzed, who had strengthened and developed his muscles by daily exercise in the warm spring waters. The New Yorker decided to seek strength there himself.

In seeking out Warm Springs, Georgia tradition has it that Mr. Roosevelt was duplicating the quest of Ponce de Leon. For, the legend says, the warm springs of Georgia were the waters which drew the Spaniard to this continent in search of the fountain of eternal youth.

Certainly history and even Indian legend prove that the springs have been flowing for hundreds of years with the same valuable qualities they now possess. There may be more than imagination in the story.

MR. ROOSEVELT was far more successful in his search, however, than the adventurous explorer. He spent six weeks at Warm Springs, exercising daily in the pool. Its buoyant waters made it easy for him to exercise his stricken muscles, and its constant warmth enabled him to remain in the water for hours without becoming tired.

"It did me more good than the three whole years before," he told his friends as he prepared to return home. He left with the determination to develop the natural facilities of the place.

Twice during 1925 Mr. Roosevelt returned to Warm Springs and the next year he led a group of paralysis patients to the place to spend the entire summer under professional physiotherapeutic supervision. The results were so successful that the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation was established and the real work of aiding paralysis patients started.

TODAY the Foundation owns the entire resort, a 1200-acre tract covering the whole of Pine Mountain. It is a community independent of the little village of Warm Springs, and yet is a part of the life of it. The inn has become the center of a new type of social life, and the old vacation cottages, together with many new ones, are now the homes of patients, their friends and relatives.

Yet the place is not a sanatorium. No one is "sick" there from paralysis. The "patients" are a healthy people of all ages who have come to Warm Springs to exercise. They swim and play in the pools, breathe the pine-scented mountain air and bask in a warm Georgia sun that shines in clear blue skies virtually all the year round. Warm Springs is more like a huge country club than anything else.

Four large swimming pools are the main attractions. One of them is reserved for the use of the public. Thousands visit it annually, making it the most popular picnic and holiday spot in Central Georgia. Of the other pools, one is used by patients for exercising in summer. Another is set aside exclusively as a play pool for patients and the fourth is glass-inclosed for exercising in winter.

THE President-elect fits naturally into the program and life at Warm Springs. He returns at least twice a year for rest and exercise, spending the time in his one-story, eight-room cottage he envisioned so long ago as the future home of a President.

"I am really more 'at home' here than anywhere else in the world," he told more than 300 patients and friends at a gathering held in the big dining room of the inn. He also promised to return to his cottage on the hill more frequently during his term as President.

"I've been looking up the records of Congress," he said. "Fortunately it is not in session quite all of the time, and I expect to be with you lots down here during the next four years."

There is a guardhouse now, standing at the head of the narrow road that leads from the "campus" of the Foundation to the Roosevelt cottage. Secret Service men are on guard to protect the President-elect from intruders while he is there. A whole battery of floodlights has been installed, too, and if there should be an alarm, the entire quiet mountainside could be lit up at a moment's notice.

Prominent national leaders come and go while Mr. Roosevelt is in Warm Springs. Luxurious automobiles move along the narrow mountain roads and new-strung telephone lines connect the cottages with Washington and New York.

Still, as far as possible, the President-elect drops into easy-going retirement when in his Georgia home. He visits the patients' pool daily during his stay there to receive exercise treatment and to swim in the clear blue water with the others, young and old.

All the patients are his friends. Even when Mr. Roosevelt is at his Northern office, a patient or an "alumnus" of Warm Springs is often welcomed to the office for a chat while politicians and business men are excluded.

The President likes to ride horseback along the narrow trails of the mountain, stopping to talk with his "neighbors." These include not only the patients, but also the farmers who have tilled the red Georgia soil of Meriwether County all their lives. He knows all of them and their families.

One of these friends is Hill Smith, a native who still lives on the farm near Warm Springs where he was born and who knows everything and every one in the county. Mr. Roosevelt has made him night watchman of the Foundation's property. Night after night Smith makes his rounds of the mountain and then returns to smoke before an open fire in the lobby of the inn.

Smith was playing about Warm Springs when the first narrow-gauge railroad track was laid into the village. Now the new, concrete "Franklin D. Roosevelt Highway" runs by his home, connecting Warm Springs with Atlanta, seventy-five miles to the northeast. A modern golf course is laid out over fields he once tilled.

"People from all over the State used to come here," he recalls. "In the old days there used to be some big times here. There even used to be a barroom down there in the building that the doctors use for an office. I used to run errands for the men, but no one could get in there unless he was staying in the hotel.

"One time there were lots of Cherokee Indians in this country, and when we were kids we used to dig up lots of arrowheads and things left by them. I reckon this place has seen lots of life, but I like it best the way it is now."

THINGS are changed now in the little village of Warm Springs, and they will continue to be changed during the next four years. But, after all, one doubts that the place will be disturbed.

While events go on in its midst and about it, while the Foundation increases the scope of its work in the fight against paralysis, Warm Springs will probably retain its quiet old Southern characteristics. It will honor and welcome its distinguished resident and fete those who flock there as the Nation's capital is shifted to its doors.

Then some day Warm Springs will return to its place again—a drowsy little village stretched out in the sun of the Georgia mountains.

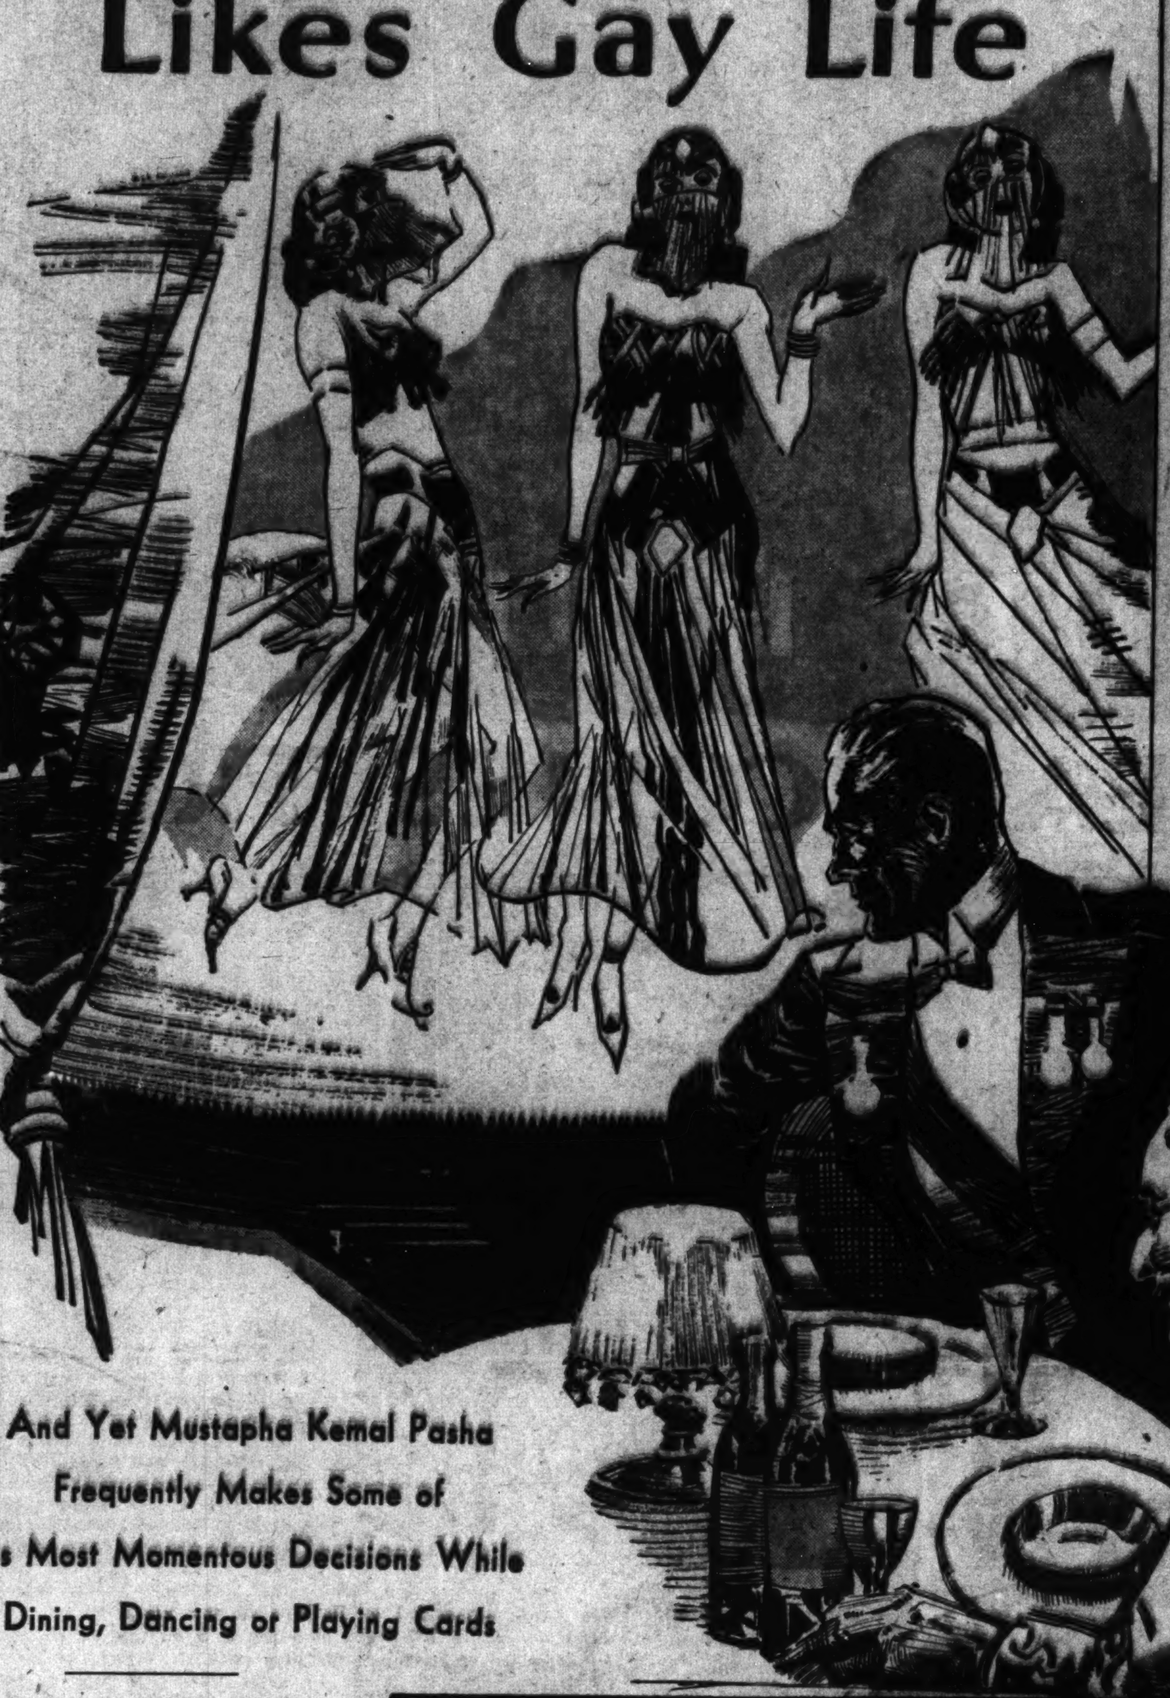
TURKISH DICTATOR Likes Gay Life



Mustapha Kemal Pasha has forced many reforms that are going far to lift his country to the level of other European nations

And Yet Mustapha Kemal Pasha Frequently Makes Some of His Most Momentous Decisions While Dining, Dancing or Playing Cards

By Hampton Ford

THE dawning of no year in the history of the world was marked with such real apprehension and job-loving attitude on the part of those once privileged individuals, the rulers of nations, as was that of 1933. That the people of the earth would stand for no more nonsense seemed to have been written on the wall in a hand that none could fail to understand. Certainly, it was thought, a wise ruler would not now dare the luxury of a private life.

But as there is still an exception to every rule—and even though rulers are supposed to be no exception these days—there was bound to be found at least one ruler who yet upheld the good old traditions of ruling. Who ate his cake and saved his pennies, too.

That one true lover of the royal goodies is none other than the President of Turkey, Mustapha Kemal Pasha.

Conqueror of the Sublime Porte, founder and veritable dictator of the Moslem republic, he is thrice blest—a ruler of iron will, a warm heart and a powerful physique. He is equal to any adventure, the more romantic or difficult the better, even while successfully bossing one of the oldest and most troublous nations in the world. His dissipations and lack of concern for his physical self are notorious, yet he enjoys the best of health, seemingly immune to fatigue. He is a devotee of the dance, of the juice of the grape, of the leg of the lamb. He is a candid captive of the cards of chance. Naturally, he is the hero of young Turkey of both sexes. The new year can hold no terrors for Kemal Pasha.

THE year 1933 is for Turkey its thirteenth as a republic. For Kemal his thirteenth as President. He will be 53 this year, and, according to Konrad Bercovici, who gives him a hand in a recently published book on the Balkans, his health is that of an athlete of 20, though he has broken all rules of correct living throughout his life and has paid no attention to the conservation of his health. After working without interruption for ten hours he spends the night dancing or playing cards and begins over again the following day with but a few hours of sleep in between.

"He eats only once a day, but," says Mr. Bercovici, "that meal is a banquet. He drinks great gobs of good wine and smokes incessantly. Pressed hard by work, he does not change clothes for weeks at a time, even sleeps in them, and relaxes only when dancing or playing cards or listening to music. He makes the most important decisions while listening to the playing of a violin and gives the most momentous orders while holding a hand of cards."

All this and more will be quickly and, in most cases, proudly confirmed by any Turkish citizen. When asked his opinion of Mr. Bercovici's remarks on the personal habits of Kemal, Ahmet Muhtar, Turkish Ambassador to the United States, answered simply and in all good humor: "Kemal Pasha is not an ordinary man. Therefore he does not spend his years in an ordinary manner. He is a big man. Nothing bothers him much. Little things bother him not at all. He is so big that he can find room in himself for everything that is good and that he desires."

Well, I imagine that just about covers that. Whether physically or politically, it seems, he shows no signs of weakening.

One of the favorite stories of Kemal told by American-Turks is that of his adoption of children. In 1929 he adopted a shepherd lad. While driving out to his model farm near Yalova he found the small shepherd tending a flock along the road. Struck by the boy's look of intelligence and ill health, Kemal stopped to talk to him. Before continuing his journey he gave the boy money and told him to come to a certain house in Istanbul the following day. There, upon the shepherd's appearance, Kemal revealed his identity and intentions in true fairy tale fashion.

Also he has five adopted daughters, children of brother officers who fell in the war of independence. Two of the girls are studying at the American College in Constantinople.

THERE is probably some connection between Kemal's habit of adopting children and his own childhood. Mustapha Kemal was thrown upon his own resources very early in life. His father, a petty merchant, died when Mustapha was but 12. Having been beaten too severely by his teacher, the youngster ran away from school and home and wandered aimlessly for a while. Dressed in rags, he slept in hallways and fed on the refuse from restaurants when he could not eke out a living as porter and bootblack.

However, at the age of 15 he met a protector, an old merchant who had known his father, and who helped him enter a military school, where his intelligence and assiduity singled him out to his instructors. But the years of suffering doubtless softened the heart of the man even while it hardened the arms of the soldier.

At the military school Kemal organized his colleagues into a secret society in opposition to the corrupt regime of Abdul Hamid, the Sultan. For this he was thrown into jail. Konrad Bercovici, commenting on this experience of Kemal's, said: "Only those who have seen the dungeons of the Middle Ages can guess faintly what the boy's fate was in that jail. Feeding prisoners never counted for much in the old Turkish budget. I have seen Turkish criminals walk about the jail yard in the costume of Adam, with loin cloths fashioned out of the skins of the rats they had killed."

Kemal's teachers, who had seen in him a remarkable student, intervened in his favor. He was taken out of prison and permitted to continue his military career. But he never ceased to organize societies in opposition to the Government, all the time rising steadily in the army. Finally, when in complete command of the military forces of the nation, he seized power. In 1920, at the age of 40, the erstwhile homeless bootblack had become the undisputed ruler of Turkey.

Kemal had no sooner rested from his long battles when he instituted reforms which for a while threatened to rob him of his popularity, strip him of his new power. His law against polygamy shook his Government to the roots. He was accused of imitating the Europeans. He was denounced to the Islamic world as an unbeliever. His answer was a law forbidding the Turks to wear the fez, the traditional headgear.

WHEN he ordered the Turkish alphabet replaced with Latin characters and the Latin characters taught in the Turkish schools, even his dearest friends advised him not to try to enforce the new law. Instead of heeding their counsel, Kemal Pasha ordered a big blackboard brought to the public place in Siwa. There, chalk in hand, he gave the assembled people their first lesson in Latin.

Shortly afterward Kemal forbade Turkish women the right to walk the streets with the traditional veil over their faces. It was thought he would be assassinated for this. But when the first lady of the land, the wife of Kemal, was seen on the streets with her face unveiled it was realized no insult was intended. Before long statesmen and officers emulated their chief and encouraged their wives to appear unveiled.

Later he brought about laws of divorce in Turkey. Some Turks insist that he still loves his wife, but that he divorced her to set an example. Be that as it may. The law of divorce was such a radical step in Turkey as to equal in significance the law against polygamy and the harem.

Kemal passed a law for compulsory and free education. Under the Sultans only the wealthy could afford to send their boys to school. There were no schools for women. For hundreds of years the Turkish woman has been completely isolated from the men. Women were herded together in harems and guarded by eunuchs. Heaven help the woman who dared to lift her eyes to a man other than her husband, her brother or her father.

As the male relatives, including the husband, had the right of death over a woman, they vied with each other in killing the women whom they imagined dishonored them. Such was the Turkish law for centuries. No one questioned such murders. In the face of such custom Kemal Pasha dared to institute coeducational schools, not only for the higher schools of learning but also for the lower ones. Both sexes were told that they must be with one another from earliest childhood. And the Turks were persuaded to like it. The right of man over woman was taken away. Woman became a human being, ward of the state, not of the family.

No wonder he is the hero of modern Turkey! That the Turkish people, particularly the "weaker" half, will forgive their audacious dictator anything!

KEMAL PASHA is without doubt the most colorful ruler in the world today. While possessing the love and loyalty of friends and followers, he is at once feared and admired by his enemies and the national foes of his people. There is no more talked-of man, not only in Asia Minor and the Balkans, but also throughout the Mediterranean and all of Europe. And why not! Can any other ruler boast so many conquests on so many fronts? He is a truly romantic figure whether in Parliament, war or love. When anything stands in his way, be it ancient custom, an army or a husband, he sweeps it away with all the energy at his command.

And, somehow, the Turks like it.

But it is often difficult of digestion for foreign diplomats. At a recent diplomatic dinner where a famous dancer performed the President of Turkey arrived late, entering the dining room just as the dancer had begun her first whirl about the floor. While others by turns held their breath in wonder at the dancer's grace and enthusiastically applauded her skill, Kemal smiled and throughout the performance he never moved his eyes from the whirling figure, not even to nod to his neighbors at table.

How he stands the pace is a mystery. Some old Turks invest him with a magic power. A power for evil, to hear it told by those whose wives or sweethearts have been honored by his attentions. But the great majority of his people openly admire the strength and will which enable him to indulge so robust a private life. His marathon dances, his winnings at cards and conquests of the heart when reported abroad are occasions for national rejoicing. It is pointed out that he lets loose in his work for the common good the same masterful energy that serves him so well in play. But where does he get the energy, living as he does in utter lack of regard for all rules of living?

Of course, as the Turkish Ambassador to the United States has said, Kemal Pasha is no ordinary man.

All the patients are his friends. Even when Mr. Roosevelt is at his Northern office, a patient or an "alumnus" of Warm Springs is often welcomed to the office for a chat while politicians and business men are excluded.

The President likes to ride horseback along the narrow trails of the mountain, stopping to talk with his "neighbors." These include not only the patients, but also the farmers who have tilled the red Georgia soil of Meriwether County all their lives. He knows all of them and their families.

One of these friends is Hill Smith, a native who still lives on the farm near Warm Springs where he was born and who knows everything and every one in the county. Mr. Roosevelt has made him night watchman of the Foundation's property. Night after night Smith makes his rounds of the mountain and then returns to smoke before an open fire in the lobby of the inn.

Smith was playing about Warm Springs when the first narrow-gauge railroad track was laid into the village. Now the new, concrete "Franklin D. Roosevelt Highway" runs by his home, connecting Warm Springs with Atlanta, seventy-five miles to the northeast. A modern golf course is laid out over fields he once tilled.

"People from all over the State used to come here," he recalls. "In the old days there used to be some big times here. There even used to be a barroom down there in the building that the doctors use for an office. I used to run errands for the men, but no one could get in there unless he was staying in the hotel.

"One time there were lots of Cherokee Indians in this country, and when we were kids we used to dig up lots of arrowheads and things left by them. I reckon this place has seen lots of life, but I like it best the way it is now."

THINGS are changed now in the little village of Warm Springs, and they will continue to be changed during the next four years. But, after all, one doubts that the place will be disturbed.

While events go on in its midst and about it, while the Foundation increases the scope of its work in the fight against paralysis, Warm Springs will probably retain its quiet old Southern characteristics. It will honor and welcome its distinguished resident and fete those who flock there as the Nation's capital is shifted to its doors.

Then some day Warm Springs will return to its place again—a drowsy little village stretched out in the sun of the Georgia mountains.

Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, and Jack Sharkey, present titleholder on a very close decision over Schmeling

Three of the "Big Four" Have Tumbled From the Throne and Babe Ruth May Go This Year—Who Will Fill Their Places?

Max Schmeling, who awaits a return bout with Jack Sharkey as fight fans remain more or less indifferent

By C. William Duncan

THREE of the "Big Four" who so long and colorfully ruled their respective sports have disappeared. The fourth is hanging on grimly, but his days are numbered.

Will any quartet, we wonder, ever equal in color, in popularity and in influence on their sports the famed Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Bill Tilden and Babe Ruth?

The finis to the career of Dempsey as a headliner was written by Gene Tunney during that memorable battle of the "Fourteen-Second Count" at Chicago. Call Tunney a dancing master or whatever you will, it was he who jabbed and crossed Dempsey into fistic oblivion.

For several years Dempsey proclaimed he would never fight again. He twice told it to me during lengthy interviews in New York and said the same thing to dozens of other newspapermen throughout the country.

More recently he did fight again, but in sporadic bouts in various parts of the country that failed to attract any vast amount of attention. When an athlete is through, he's through, and the public won't support him even though he be as dynamic a figure as the once heralded "Manassa Mauler."

EVERY champion has his moment in the glare of the spotlight—in his era. Once he steps down and the parade passes, it is only the exception who ever regains a spot of equal prominence.

Tunney, the conqueror, never enjoyed the popularity and prestige of Dempsey, the conquered. It was too soon, then, for the public to forget Jack's spectacular knockout of the giant Jess Willard, his victories over Billy Miske and Tommy Gibbons and his win over Luis Firpo in what was probably the most spectacular heavyweight fight of the present century.

Taking a glimpse at the situation on the links, we know that Bobby Jones retired from active competition in 1930 after accomplishing what no other golfer ever did or probably ever will do—namely, winning the British amateur and open in one season. Bobby went into the talkies and showed the people how golf should be played. He has never lost his amateur standing, officially, but there seems little likelihood of his ever returning to competition. He wisely believes in resting on his laurels instead of coming back, losing a match and losing his deserved prestige with it.

Bill Tilden still breaks into print occasionally when he wins a professional tennis match, but he has disappeared forever as far as amateur games are concerned. Tilden, like Dempsey, is now far past his prime, looking backward on the glorious days that used to be.

The last of the "Big Four" is Babe Ruth, who this year will round out his twentieth season as a major leaguer.

It's a difficult task to take that regular outfield job away from the Babe. But Father Time can steal Babe's job and he's about to do it. It may be that the coming season will be the last for the Babe, at least as a regular.

Right after the opening of the 1932 season I had a long talk with Ruth when the Yankees were playing their first games of the season against the Athletics. I always had the impression that the burning desire of his life was to break his own record of sixty home runs. I was wrong.

"I'm not worried about the home-run record," said Ruth that day. "Let the boys shoot at it, and I think it will stand for a while. My chief ambition in life is to play twenty seasons in the American League. Next season, 1933, will round out that twenty, and then I expect to call it a career as far as regular playing is concerned."

Baseball writers have been predicting the end of Ruth's career for several years, but just about the time it seems as if Babe is through he pounds out a few more homers and his retirement is postponed again.

A person who merely scans the batting averages and doesn't see the games will never believe that the end is near for Bambino. He'll always be able to hit that ball, even though they wheel him up to the plate in a chair.

It's in the field where he has gone back. The old legs are giving way, naturally, and balls are going by him for doubles and triples that were easily held to singles ten years ago. In addition to that, playing ball is becoming more and more of an effort for the big boy, who was 39 years old February 7.

WHEN a leader starts to slip people look around for a likely successor, whether it be in business, politics or sport. With three of the famous quartet gone and one going, it is the natural thing then to inquire:

"Who, if any one, will replace them?"

From the Pacific coast comes a voice which says: "Leave Tilden's shoes to me. I'll fill them and fill them well."

From the Atlantic coast comes another voice. It says: "Look on me as a candidate for Babe Ruth's job as home-run king."

Who are these athletes who have the nerve to infer they can replace two such eminent gentlemen as "Big Bill" and "Big Bambino"?

Ellsworth Vines, by reason of his victory last year over Henri Cochet, French tennis star, looms as a worthy successor to Bill Tilden Ellsworth Vines is the first speaker and Jimmy Foxx the second. And each youngster has performed sufficiently well to merit consideration.

Vines showed plenty of promise in 1931, but it was last year when he really burst forth as a worthy successor to the great Tilden. The feat that gave him international fame among tennis lovers was soundly trouncing Henri Cochet in their match at Forest Hills. That victory of Vines was one of the major upsets of the sports year.

Vines' first triumph over Cochet in the Davis Cup challenge round was discounted by foreign critics, since it had been accomplished after France had retained possession of the trophy when Jean Borotra vanquished Wilmer Allison. This viewpoint on the part of the critics seemed logical at the time, as they pointed to Borotra's win over Vines on the opening day of play.

But all this careful reasoning on the part of the experts was dashed askew later in the season when Vines clearly demonstrated his superiority over Cochet in their meeting at Forest Hills.

In addition to his showing against Cochet in 1932, the young California boy annexed the Wimbledon crown, a remarkable feat, considering it was his first appearance in the tourney. After he crushed Bunny Austin, of England, in the final, Vines was hailed as a second Tilden in Britain and the United States.

If he continues his brilliant work for a few more years, he will be so recognized, universally.

In baseball, Jimmy Foxx has every right in the world to claim the distinction of being the leading candidate to succeed the mighty Ruth. It is scarcely necessary to remind baseball fans that the claim of James rests in his 1932 feat of hitting fifty-eight round-trippers, just two below the mark of sixty set by Ruth in his record-making year of 1927

FOR fully two-thirds of the season Foxx was running ahead of Ruth's 1927 schedule, but that year Ruth did his best work toward the close of the campaign and Foxx was unable to surpass him.

Foxx will have plenty of seasons, however, to shoot at the mark. He has been with the Philadelphia Athletics for eight seasons, but is only 25 years of age. He came to the A's when only a boy. He is a careful liver and should last, barring accidents, twelve or fourteen more seasons in the majors. He is powerfully built, the strongest man on the team, and has a free swing that gives tremendous momentum to the ball. Everything is in his favor to beat Ruth's record eventually, as far as his physical ability is concerned.

There are a few things against him, however. One is the abolition of the lively ball in the American League in favor of one which is not so easy to ride out of the parks. The other is that screens have been raised, in one park at least, cutting off balls which flew into the bleachers for homers when Ruth made his record in '27.

Yet with these factors against him I look for Foxx to reach sixty-one homers some day and so do thousands of other fans.

AS FAR as popularity goes, there probably will never be another ball player in years to attain the far-reaching reputation of Babe Ruth. Hitting homers is not Ruth's sole achievement. He is patient and pleasant, and above all, a good showman. Foxx may never equal Ruth's mark as a showman, but he does have in his favor a genial and happy disposition. If Jimmy continues to produce homers and is "built up" from a publicity standpoint, he'll come close to equaling Ruth in more ways than one.

For it takes color as well as ability for a man to be a real champion. Foxx and Vines qualify, fortunately, in both respects.

With these two young athletes, then, we have very promising candidates for the shoes of two of the "Big Four."

The outlook is not so bright in golf and boxing.

On the links no one has stood out above the flock to any great degree since Bobby Jones retired—but many are trying.

There's Johnny Fischer, for instance. Fischer comes from Covington, Ky. He was a caddy at such clubs as Fort Mitchell and Fort Thomas and is a very well-brought-up and well-behaved boy. A man took a fancy to him and sent him to the University of Michigan, not to play golf but to get an education.

While at school young Fischer played golf, naturally, and became the intercollegiate champion. He tied the qualifying mark at the national amateur matches in Baltimore last year and was beaten in the tournament play by Francis Ouimet. He showed plenty of ability, however, and the experts expect him to go far in golf.

Yates comes from Atlanta, the same city that produced Jones. He is being tutored by O. B. Keeler, the man who developed Jones from a publicity standpoint. Keeler wrote thousands of columns about Bob, and Bob was his bread and butter. He had to find a new horse when Bob went into retirement, so he's caught this young colt, who, like Bob, was playing around the East Lake course in Atlanta.

These are only two of a dozen youngsters who are trying hard to climb to the spot Jones once occupied in golf. But they have miles to go.

TURNING to the ring for a successor to Dempsey, we find the pair of boxers who have been around for a few years but have failed to make the public forget the old Mauler. They need no introduction, as the public has seen in person and read much about Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling.

They have met twice, each bout being a disappointment. Schmeling won the first time on a foul and Sharkey the second time on a very close decision, so close that the German's followers howled their disapproval from Milwaukee to Munich.

If one of the pair would win by a spectacular knockout, it would help the sport, but they are too evenly matched and too cautious for that to happen. It is doubtful if they will meet again for many months because Sharkey said he would make Schmeling wait two years for a return match, the same length of time he himself waited. Very likely the public doesn't care if they don't meet for twenty years.

The unfortunate affair in Madison Square Garden several weeks ago, following which Ernie Schaaf died after a match with Primo Carnera, cast a gloom over the boxing game. Schaaf was a colorful fighter, but failed to register as a possibility for the heavyweight crown. Carnera, the giant of the ring, can never be figured as a topnotcher, although his tremendous size gives him color when he enters the arena. Max Baer, who is scheduled to fight Schmeling next summer, cannot be considered.

Find him and find a golfer approaching the ability and personality of Bobby and we'll have a new "Big Four" in sport.

Behind the Scenes at a MARATHON DANCE

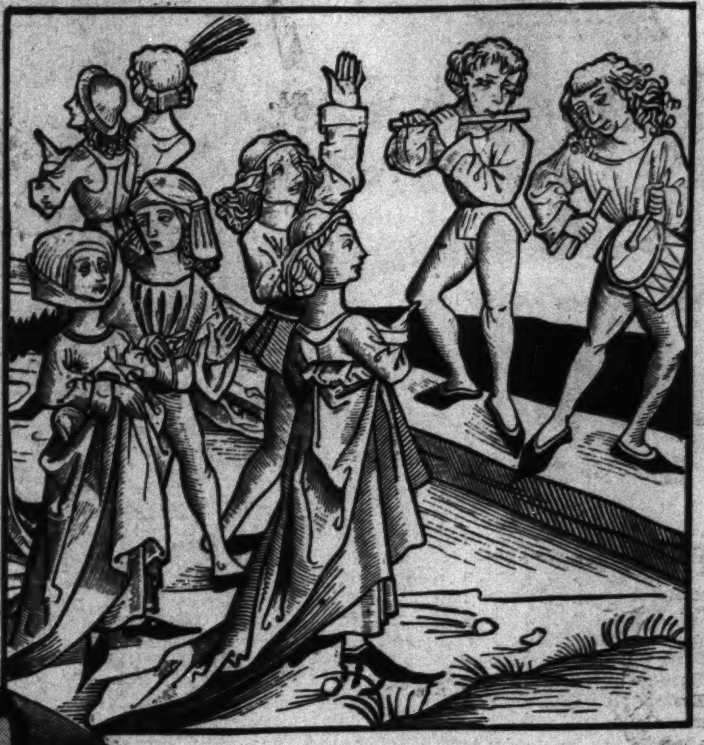
Hold it, boy friend, for just a few moments and a nice nine-minute rest period. Then back to the weary plodding around for another hour which may bring victory and the coveted cash prize



What probably was the first marathon dance took place in the fifteenth century when a young couple, found dancing on Christmas night, were condemned to dance for a whole year, as shown in the above reproduction of an old print of that period

By Marshal Bainbridge

THE Greeks may have had a name for them—apparently they had names for everything—but it does seem that endurance dance promoters are taking advantage of the Greeks in calling their present-day promotions "marathon dances."

Certainly on that historic day in 490 B. C. when a Greek named Pheidippides raced from the plains of Marathon to tell a palpitating Athens that the Greeks had repulsed the Persians, neither he nor the Greeks realized that he was performing a feat that would be taken to name a craze which has swept the United States during the last six years.

And it really has amounted to a craze, which now, apparently, is on the wane except in those sections of the hinterland where "marathon dances" still are new. Their popularity definitely seems to be on the decline, with eager promoters seeking virgin spots where they still may garner the funds of the uninitiated.

"Rejoice, we conquer," said Pheidippides, and then he fell dead. Later the Greeks used the distance he traversed, twenty-six miles three hundred and eighty-five yards, as that of the historic marathon race, but it remained for American promoters to start dance endurance contests, jazz them up with a "hot" band and evolve the "marathon dance."

PHEIDIPPIDES in making his mad dash never heard of a "rest period," "the squirrelies," "grinds" or any of the other everyday parlance of the endurance contests, and doubtless made his bid for fame without even the assistance of a master of ceremonies.

Veteran promoters of the two well-organized groups which have dominated the marathon dance promotions for the last four years estimate that at least ten millions of persons have paid to see "the kids" perform during that period of time. Close to 200,000 persons paid admittance to a dance which started in Willow Grove, near Philadelphia, last winter; moved into Philadelphia, where it was not allowed to open, and then moved to Norristown, where the contest was concluded.

At least 2000 dancers in the United States have contested in various dances during the last year, and with many of them the dances are their chief or only source of income. And, lured by the promise of what they regard as easy money, new and untried dancers enter each additional contest which is opened.

New York, Jersey City, Miami, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Camden, N. J.; Lancaster, Allentown and Norristown, Pa.; Youngstown, Columbus and Toledo, O.; Chicago and lesser Illinois cities, St. Louis, Louisville, Ky.; San Antonio, Tex.; New Orleans, and virtually all the States have at various times entertained such contests.

During the last two summers most of the summer resorts along the Atlantic coast have had such contests. The Pacific coast resorts acted as hosts two years ago, and now the promoters, with the East becoming more sophisticated and less inclined to pay the promoters, once more are casting their eyes on the Western coast.

"The ability of the dancers to stand up under physical punishment that at times approaches the torture point, and the ever-present hope of seeing contestants collapse, are the reasons that marathon dances are popular," said Ray Dunlap, head of one of the groups.

"Sitting" on a dance requires real finesse. The "sitter" is head man of the particular show he is with, and upon his shoulders falls the task of attracting the cash customers, advertising the show, keeping "the kids" in good humor and attending to any local fixing which may be necessary.

He makes the necessary political contacts and makes every important decision during the progress of his show. And every night he telephones the home office to inform them just how much came in at the gate that day.

Rarely, if ever, does a show maintain a bank account in a community where it is playing. The amount of sums deposited in banks, particularly in smaller communities, has a way of being noised around the town, and the promoters take no local residents into their confidence.

Instead, all business transactions are on a cash basis. And receipts each day are placed in a rented safe-deposit box in a local bank. A representative of the group calls each week to take with him any profits or, as has been the case frequently in the East during the last six months, to replenish the store of cash with funds from headquarters.

This cash policy is a strict rule of the two major groups headed by Dunlap and Zeke Youngblood, a former Dunlap employe, who secured the necessary cash backing to build up a strong organization of his own. The two groups are bitter rivals, working together only when necessary to crush some independent promoter.

Of almost equal importance to the man "sitting" on a show is the master of ceremonies, some of whom have been working the dance marathons since their inception and have built up a store of jokes and stunts certain to please the spectators, at least in those towns getting their first taste of such competitions.

The billing of the master of ceremonies generally is the same. If he can sing he automatically becomes "the man of a thousand songs." If not, he always "has made millions laugh." From the angle of the promoters he not only must be a versatile entertainer himself, but he also must be able to get the most from the talent among the competitors.

The epic feat of Pheidippides, who ran twenty-six miles in 490 B. C. from Marathon to Athens to announce the defeat of the Persians by the Greeks, only to fall dead as he gasped: 'Rejoice, we conquer!'

The first actual marathon dance of which record is available was held in North Jersey in 1921, with Maison Stelle claiming the promotional honors. It was held in several cities because the authorities in the various communities would not countenance the production, and Stelle was compelled to move his competition from place to place on trucks until it was completed.

A few years later a dance was held in Madison Square Garden, and it had a master of ceremonies. The one held in the Merry Garden ballroom, Chicago, the same year also had an "M. C." The Windy City, incidentally, is one of the few places where the dances continue to present a popular appeal year after year.

Now the master of ceremonies is the man about whom the entertainment program is built. Dancers are of two classes, those who enter the contests in the hope of winning the prize money, and those professional entertainers who compete with no thought of the prize awards but to snare the floor money which, in a successful dance, is showered upon the favored entertainers.

Morpheus claims two marathon sitters, but the dance must go on, as do the contestants in their rhythmic battle against sleep and fatigue

The winter of 1932 also brought forth an additional group of dancers who frankly admit that they became marathon dancers because the promoters fed them regularly and cared for their health. Then, too, they generally were able to obtain clothing from local merchants before the dance began.

This is the "sponsoring" racket. A merchant "sponsors" an entry by providing the couple with clothing on which the merchant's name is printed. The local merchant, of course, is repaid by the "advertising" he gets from his particular couple.

The dancers have a free-handed fraternity of their own which allows those not "in the money" to eat between dances at the expense of those who have been more prudent with their funds. Those who have shown "crowd appeal" rarely have to worry between dances because the promoters keep them not only in food and living quarters, but also frequently give them a small allowance.

Then there are the dancers who have little or no ability as entertainers and who lack the stamina to stay in the contests until the prizes are awarded. These contestants get a place to stay, food and eke out a small sum by selling postcard pictures of themselves or editions of the small newspaper generally published at each dance.

This class presents the tragedy of the dance contests. Rarely do they last more than three or four weeks. And when the time comes when the dwindling gate receipts make it imperative to bring the dance to an end they are certain to be among the first to fall.

They are the ones who first go "squirrelly," running about the hall tearing at their clothes, possibly attacking their partner or spectators and then falling exhausted and being counted out by one of the ever-present judges.

The dance over, generally broke, they have nothing to do but hope to eat and sleep until the next contest starts. Running errands for the survivors or working about the hall for no pay, they manage to exist until the next contest opens and again enter full of hope of gathering prize money or discovering some method of extracting cash from the patrons.

"GRINDS" are extended periods of dancing without rest periods. When a show is going good the dancers are allowed fifteen minutes' rest in each hour. As public interest wanes, promoters try to stimulate it by reducing the number of rest minutes one each day until none is left and the surviving dancers dance continuously until only one couple is left.

The stealing of dancers is not practiced to the same extent it was several years ago. The dancers are coming to realize that their best protection is to stick to one group of promoters if they expect to have any one care for their needs between dances.

Virtually all of the dances are decided on the merits of the respective contestants. The promoters have no vital interest in the winners. They place the prize money, generally $2000, to be awarded among the five couples dancing the longest period of time, open their doors and hope for patronage.

Pheidippides certainly would be astounded at the thought of some of the things being committed in the name of marathons at the American marathon dances, but he would find at least one kindred spirit in the ranks of the nationally known dancers in Joey Ray, former track star and Olympic team performer for the United States.

Joey, former mile champion and later a marathon runner of international repute, is an active competitor and is a successful dancer, having finished in the money in both dances in which he started last year. Joey, too, is good "box-office" and a real gate attraction.

During the winter just closing the Eastern sector has entertained dances in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland, and with few of the dances making a real profit, the promoters are seeking new fields to conquer.

Their overhead is high, the average dance employing close to fifty persons, and the operation of a losing dance speedily mounts into what the promoters call "important money." A dance that really "clocks" often will net a profit of $50,000 in three months, their average duration, but one which flops is operated at a corresponding loss.

Who Says There Is No Romance in This Year of 1933? An Odd Bracelet Takes Role of Dan Cupid

The tanned face, with its grin and mop of red hair, peeked over the stone wall, below which they were walking.

"Ugh—er——" Mrs. Ladd stumbled.

"Exactly," agreed the fellow, "tell her there is only one other in the world like it and that she will marry the fellow with the twin bracelet."

Heriot turned one quick, questioning glance toward Mrs. Ladd. She wondered if she had anything to do with this fantastic affair. The look yielded nothing. She turned to the wall again.

"He's gone," she cried.

Had it not been for the bracelet in her hand she might have thought she was subject to hallucinations.

"It's a beautiful bracelet." Heriot held it out, the sun played tricks with her bronze hair, her eyes sparkled. "Don't you think so?"

"I think it's hideous, if you're asking me," Mrs. Ladd shook her head. "We'll have to notify the police."

"You don't think he stole it?" Heriot gasped. "It's like a gift from heaven. You can't——"

"Or Satan."

"You do think of such adorable things," Heriot laughed. "Think of marrying Satan. Right here in America, too. It might have happened in Spain or Italy. But, practical America, where romance is dead."

"You're not actually going to wear it?"

"You're one riot of romance, aren't you? Of course I'm going to wear it. If I meet any men, I think I'll ask them to turn their pockets inside out and show me their safe-deposit boxes."

"You're hopeless,' Mrs. Ladd laughed at the slim, summery figure beside her. "You should have been born in the era of lancers and knights and white chargers."

A SAUCY pink hat and an apple-green georgette dress might not have been the things in which to go walking down a country lane, but that was part of Heriot's job; looking gay and lovely. Hadn't Mrs. Ladd, weak, lonely and blue, said: "Perhaps I'm wrong asking so young a girl to be a companion to such a listless old stick. But the doctor said he wouldn't approve a companion unless she was young and pretty and gay."

"Thanks," Heriot said sincerely, "I do need the job badly. You're not a listless old stick. You're tired and unhappy from what has happened. If I'll do, I'd like to try. Being gay is my nature."

"You're just scared of the law," Heriot teased when they turned into the curved driveway to the Inn. "I don't thing he stole the thing. I think he's mistaken me for some one else. We'll probably find out in time. Meanwhile, I'm going to wear it."

She held out her slender, graceful arm with the silver atrocity on it. 'You're a beautiful brute," she said as she looked at the bracelet.

"Heriot, I think you're terrible."

Marry the man with the other bracelet? Um! She'd be a bride in palest pink satin, with tight-fitting bodice and short puff sleeves; with long, tight-fitting cuffs of real lace; long swishing skirt that flared toward the bottom and floated out behind in a gorgeous train and rose point veil. Oh, yes, rose point mittens, too. Then she'd carry a little prayerbook bound in the material of her dress and baby pink orchids. She went to her room humming, "What Is This Thing Called Love?"

Her emotions were still tingling when they went down to dinner. Many people flocked to the Inn because it was almost across the road from the golf course where the annual tournament was held. Mrs. Ladd looked over this little playmate of hers in her tight-fitting, pegtop-sleeved smooth satin dress of soft, old blue. How she loved dressing Heriot up in swanky clothes. It was the nicest part of getting well, this playing chaperon to such a darling.

"Still hugging to your rosy soul dreams of Launcelot and Strephon?" she whispered to Heriot when they stepped across the black line that was the windowsill between the dining room and the long, wide veranda. "This is a moon-flecked hibernation for either one."

Before Heriot could answer, "Mrs. Ladd," the cool voice of the hotel hostess said, "may I present Mr. J. Cameons Whitmore? Mrs. Ladd, Miss Holbrook."

Heriot looked up, far up, into the eyes that were wildly saying things. Muted messages sent shivers of delight down her spine. The orchestra began; notes that sent forth come-hitherish music, with invitations to youth to come in and dance. Then the slow, dreamy strains of a waltz.

"Will you dance?" said J. Cameons Whitmore most politely to Mrs. Ladd.

"Thank you, no," Mrs. Ladd smiled.

"Will you?" he turned to Heriot, a little eagerly.

"I'll come right back," she said to Mrs. Ladd as she stood up.

"You needn't, dear. Stay as long as you are enjoying yourself. I'm going up."

"That will be quite late," he told her, "if I'm as good as I hope."

Heriot found herself inside on the satin smooth floor, in Cam's arms, and was completely lost. They stopped across the room on the last high note. He did not immediately take his arm away. She moved a little.

"Pardon me," he said, "I'm thinking how lovely you are."

"Thank you," quietly. "Are you one of the golf heroes?"

"Just a roamer at present," he smiled down at her pert nose, soft eyes. "How long are you staying at the Inn?"

"That depends on Mrs. Ladd."

"Not your mother?"

"Most girls would not admit it. Especially when all appearances are against it."

"More than any one?" The music began a lively one-step. "Our dance," he bowed. They both laughed.

"More than any one?" he repeated.

"More than any one," she mocked, "at present," she added quite unintentionally.

He danced her out the window to the veranda, quite deserted at this end.

Across the lovely garden and out over the golf links toward the ocean the moon made a filigreed path wherever it could get through the trees.

HE PINCHED her arm lightly and said: "Look at me."

Suddenly she was in his arms. "You are adorable," he kissed her. A kiss she knew instantly she would not easily forget. For one long, lonesome minute she relaxed in his arms. Loving the moonlight, the strength of him, the feel of his lips on hers. Then she remembered—her job. He was a stranger. Then, of course, the bracelet. She pulled away.

"I've wanted to kiss you for a long time," he held her a little away, so he could look into her face. "Do you believe in love at first sight?"

"A long time?" she thought.

"Do you?" he persisted.

"I don't know," she told him. "I—don't—know——"

"Cam," he finished, "say it."

"Cam," she repeated softly. She turned to the window. The strains of "The Kiss Waltz" began just as she reached the light. She turned to look back. "Our dance," he whispered. It was the same floor, the same orchestra, the same everything. But to Heriot something had happened. It was now fairyland. He held her a little tighter. He did not again refer to love. They danced on. He kept to the middle of the floor, cleverly avoiding the stag line.

The evening ended all too quickly. He took her to the elevator. "Good night," he looked at her steadily, headily. "I'll see you in the morning; try not to."

"Good night," she nodded.

RETURNING from a morning canter with Mrs. Ladd, Heriot walked into a gay group in the patio of which Cam and a vivacious, fluffy blonde were the animated center.

"Where have you been?" Cam whispered. Then gayly: "Miss Holbrook, Sally Blaire; an old friend."

Heriot raised her eyebrows. So? Cam dear? And this from a fluffy blonde who looked——

"Sally wants to go on a picnic to the Point. Want to come along?" This to Heriot, but she refused to look at him.

"No, thanks." Heriot tried to sound bored, failed miserably, hoped no one noticed. "I don't care for picnics. If Miss Blaire likes picnics," she told Cam with studied calm, "by all means take her to the Point. Please excuse me."

She went straight to her room. She couldn't make up her mind to sit down. Oh, what a headache. What good was anything? Besides, she wouldn't fight any silly blonde for any man.

A sharp rap on the door interrupted her straggling thoughts. It was the boy from the florist in the lobby. She took the box wonderingly.

A long lavender box of lavender lilacs and yellow lilies; great sprays of fern and soft folds of tissue that cleverly matched the flowers. A card on which was a colored sketch of the silver bracelet.

"Romance is not dead," she caught her breath with the loveliness of the flowers; stumbled hastily to her dresser to find the bracelet. She put it on and swore never to take it off.

She went down to the tournament ball that night exquisite in eggshell satin which depended solely on lines for style. It made her look like some little girl dressed in borrowed finery. She stood, for just one minute, beside Mrs. Ladd, softly beautiful in old rose, before Hank Powers claimed her for the dance. Hank with his long list of golf victories, his notorious fickleness, his impeccable manners.

SMILINGLY she accepted his invitation to dance; looking past him to the group about Sally Blaire; stoically refusing to answer Cam's welcoming smile with other than a little nod.

"You look like something out of a picture book," Hank whispered. "I would have been heart-broken tonight if I hadn't met you this morning. You're by far the most gorgeous thing in this room."

"If your golf is as good as your flattery, no wonder you win."

"Don't let's talk shop," he frowned, "this is play time. I'm not flattering you. You're adorable. I could learn to care for you in a large way."

"Lessons be hard?" pertly.

"Nope," he held her tighter, "take me on? Begin tonight?" She didn't answer.

"Make up your mind, beautiful, I'm an impatient man. Besides, I've a lot of time to make up."

Cam and Sally passed, rather too closely. Cam tried to whisper something to her. She turned her head away. But not before she saw him smile down on Sally as he answered her.

"Might," she told Hank, between heart beats that skipped.

"What do you know about my bracelet? It's quite gorgeous and romantic."

"It's a joke, I tell you." Something about his red head began to filter through her memory.

"You're not——" suspiciously.

"I'm the fellow on the wall," he laughed, though not pleasantly, "it's just a joke. That other fellow is here, and probably laughing at you for wearing it."

She snatched it off; dropped it over the railing. It fell with a thud on the dirt behind the flowers. Not at the thud or the loss of the bracelet did she shiver, but that she was rather disappointed with herself. Grabbing so readily at something she thought romantic. Hank put his long, strong arms around her, held her tightly.

"Beautiful, pay attention to me. I'm not a joke. I'm—what would you like me to be? Something important?"

Things were happening rather too fast. She wanted to believe him; to take away some of the hurt of that other ache. Hank bent closer.

"Beautiful," he whispered and kissed her. Before she could sidestep he kissed her again. Not gently, beautifully, as Cam had done. But hard, fiercely, right on the mouth. It left her cold, inert, chill.

Back to the dance floor to the tune of "Some One to Love" they danced once around when some one cut in. "Damn," said Hank ungraciously. Some one else cut in. Then another. The stag line was getting even for Cam keeping her in the middle of the floor the night before. Heriot laughed rather hysterically when some one said, "You're adorable."

"Sorry," Cam cut in determinedly and held her roughly close. "Why are you playing around with Hank Powers?" he demanded. "He might be all right, a winner on the golf course, but he's the world's worst piece of fickleness. He's just the type——"

"Is he the only one who is fickle?" she interrupted, not intending to say that at all. She made a face at him, thinking that making faces might hide some of her perturbed look.

"If that's a thrust at me," he began.

"Waiting for you at the south door, Cam, dear," Sally danced closely and tapped his sleeve.

"You better go." Heriot stopped dancing suddenly, right beside the door where Hank leaned against the pillar, "Mr. Powers will——"

"Heriot!" Cam protested.

"Good night," she forced her eyes to meet his; forced them to say nothing.

"Good night." It sounded more like an explosion than an evening's farewell. The minute he was out of hearing she announced, "I'm going to bed."

"You can't do that," Hank protested, "the evening's just started. Come outside. I want to——"

"Good night," she said. "I'm going to bed."

The gorgeous eggshell satin that went to the dance so bravely returned to the room nothing but a disappointed rag. Heriot fell across the bed and cried because she didn't know what to do about her hurt pride. Not ladylike sobs in a dainty handkerchief, but great wails rolled up and out from her small shaking body. Mrs. Ladd, returning from a bridge with the Whites, found her there.

"Good gracious, whom do I kill this time?"

"No—nobody," Heriot sniffed. "Can't you let me cry?"

"Gladly," Mrs. Ladd stuffed a very practical handkerchief under her nose. "I like to see you cry."

THE telephone rang. "I'm not here," Heriot protested, "I'm—I'm in Afghanistan."

"Yes?" Mrs. Ladd answered the telephone with the laughter still in her voice, "Miss Holbrook? She's gone to Afghanistan. What? Oh, yes, she said that's where she'd gone."

"Darling," sniffed Heriot, more softly, "you might——"

"Oh, no," Mrs. Ladd went right on, "when she says she's in Afghanistan, that's just where she is. I don't believe you can establish telephone connections there. What?—Yes, I'm sure of that—you're welcome—yes—perhaps—I think so—certainly not—good night."

"Who in the world?" began Heriot.

"You're not through crying already? Have another dry handkerchief."

"Who was that?" Heriot threw the handkerchief back at Mrs. Ladd. "What did he want?"

"He?" provokingly. "It was a friend of yours. Wanted to talk to you, of course, what else? Go to bed, dear. Everything will come out right in the morning, whatever it might be now."

"It's the devil."

"I know. He's most always about at night. But in the morning——" she went into her room and very decidedly closed the door. "Blah," sniffed Heriot.

MORNING brought a box of red rosebuds with another colored sketch of the bracelet. Heriot pounded excitedly on Mrs. Ladd's door and insisted on telling her everything.

"I'm just a silly nitwit," she finished, "thinking because I happen to be hungry for attention that every man who takes the trouble to flatter me means everything he says. Anyway," the hurt came back into her voice, "I think Cam Whitmore was a little too convincing——"

"You're not a silly nut," Mrs. Ladd encouraged. "You've just got a big, generous heart wanting to be loved. I've been through it all. The generations aren't so very different. Their technique might not be the same, but under the skin—you know the old saying. I wouldn't judge Cam and Sally without a hearing."

"Humph!"

A special delivery came for Heriot. On the top was a crest she couldn't make out. There was also a note that sent her scurrying down to hunt the bracelet from behind the flowers below the veranda; a note that invited her to come out on the Point at 3 o'clock to get the other bracelet.

"I'm going," she threw the note at Mrs. Ladd. "Try and stop me."

On the big rock that jutted out into the ocean, as though it wanted to see more than any of the other rocks, a man sat with his back to the land, hugging his knees. In the direct path of the sun he made only a silhouette. In one of those sudden, unexpected still moments on the ocean shore he heard her footsteps. He jumped to his feet and came to meet her. She stopped short.

"Cam," she cried, "you——"

"I know, you've come for the other bracelet," he held it out to her.

"Come here." He grabbed her arm. "Sit down. There's a lot to say."

"Where did you get it?" suspiciously.

"Had it all the time."

"In that case," she turned to go. "I have nothing to say."

"I've a lot to say and you're going to listen. I heard you down at Del Mono say that you thought romance was dead; that nothing romantic ever happened, like unnamed flowers and unsigned notes. I decided to have some fun. That's the way it began. But the day you wore my red rosebuds down to lunch I fell hopelessly, idiotically in love. I followed you to the Inn. I was behind that wall. Hank didn't know who the girl was until I asked him to give you the bracelet. He," bristling, "almost upset my applecart."

She tried to pull away. She was all tingly inside; like a kitten with its electric fur rubbed the wrong way.

"Never mind, darling," he exulted. "He didn't. He just wanted to see what he could do. Taking another fellow's girl is his meat; he doesn't care about other's hurts.

"Romance, darling," he went on dreamily, "is not this stage stuff. It's going down life's pathway together, hand in hand, so to speak. Happy, loving, poking into all the hidden rocks where life's romance is tucked away. Where it was born. It is the romances of right living that you——"

HE RELAXED his hold a little. She jumped and ran, stumbling, toward the road; there where it slipped through the cypress she tried to climb to its freedom. The dirt bank was soft. Her eyes were blinded with tears, of mortification, of happiness, of anger that he had not apologized for Sally. She stumbled, fell, slid. He had her in his arms before she could pick herself up.

"You're a silly little goose, darling," he shook her, "you can't combine hoopskirts and monoplanes. Don't you know they won't team? I love you. I'll never get over it. But I probably won't say that again. I believe in action, not words. Here," he tried to wipe the dirt from her face with his handkerchief. He only succeeded in smearing it over more surface.

"I've got to give this aviation company my closest attention. Incidentally, it's got most of my money. You've got to be practical, too. If it's only to bully some servants and keep our home a place I'm glad to come nights; chiefly because you're there. Marriage is teamwork, if it's going to be a success." He plumped her head on his shoulder. "My share is the biggest, but you've got to do your part."

"Who said I was going to marry you?" Her head came up in defiance.

"You did," he thumped her head back, held it there, "when you gave me back my kiss there on the veranda. Did you think I'd kiss you like that and not mean it? What's that?" He raised his cheek from her hair and peeped into her eyes.

"I didn't kiss you back."

"Little liar," he laughed, "you'd have got a lot more if you hadn't jumped into the light so swiftly."

"But Sally?" She couldn't hold it any longer.

"Simpleton," he chuckled happily. "Jealous? That's grand. Sally's father and mine are the original twins. Sally's been following me around ever since she could walk. She's engaged to my cousin."

"Oooh!" with a sigh, she relaxed, leaned back.

"That's better. I did intend to take you to the Cedars for dinner, but that's out. You're too dirty. We'll have a swim, then lie on the sands while the sun sets and you can tell me how much you love me. Then I'll tell you where all those really romantic places are to which I'm going to take you on our honeymoon. After that, it's practical teamwork—1933 model, understand?"

How she adored it all! She didn't have to fit any other face into her dreams of Strephon. She suddenly saw Cam in a new light. Romantic, yes, but with the modern fighting spirit of success in a competitive age.

"Romance is not dead," she laughed, gayly. "I just didn't know this year's model. Come on; let's go out on the sands—I want to tell you how much—um! How much you love me."

FOR THE WASHINGTON POST BOYS AND GIRLS

The Junior Post.

SECTION OF THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON, D. C., MARCH 12, 1933.

THESE ARE CHARACTER BUILDING DAYS FOR OUR YOUTH

No Sacrifice Should Be Too Great If National Security Will Result

Dear Post Boys and Girls: These are very stressful times for our beloved country, and the boys and girls of The Junior Post—all boys and girls in Washington and the country—must do their part as good citizens and help to make the world brighter and to do their bit in every way they can.

This great country of ours is well worth making sacrifices for, and all good Americans meet any necessity to sacrifice for their beloved native land with a glow of patriotism in their hearts and keep their eyes turned courageously to the world and their chins up.

The part that the boys and girls can play in helping all the thoughtful men and women who are in charge of national affairs, and those noble men and women of all political faiths who are anxious and willing to help all they can, is to obey the laws of the land, the rules of home and school and perform their daily tasks faithfully.

Now is the time to read the history of our country and the events which have made it great and take heed of the noble spirit of sacrifice of the men and women of the various generations which made it possible for us to become the greatest and happiest nation in the world.

Every one of you may be called to arms to do service for your country in some way—by doing extra work or making some sacrifice as a boy or girl, or a faithful and good citizen, or official, when you grow up. This is really a land of equal opportunity, and those who become great, every one of them, have become so through hard work and study and devotion to duty. In no other way can real character which makes for greatness be developed.

The boys and girls of The Junior Post can do their very best in school and help in the home and church and in any community or civic projects.

No Washingtonian could have failed to be proud of the sturdy line of Boy Scouts of the District of Columbia Council who stood so bravely one pace apart all the way on both sides of Pennsylvania avenue to the Treasury Building, in the Court of Honor in which was the reviewing stand of the new President last Saturday.

The day was certainly cold, and many of those fine American lads must have been chilled in spite of their warm jackets and stockings. But there they stood without even a tiny stamp of their feet to keep them warm. All eyes turned many times to the twelve Eagle Boy Scouts in the reviewing stand with the new President as his special aids.

Boy and Girl Scouts, yours are great organizations, and it is very good that so many of The Post boys and girls belong to them.

A Career.

In choosing a career there are many things that must be taken into consideration. For instance, one can not become infatuated with a profession that appears romantic and adventurous, but that will be a blight to one's happiness. A person should be slow, not hasty, in his choice, and view the possibilities and also the unattractive points of the career. If this work be their ideal, and if they could be happy during life with such an occupation, then their choice is made.

But there are others, who are not quick enough to grasp opportunity when it comes in their path. Too late do they realize the mistake, and youth fades away; a life is wasted. We must begin at an early age and work steadily to gain success and a place in the world. Now is the time when we should choose life's work and prepare ourselves to meet it.

We must not be misled in our choice, for if so all our lives a feeling of discontent will pervade in our hearts. Do not take too much on your shoulders at first, for you can not put your best in the work.

So many men and women before us chose careers that gave them fame and benefited mankind. Great artists, musicians, writers, dancers, composers took up the spirit of real study and work. They were inspired by hope and the thought of others who would derive the good from their task in life.

So, in choosing a career, do not aim chiefly at glory, but think of the people in general who will benefit by your restful music, grace in dancing or inspiration in writing. Help others and they will help you in your career.

Stick to It.

If you have a task
That seems hard to do,
Don't give up
And try something new.
Stick to it!

If you have tried much
And yet did not find
What you were seeking,
You were not far behind
Stick to it!

So whether your task
Be great or small,
The one who sticks to it
Is the winnner after all.
Stick to it!

A Visit.

Miss Jeanette Rankin, former representative from Montana.

Every one was trying to get a front seat because Jeanette Rankin was going to speak to our assembly at Roosevelt High School. Miss Rankin is the first woman ever elected to Congress. She spoke very clearly; she did not seem stiff or sophisticated as some prominent women are, but she talked on in a cheery, friendly manner, and, as she spoke, she moved her hands and body vigorously.

I particularly enjoyed Miss Rankin's speech because she not only spoke earnestly but also simply. She told us of how she went into Congress as the first woman and the only woman among 434 men. Miss Rankin said to the girls that she hoped that in the future the majority of representatives would be women. But she came to talk to us about peace. Disputes should not be settled by war, she thought, for no one gains by war. She told us about the Kellogg peace treaty.

Miss Rankin was very earnest, but she told many very amusing and interesting stories. She advised her audience to take part in politics by writing to senators and representatives, or to President Roosevelt to ask their views on different political subjects. Write not too often, only about once a week.

All in all, the visit of Jeanette Rankin, our first representative, was a real treat for Roosevelt High School in Washington, D. C.

The Pets' Corner

EDITED BY DING-HOW OF HYDE-GREE.

(Mascot of The Junior Post.)

Well, well, bow, wow, wow, bow wow. We are right in the middle of the New Deal. What a time we did have letting the new family in the White House, especially Meggie Scottie, Maj. Roosevelt Police Dog and Gen. Grant Bulldog and Little Anna and Tiny Curtis. They know just how glad the pets and the girls and boys of the Pets' Corner are to have them with us. Bow, wow, wow, wow. All the pets in Washington asked me to extend this welcome.

Did I get tired arranging for all the pets to be looked after during the parade and to see all the Horse Family who came here to march were properly noticed and not outshone by the bright new automobiles?

Johnny Bulldog says his cousin was in the parade all in a white suit. I did see some one who looked like Johnny Bull Dog walking along. Of course, he was not as important as an editor, and, anyway, I am sure he could not write on a typewriter. Bow, wow, wow, wow.

Sandy Orkney Terrier Gordon wants a little publicity about being up at the Capitol when the inaugural ceremonies were going on with the judge. Sandy says he had a new suit on, but it looked very much to me like the same old one he has been wearing for these many years, just cleaned and brushed. Bow, wow, wow.

Hop-Toy did not show much sense, either, for he took some ice cream and cake and put it on the White House door step for Meggie Scottie. He might know that Meggie went to the party at the White House or got some nice food, and besides Hop-Toy should know that ice cream melts. I should think he had been to enough weddings for that.

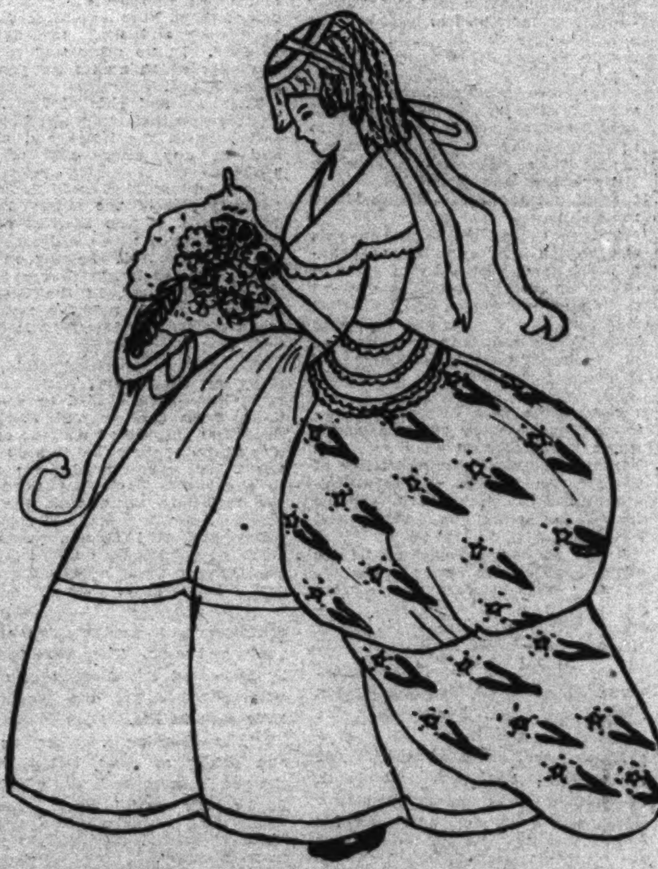
If the Pets looked for me at the head of the parade I hope the radio broadcaster told them that the only reason I was not there was because my foot is sore again and I thought I had better stay around the office and see that every one wrote their stories right. Anyway Gen. MacArthur thought he could get along without me if I promised to look out of the window and let him know whether every one was marching right. Bow wow wow.

Mr. Tweet Canary was going to the inaugural concert and show those opera singers how to sing, but when the time came Mr. Tweet said he was such a stay-at-home body that he thought he would wait in his golden bungalow until spring came and the windows could be opened and the pets and boys and girls and people could gather on the street below to hear him sing. He says he is going to charge a hundred dollars for a box seat and give a party with what he makes. Bow wow wow. He has already invited me, but I guess I will eat my dinners right along, anyway. Mike Great Dane and Daisy and Spider did not see the parade, but they say they are going to have a good look very soon at Meggie Scottie, General Grant Bull Dog and Major Roosevelt Police Dog, who have come to live at the White House, bow wow wow wow.

Dear Ding-How: You can't guess what inauguration day is. It's my birthday and I'll be 2 years old. I hope I can go to the parade, but I don't even know whether my family is going. Well, let's hope for the best. I liked your picture very much. Hop-Toy's (whoever he is) was very nice, too. We have a new bird on the street. His name is Sammy Canary. If I can get in the house he lives in I'll tell him about you. My mistress says he can sing like the dickens, and what she says usually goes. Last week I got into some grease and had to have some awful stuff on me. It stung liked the dickens. Believe me I'll not get in any more grease for a while if I can help it. Well, so long, old top. Don't get in any grease whatever you do. Yours, truly, SCAMP.

(Jean Frost.)

Dear Ding-How: Well, how are you these fine days? I am feeling just like a little lamb. Micky and I wrote to you once before, but now he is gone. You just can't guess how much I miss him. He was a good fellow and we got along nice together, but I guess we should have, we were brothers.



"IN GRANDMOTHER'S DAY." Drawn by Ruby Sullivan.

Are you going to the inauguration? I think it would be nice for a little dog to wear a red, white and blue ribbon on that day. Not me, though, because I'm too big for one, and besides it would come right off in my play, and I couldn't go without playing just on 'count of a little old bow.

But I must close now, Bow, wow. Yours truly.

SKIPPY A. A. MAC.

Dear Ding-How: I am keeping my promise and writing to you. I hope you are fine and also all the other pets.

Now that inauguration day is nigh, I imagine you are intensely excited over the fact that some new pets will occupy the White House and, of course, join the Pets' Corner, where they are welcome. I suppose that the parade will be very lovely, especially so for you, since you shall surely watch it through your spectacles. I guess they will multiply the events! I certainly wish I had a pair to wear. I know I'd look nice in them.

The best of wishes to you and all the other pets. NELLIE.

Spring's Advent.

After the rigor of winter days,
Harshened by snowy blast;
O'er frozen fields and icy ways
The springtime comes at last.
We find her first
When the edge is gone
From the winds of sunny March;
In the fresh'ning of tiny birds that cling
To leaf-stripe maple and larch.
The trailing arbutus in woodland ways,
The pussy-willow, 'neath cloudless skies,
Harbor a promise of soft spring days,
Where the welcome robin flies.
The rippling streams and the shadowy pools
Are brighter and crystal clear—
Where the perch is a streak of silver light
And the dragon fly hovers near.

The Brook.

Underneath its frozen roof the once gay and frolicsome brook became industrious after her long summer vacation and began her fretwork. The wonders which she made could be done by no man. Her walls were crystal, portraying the perished beauties of the forest, while her grained arches shone like the rainbow. The brook kept tinkling along under its icy roof until spring came and loosened it from its prison of fairy masonry to again share the joy of freedom. EDITH HESSLER (age 15).

THE JUNIOR POST AIRSHIP

"I suppose we should keep more or less over our own homeland today. Plenty of news for the boys and girls of The Junior Post in our own country," said the pilot as the editor climbed in to the cockpit of the airship, ready for the weekly tour of [redacted] "Let [redacted] House and see how our new first family is getting along for the first week in the Executive Mansion."

"They are as busy as busy can be. A very busy family, anyway," said the pilot, as they circled over the White House and saw Mrs. Roosevelt engaged in directing the arrangements of the furniture brought down from Hyde Park to make the family quarters at the White House seem homelike. Little Ann Dall and Curtis Dall, known to the family and to the Nation as Sistie and Buzzie, were having such a good time playing in the White House gardens.

"There he is, hard at work, with that look of determination on his face that is making our financial crisis not a panic, as it might have been," said the editor as they swooped down to look into the window of President Roosevelt's office to see him hard at work conferring with great financial leaders of the country, irrespective of political affiliations.

Just as they circled the White House they saw the tall, pretty daughter of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Anna Dall, whom, of course, it is polite to speak of as Mrs. Curtis Dall, going for a walk. There is much laughter about the White House, for Mrs. Dall is happy and youthful, and the four President's sons are nice, clean, happy young American men, with the two youngest, John and Franklin, 16 and 18, still schoolboys. Washington looks forward with great [redacted] having these first boys of [redacted] with us, and we do hope [redacted] of the older members of [redacted] Post Writers' Club will be [redacted] them.

"Senators and representatives seem to be among those present," said the pilot, as they flew over the Capitol and saw many senators and representatives at work in their offices and in committee meetings doing all they can to be prepared to pass legislation for financial relief now the new Congress has convened.

"Of course, when their country calls all Americans are on guard," said the pilot. "I am proud of my countrymen. We see no long and gloomy faces. They all have their eyes to the front and their chins up, for there has been a bugle call to arms and all good Americans have answered it. Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah! for the United States of America and all the great opportunities it gives to our citizens and the protection, too." So enthusiastic had the pilot become that he almost forgot to steer the airship clear of the Washington Monument.

"Well," said the editor, "there is a fine American on guard, too, standing by to come to the aid of the citizens of the United States if he can be of any service," as they looked into hotel suite in New York from the airship and saw former President Hoover busy at a telephone doing his bit to help President Roosevelt and his new Cabinet and all the people of the United States in the best way he could.

"Well, it just proves the old adage, 'United we stand and divided we fall,' in a national crisis," said the pilot.

Then across the ocean they flew to England and at an airport near London they caught a sight of the start of the airplane group by the Marquis of Clydendale ready for the flight over Mount Everest in the Himalayas.

On and on they flew, until the airship was over Shanhaikwan in China, and looked down on the novel sight of Japanese soldiers riding donkeys through the south gate of the Great Wall.

Visiting Children And Teachers Ask About Movement

Many boys and girls who came from other cities for inaugural week came into the Knighthood of Youth headquarters in The Washington Post Building over the inaugural weekend to find out all about this splendid organization of boys and girls under 12 years of age.

If the boys and girls from other cities are so interested in becoming members certainly every boy and girl in Washington under 12 should want to be members, too, especially with The Washington Post, the Capital's greatest newspaper, the sponsor of the organization in this community.

Some teachers and parents from other cities came in and we wished that we could have had teachers and parents in Washington present to tell them how much good the Knighthood of Youth has done for the boys and girls under 12 in their charge.

So all of you who are not members decide to become members of the Knighthood of Youth this spring, writing in to The Junior Post, or, better still, come in.

High Ideals Urged As Necessary to Succeed in Life

High ideals are necessary for a good member of the Knighthood of Youth. Even if you are not able to reach the height of your ideals, the fact that you have these ideals will help you and make the boys and girls who belong to the Knighthood of Youth and all other boys and girls more successful as men and women when they grow up.

Boys and girls and men and women must have ideals just as nations must have them. The greatest nations of the world are those that have high ideals. They are the nations with which other nations wish to have dealings. That is also true of boys and girls. Your parents are eager to have you play with boys and girls who have ideals as high as your own. If they do not have them parents worry and your parents feel that these boys and girls are not good companions for you.

Andrew Jackson.

There are few who are so poor that can raise themselves to such a great dignity and honor and admiration as Andrew Jackson.

Andrew Jackson was the son of poor parents. He was born on the borders of North Carolina in 1767 and lived in a small hut in the scrubby pine woods. He was red-haired, freckled face, tall and thin.

When he was a child he went to a rude log school house. All he learned was a little reading, writing, and he heard much about how the British were putting taxes on the people. He was only 9 when Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence.

At 18 he became a lawyer. In 1787 he was admitted to the bar.

He did a great part in the War of 1812, especially in the battle of New Orleans. He is sometimes called "Old Hickory."

To think of Jackson's early boyhood days in 1829 no one would ever expect to find this backwoods man, as Jackson was, the seventh President of the United States. He served two terms, and when he died left a name that will be handed down in history for centuries. CATHERINE FISH.

A Scene.

The sky is a vivid blue. The green grass, with a wild colorful flower sprinkled about, is beautiful A bubbling brook runs swiftly along, making a gurgling sound as it is bothered by plants on either side of the banks. In the foreground stands a large white house, while in the background there are large, green trees. The green of these trees is darker than that of the grass. This makes it all the more beautiful. Except for the gurgling sound of the brook, all is quiet and serene.

Suddenly thunder roars. The sky that was so beautiful now becomes dark. Lightning flashes across the sky and rain comes down in torrents. The tall trees sway, the grass is beaten into the ground by the rain and the brook is overflowing. Everything is so different now. Only one thing remains the same. The tall white house still stands tall and sedately unconscious of what is going on. BARBARA BARNES (age 12).

THE STORY BOOK LADY

"I just think it is a splendid idea of the Story Book Lady to think of having the bluebird of happiness for the symbol of the Story Book Land pilgrims," said Pauline as she hurried along with Alice to join the Story Book Lady and the members of the Knighthood of Youth and Junior Post Writers' Club for the weekly pilgrimage to Story Book Land. "She sent us all notices, and mother says she will paint a nice picture of a bluebird for my room. Mother is quite an artist."

"Well," said Margaret, "we are going to have the bluebird for our model in our school next week. The drawing teacher heard of the symbol and arranged to have this subject for our lesson."

"I am glad you like the idea," said the Story Book Lady to all the group of boys and girls who gathered about her in the park to tell her how much they liked her idea and their plans for carrying it out.

"My grandsons have been looking through their books until they have found some nice pictures of bluebirds," said Mr. Gnome, who keeps the gate of the Fairy Tale Bridge that leads to Story Book Land. "Yes, indeed, Blick, Flick and Little Mick are really delighted with the idea."

"I am so glad," said the Story Book Lady as she hurried through the gateway followed by the members of The Junior Post Writers' Club and the Knighthood of Youth, leaving Mr. Gnome and his three grandsons, Blick, Flick and Mick all standing in a row and making deep bows with their green hats with scarlet feathers on them.

"Oh, look! Oh, look!" said Little Lillian. "The Story Book Fairy and Merry and Jolly, the Story Book Fairy Children, are all riding on blue birds of happiness. What pretty, pretty ones they do have in Story Book Fairy Land."

"Oh, yes," said the Story Book Fairy flying about on her bluebird airplane. "The Queen thought you would like to see them."

"I think Mrs. Anna Dall, the President's daughter, must have a bluebird of happiness of her own and her pretty children, too; they all seem so happy."

"Speaking of daughters," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses; "I was told to watch for a book on daughters. Oh, here it is," and she led the way to a book street. "Let me see, 'Daughters Known to Fame,' by Lena C. Ahler, with illustrations by Estelle Frantz (Albert Whitman & Co., Chicago). All about great daughters, Susan B. Anthony, Louisa Alcott and lots of others."

"Oh, and have you been down this book street?" said Anna. "It is lots of cities."

"So it is, dear," said the Story Book Lady, hurrying up and putting on her magic glasses. "Let me see. It is called 'Minute Glimpses of American Cities,' by Herbert S. Kates, with illustrations by the author. Of course, it is easy to tell what it is and how interesting is does look. It is published by Grosset & Dunlop, New York."

Daddy.

In winter he fixes the furnace,
He shovels the snow from the ground,
He pays for our coats, scarfs and mittens;
He's one of the best persons 'round.

In springtime he's most energetic;
He takes us for rides in the parks;
He works in the garden in springtime;
He's usually gayer than larks.

In summer he waters the terrace;
He uses the lawn mower, too.
He only works part time in summer,
When he does it's for me and for you.

In autumn he rakes up the dry leaves;
He brings games and toys to us, too.
On Thanksgiving Day I am thankful
To have such a Daddy. Aren't you?

Mrs. Maria Hazard, pioneer Rhode Island woman of 200 years ago, lived to mourn the deaths of 295 of her direct descendants. Big families, in those days of cheap land, were an economic advantage to the New Englander, and the Hazard family was no exception. Maria Hazard, whose descendants number at least 500 children, grandchildren, and descendants into the fifth generation, lived to be 100 years old.

At the time of her death she had 205 living descendants. One of her granddaughters had been a grandmother for 15 years when Mrs. Hazard died.

In this day of air, rail and motor travel the stagecoach seems nothing more than a memory of an era in American history that has passed. This may be true—but the stagecoach is still with us. In Walnut, California, Capt. William Banning, son of the founder of the Banning stage lines, makes a regular daily run on his 25-mile route, weather permitting.

Strange as it seems, Captain Banning has not had a paying passenger on his outmoded line in 40 years. The old coach, and harness decorations, are the same that were used by the original line.

One of the strange habits of farmers in some rural parts of China, is the method used to carry produce to market. The roads are so rough or muddy, as the case may be, that wagons are impractical. The farmer uses a stick over his shoulder—one end supports the basket of produce, and on the other he hangs a heavy rock to balance it.
